

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Opera in America

The opera has at last come into its own in the United States. In former years merely the pastime of the well-to-do in New York City and vicinity, grand opera is now enjoyed for its own sake by millions of hearers throughout the country. Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, New Orleans, San Francisco and Montreal now have their regular opera season; while many other cities have arranged for occasional performances.

The Victor Responsible for Much of this Awakened Interest

During the recent season several hundred performances of grand opera, at an estimated cost of millions of dollars, were given in the United States. This great outlay for dramatic music alone would not have been possible had it not been for the increased interest aroused in opera by the wide-spread distribution by the Victor during the past ten years of hundreds of thousands of grand opera records, at widely varying prices—from the double-faced records by well-known Italian and French artists of Europe, at 37½ cents per selection, to the great concerted numbers by famous singers at $6.00 and $7.00.

The Opera-Goer and the Victor

Even though fortunate enough to be able to attend the opera, the lover of operatic music is reminded that with the Victor and the operatic records his enjoyment of the opera may be greatly increased. The favorite singers may be heard at home as often as desired, and their voices will be just as natural as in life.

Do you think Caruso the greatest of tenors? Then do not be satisfied with an occasional hearing of his glorious voice at the opera, but let him sing for you and your friends by means of the Victor.

Is Sembrich, Farrar, Tetrazz'ni, Gadski, Calvé, Schumann-Heink, Homer or Amato your favorite singer? The Victor makes it possible to hear these voices at any time, no matter where the artists may be singing.

Voices of Absent Singers

Do you regret that Melba is in Australia? There is consolation in the thought that her voice is here in all its loveliness, indelibly impressed on Victor discs.

Have you memories of Tamagno when he was at his best? The Victor will revive these memories for you by bringing the voice of this singer back from the grave.

The Victor an Excellent Substitute for the Opera

For every person who can attend the opera there are a hundred who cannot. However, many thousands of lovers of the opera in the latter class have discovered what a satisfactory substitute the Victor is, for it brings the actual voices of the great singers to the home, with the added advantage that the artist will repeat the favorite aria as many times as may be wished, while at the opera one must usually be content with a single hearing; and even though the scenery and costumes may be lacking, the absence of these accessories will now be atoned for in some measure by the graphic descriptions and numerous illustrations in this catalogue.

The Victor Opera Season Never Ends

In former years, after the close of the opera season and the annual migration of the artists to Europe, no one seemed to think much about grand opera or opera singers. The Victor, however, has changed all this, and operatic records now form a most important part of the musical life in the home; and at all seasons of the year may be heard the voices of the great singers, a consolation and a delight to opera lovers.

This Catalogue the First of Its Kind

This little work is unique in many respects, and while there are many excellent books describing the plots of the operas, we think that in no other book on opera can be found all of these features:

- Titles in various languages, with pronunciation of each.
- Date and place of original production.
- Date and place of first performance in America.
- Cast of characters and pronunciation of the same when necessary.
- I Brief and clearly stated synopsis of plots of seventy different operas.
- Translations (all or part) of the text of several hundred separate numbers.
- TEvery act and scene indicated, with description of the stage setting.
- ¶ Every separate number mentioned in its proper place in the opera, and the numbers placed in the order in which they occur.
- ¶ More than three hundred portraits and pictures, making it the most completely illustrated book on opera ever published.

NOTE—Acknowledgment must be made to Oliver Ditson Co. and G. Schirmer for kind permission to quote occasionally from their copyrighted publications. Both these houses have set new standards with heir operatic publications—Schirmer with superbly printed opera scores and collections of opera airs entitled "Operatic Anthology"; and Ditson with the Musicians Library, masterpieces of music typography.

OPERA IN FIVE ACTS

Text by Scribe; music by Meyerbeer. First produced at the Académie, Paris, April 28, 865. First London production in Italian, under the French title, at Covent Garden, July 22, 865; and in English at the Royal English Opera, Covent Garden, October 21, 1865. First New York production December 1, 1865. Revived in 1906 at the Metropolitan, with Caruso, remstad, Plançon and Journet.

Characters in the Opera HIGH PRIEST OF BRAHMA (Brah'-mah) Basso VASCO DI GAMA, (Vahs'-ko dee Gah'-mah) an officer in the Portuguese Navy, Tenor Chorus of Counsellors, Inquisitors, Sailors, Indians and Attendant Ladies.

The action occurs in Portugal, on Don Pedro's ship at sea, and in India.

ACT I

The first scene occurs at Portugal, in the King's Council Chamber, whither Vasco di Gama has come to announce his discovery of a strange land, producing two of the native slaves, Selika and Nelusko, as proof.

In this scene is given the noble and stately chorus

Dio che la terra venera (Thou Whom the Universe Adores)

By La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *62614 10-inch, $0.75

in which the voices of the famous male chorus of La Scala are heard to great advantage.

Don Pedro, President of the Council, who wishes to marry Vasco's sweetheart, Inc., influences that body to discredit the explorer's tale and throw him into prison with his slaves. In the prison scene occurs this duet between Selika and di Gama.

Sei l'angiol diletto (Oh! Guardian Angel!)

By Tina Farelli, Soprano, and Gino Martinez-Patti, Tenor (In Italian) *62407 10-inch, $0.75

The slave, seeing her master's grief over his inability to find the route to the unknown country, reveals to him the location of the coveted land. Vasco, overcome with gratitude, embraces her.

ACT II

Inez consents to marry Don Pedro in order to save Vasco, who is released, but too late to prevent his enemy from sailing in search of the unknown land, carrying with him Vasco's private papers and maps as well as the two slaves, Selika and Nelusko. The latter, who loves Selika, has discovered her attachment for Vasco, and through jealousy offers to guide Don Pedro to his country. The young officer secures a ship and goes in pursuit.

ACT III

Preludio (Prelude to Act III)

By La Scala Orchestra *62614 10-inch, $0.75

Act III shows the decks of Don Pedro's vessel. Nelusko, who is secretly plotting to destroy the ship, is brooding over his plans; and his gloomy bearing being noticed by the sailors, they ask him to relate the old legend of Adamastor, king of the seas.

FAURE AS NELUSKO, 1865

Adamastor, Re dell' onde profonde (Ruler of Ocean)

By G. Mario Sammarco. Baritone By Francesco Cigada, Baritone

Nelusko:

Adamastor, monarch of the pathless deep, Swift o'er foaming waves

To sound of fierce winds tramping; When his dark steeds vex the mist covered Beware, mariner! Beware, mariner!

(In Italian) 88310 12-inch, (In Italian) *62407 10-inch,

When their breath on the gale rolls o'er the deep, Then beware, then beware!

See, the lightning's flash reveals to thine eye, How the dark waves seek the storm-laden sky. All hope now is lost,

For the doomed wretch no tomb, None, none but a watery grave!

A storm is threatened, and amid the preparations for resisting the elements a ship is seen, which proves to be dt Gama's. He rashly comes on board, is promptly seized by Don Pedro and is about to be executed, when Selika draws her dagger and threatens to kill Inex unless her lover is released. The tyrant reluctantly yields, but afterward orders Selika to be flogged. The storm breaks, and in its midst the ship is boarded by Indians, fellow-countrymen of Nelusko, and the entire ship's company are either killed or made prisoners.

ACT IV

Act IV represents the Temple of Brahma in the country of Selika and Nelusko. The act opens with the weird and striking Indian March, played here by the Herbert Orchestra.

The priests, who have crowned Selika their Oueen, announce the execution of all the prisoners except Vasco; and he too's condemned to die. The priests and people disperse and Vasco enters, guarded by soldiers. He is entranced with the beauty of this wonderful land, of which he had dreamed, and voices his admiration in the celebrated air. "O Paradiso.

Vasco: Ilail! fruitful land of plenty, beauteous garden, hail! An earthly paradise art thou! Oh azure sky, oh fragrant air All enchant my heart; Thou fair new world art mine! Thou fair new works and Thee, a radiant gift,
On my native land I'll bestow!
On my native land I'll bestow!
And the last! O beauteous country—mine thou art at last!
Yes—land till now unknown, thou'rt mine! yes, mine!

Caruso's singing of this famous air is a magnificent performance, while two other fine records are offered in both Italian and English. The soldiers are about to kill Vasco, but he is saved by Selika, who announces that he her chosen husband. Nelusko is forced to remain silent by threats that Selika will destroy Erself. Di Gama, forgetting Inez, yields to the spell and weds the Queen by the native rites.

ACT V—SCENE I

At the beginning of the last act, Inez, who had escaped from the prison, is captured and prought before the Oueen, who becomes convinced that di Gama still loves the Portuguese naiden. In a moment of generosity she sacrifices her own feelings and assists the lovers o escape.

ACT V-SCENE II

The final scene shows a promontory from which Selika is watching the ship bearing nez and di Gama toward Portugal. As the vessel disappears from view she advances oward the deadly mancanilla tree, the fumes of which are death.

SELIKA: Aye! here I look upon the mighty sea—bound-less—infinite

As is my woe! Its waves in angry fury break, and then anon their course renew,

As doth my sorrowing heart!
(Observing the mancanilla tree.)

Thou leafy temple, thou vault of foliage dark, That ceaseless way'st thy deadly branches in the wind,

After life's weary tumult I now come To seek repose of thee, and find oblivion from my woes, Yes! thy shade eternal is like the darkness of Sathering the fatal flowers, she inhales their perfume, sadly saying:

Farewell, my Vasco, I forgive thee!
(To the mancanilla tree)
"Tis said your dread perfume doth a joy inspire; Which for a moment yields unearthly joy, And then doth cause a sleep eternal!

She is overcome and sinks unconscious beneath the tree. Nelusko, who has come in search of her, finds her dying; and in a frenzy of grief, also inhales the deadly blossoms and falls lifeless by her side.

Priesta, Priestesses, Ministers, Captains, Soldiers, Officials, Ethiopian Slaves and Prisoners, Egyptians, etc.

The scene is laid in Memphis and Thebes, in Pharaoh's time.

This opera was written by request of the Viceroy of Egypt, who wished to celebrate opening of his new Opera House at Cairo by the production of a work upon an Egyptian ect from the pen of the most popular composer of the time. The story originated with ietta Bey, the famous Egyptologist, and seems to have inspired Verdi to unusual efforts.

Aida, daughter of Amonasro, King of Ethiopia, has been captured by the Egyptians and is a slave at the Court of Memphis, where she and the young soldier Rhadames have fallen in love with each other. Rhadames goes to the Egyptian war, and during his absence the King's daughter, Amneris, discovers his attachment and is furious, as she herself loves Rhadames.

Rhadames returns, covered with glory and bringing many prisoners, among them Amonasro, Aida's father. The King releases all the prisoners except Amonasro, and bestows his daughter on the unwilling Rhadames.

In the next scene Amonaso forces his daughter to persuade Rhadames to become a traitor. The latter's love for Aida and his distaste for the approaching union with Amneris lead to consent. Amneris, however, has overheard the plot, and after vainly trying to induce Rhadames to abandon Aida, she denounces him as a traitor, and he is condemned to be buried alive. When the vault is sealed he discovers Aida, who had concealed herself there that she might die with him; and the lovers slowly suffocate in each other's arms.

CARUSO AS RHADAMES

ACT I

SCENE 1—A Hall in the Palace. Through the grand gate at the back may be seen the Pyramids and the Temples of Memphis

The opera has no overture. The curtain rises, showing a hall in the palace of the King of Memphis, where Rhadames and the High Priest, Ramfis, are discussing the coming invasion of Ethiopia; and Ramfis hints that some young and brave warrior may be chosen to command the expedition. Rhadames, left alone, hopes that he himself may gain the coveted honor, and promises to lay his triumphs at the feet of his Aida.

Celeste Aida (Heavenly Aida)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor

(In Italian) 88127 12-inch, $3.00

By Leo Slezak, Tenor

(In German) 64113 10-inch, 1.00

Then occurs the splendid gem of Act I, the Celeste Aida, beginning in which Rhadames chants the praises of the peerless Aida. It is seldom enjoyed at the opera, especially in America, as it occurs almost immediately after the rise of the curtain, and is invariably marred by the noise made by late comers. With the Victor, however, it may be heard in all its beauty and the fine renditions by Caruso and Slezak fully appreciated.

SLEZAK AS RHADAMES

RHADAMES:
Heavenly Aida, beauty resplendent,
Radiant flower, blooming and bright;
Queenly thou reignest o'er me transcendent,
Bathing my spirit in beauty's light.

Would that thy bright skies once more beholding.
Breathing the soft airs of thy native land,
Round thy fair brow a diadem folding,
Thine were a throne next the sun to stand!

A fine trio, expressing the emotions of the characters in the scene, then follows.

Ohimé! di guerra fremere (Alas! the Cry of War I Hear)

By Elena Ruszcowska, Soprano; Bianca Lavin de Casas, Mezzo-Soprano; Egidio Cunego, Tenor (In Italian) 88261 12-inch, $3.00

The King's daughter, Amneris, enters, and seeing the young warrior's glowing enthusiasm, delicately hints of her secret affection for him, saying:

AMNERIS:
What unwonted fire in thy glance!
With what noble pride glows thy face!
Worthy of envy—oh, how much—
Would be the woman whose beloved aspect
Should awaken in thee this light of joy!

Rhadames begins to explain his hope of securing the command of the expedition, when Aida enters, and the young soldier's expressive glance reveals to Amneris his love for the Egyptian slave.

The King and his guards enter and receive a messenger, who reports that Egypt has been invaded by the Ethiopian army, under the command of Amonasro. "My father!" exclaims Aida aside.) Amid great excitement Rhadames is appointed leader of the army, and is presented with a banner by Amneris.

The King begins another trio, urging the Egyptian forces to guard with their lives the sacred Nile.

All depart to prepare for the expedition, while Aida, left alone, gives way to her grief and sings the beautiful Ritoma vincitor, expressing her conflicting emotions.

Ritorna vincitor (Return Victorious!) By Johanna Gadski, Soprano (In Italian) 88137 12-inch, $3.00

Return victorious! And from my lips

For me—to give me again
A country; a kingdom; and the illustrious name
Which here I am forced to conceal!
The insane word forget, O gods;
Return the daughter
To the bosom of her father;
Destroy the squadrons of our oppressors!...
What am I saying? And my love,
Can I ever forget
This fervid love which oppresses and enslaves,
As the sun's ray which now blesses me?
Shall I call death on Rhadames—
On him whom I love so much?
Ah! Never on earth was heart torn by more cruel agonies!

She gives way to her emotion for a brief moment, then sings the lovely and appealing

Amneris pretends to sympathize with the afflicted girl, saving:

AMNERIS:

The fate of arms was deadly to thy people. Poor Aida! The grief

Which weighs down thy heart I share! I am thy friend; Time will heal the anguish of thy heart,

And more than time—a powerful god—love.

Amneris, having thus by her pretended sympathy gained Aida's confidence, determines to betray her into a declaration of her love for Rhadames, and suddenly announces that he has been killed in battle. Aida, overcome with grief, reveals plainly that she loves the young soldier.

AMNERIS (aside):

This death-like pallor, this strong emotion, Plainly reveal the fever of love!

Amneris then throws off her mask of friendliness, and gloating in her victory, confesses that she has spoken falsely and that Rhadames lives.

Then, stung to fury by Aida's joy, she exclaims:

Ah, what have I said? forgive and pity,
Ah, let this my sorrow thy warm heart move.
'Tis true I adore him with boundless love— Thou art so happy, thou art so mighty, I cannot live hence from love apart!

AMNERIS:

Tremble, vile minion! be ye heartbroken, Warrant of death this love shall betoken! In the pomp which approaches,
With me. O slave, thou shall assist: Thou prostrate in the dust—
I on the throne beside the King; Come, follow me, and thou shalt learn If thou canst contend with me!

Ah, pity! What more remains to me?
My life is a desert;
This love which angers thee

Always a highly impressive number, this duet is doubly so when rendered by such famous exponents of the parts of Aida and Amneris. Mme. Gadski's Aida is one of her most effective rôles—splendidly acted and vocally perfect; while Mme. Homer's impersonation of the Egyptian Princess is always a thrillingly dramatic one.

The rendition by the two La Scala artists is one of the finest which has come to us from Milan.

SCENE II—Without the City Walls

The scene changes to a gate of the city of Thebes. The King and his court are assembled on a magnificent throne to receive the conquering army. A splendid chorus is sung by people and priests. The Egyptian troops, preceded by trumpeters, enter. followed by chariots of war, ensigns, statues of the gods, dancing girls carrying treasures, and finally Rhadames, under a canopy borne by twelve slaves.

KING (descending from the throne to embrace Rhadames):

Saviour of our country, I salute thee.
Come, and let my daughter with her own hand
Place upon you the triumphal crown.

(Rhadames bows before Amneris, who places the crown upon him.)
Now ask of me

What thou most wishest. Nothing denied to thee

On such a day shall be-I swear it By my crown, by the sacred gods!

The prisoners enter, including Amonasro, who is dressed as an officer. Atda sees him and cries, "What do I see! My father!" All are surprised, and Amonasro signals to Aida not to betray his rank. Amonaso then sings his recital:

AMONASRO:

I am her father. I went to war, Was conquered, and death I sought in vain. (Pointing to his uniform)
This habit I wear may tell you
That I have defended my king and my coun-

Fate was hostile to our arms; Vain was the courage of the brave! At my feet, in the dust extended, Lay the King, transfixed by many wounds; If the love of country is a crime We are all criminals—all ready to die! We are all criminals—all ready to die! (Turning to the King with a supplicating accent) But thou. O King, thou powerful lord, Be merciful to these men. To-day we are stricken by Fate, To-morrow Fate may smite thee!

The people and prisoners appeal to the King for mercy, while the priests demand that the captives be put to death. Rhadames, seeing the hesitation of the King, reminds him of his vow, and demands life and liberty for the captured Ethiopians. The King yields, stipulating only that Aida and her father be held as hostages, and then announces that Rhadames shall have the hand of Amneris as his reward.

The magnificent finale then follows, Aida and Rhadames gazing at each other in despair, Amneris glorying in her triumph, and Amonasro swearing secret vengeance against his captors. The curtain falls amid general rejoicing.

Three fine renditions of this air, one of the most effective in the opera, are given here by three celebrated prima donnas, all of whom have been seen in America in the part of Aida.

Amonasro appears and reproaches his daughter with her love for his enemy Rhadames, telling her with significant emphasis that she acer, pages may behold her native land again if she wishes.

Rhadames now enters and tries to embrace her, but she repulses him, saying bitterly:

Thou spouse of Amneris!

He protests that he loves Aida alone, but she bids him prove his affection by fleeing with her.

Where we may love united.
There, 'mid virgin forest groves,

He finally consents, and reveals to her that the army will go by the pass of Napata. Amonasro, who has overheard, now enters, and Rhadames is horrified at the knowledge that he has betrayed the army to the King of Ethiopia. His scruples are finally overcome, Amonasro saying:

The brave men devoted to us; There the vows of thy heart Shall be crowned with love.

Amneris, coming from the temple, pauses behind a pillar and overhears the final words. Mad with jealousy, she rushes in and denounces the guilty trio. Aida and Amonasro escape but Rhadames is taken in custody as a traitor.

SCENE I -A room in the Palace - on one side a door leading to Rhadames' prison cell

Earthly justice and Heaven's you are insulting, On the guiltless your sentence will fall! PRIESTS: (Departing slowly.)

This is one of the most impressive records of the Aida series. The despair of the wretched Amneris, and the solemn reply of the unbending priests are wonderfully expressed by Verdi.

Above. the temple full of light, where the ceremonies continue immutable in the sanctuary of the indifferent gods; below, two human beings dying in each other's arms. When we hear the expression "the duet from Aida," our thoughts always instinctively turn to this number at the close of the work. There are other duets in the opera, some of them fine numbers, but this is the great one—perhaps the most intensely dramatic and melodiously beautiful of all Verdi's writings.

BARBER OF SEVILLE

COMIC OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Text by Sterbini, a Roman poet, founded on the celebrated trilogy of Beaumarchais. Music by Rossini. First presented at the Argentina Theatre in Rome, February 5, 1816. First London production March 10, 1818. First New York production November 29, 1825. The opera was at first called "Almaviva, or the Useless Precaution," to distinguish it from Paisiello's "Barber of Seville."

Cast COUNT ALMAVIVA (Al-mah-vee'-vah) Tenor BARTOLO, (Bahr'-to-low) physician Bass ROSINA, his ward Soprano BASILIO, (Ba-zee'-lee-oh) music master Bass MARCELLINE (Mar-chel-le'-na) Soprano

Scene and Period: Seville, the seventeenth century.

Rossini's opera is a marvel of rapid composition, having been composed in about fifteen days! This seems almost incredible, but the fact is well authenticated. The composer had agreed to write two operas for the Roman carnival of 1816, the first of which was produced December 26, 1815, and on that day he was told that the second would be required on January 20, 1816. He agreed to have it completed, although he did not even know what the subject was! The libretto was given to him by Sterbini in sections, and he wrote the music as fast as the verses were furnished. While the opera did not achieve an instantaneous success, it gradually found favor with opera-lovers on account of its brightness and the manner in which the humor of its action is reflected in the music.

The plot of Barber of Seville is very simple. The Count Almaviva loves Rosina, the ward of Dr. Bartolo, a crusty old bachelor who secretly wishes to wed her himself. Almaviva persuades the village barber, Figaro, to arrange a meeting for him, and gains entrance to the house disguised as a dragoon, but is arrested by the guardian.

Not discouraged, he returns, pretending to be a substitute for Rosina's music teacher, who, he says, is ill. The appearance of the real Don Basilio spoils the plan, and the Count retreats for the second time, having, however, arranged a plan for elopement.

Bartolo finally arouses Rosina's jealousy by pretending that the Count loves another, and she promises to forget him and marry her guardian. When the time for the elopement arrives she meets the Count, intending to reproach him, but he convinces her of the base plot of Bartolo, and the lovers are arrest the Count.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Street in Seville. Day is Breaking

The Count, accompanied by his servant Florello and several musicians, enters to serenade the beautiful Rosing. Accompanied by the mandoling he sings his serenade. Ecco ridente. considered one of the most beautiful numbers in the opera.

Lo! smiling in the Orient sky, Morn in her beauty breaking, Canst thou, my love, inactive lie— My life, art thou not waking? Arise, my heart's own treasure, All that my soul holds dear; Oh! turn my grief to pleasure! Awake, my love, appear!

But, hush!—methinks I view that face, And all my doubts are vanished; Thine eyes diffuse soft pity's grace. And all my fears are banished. Oh, rapturous moment of delight! All other blisses shaming; My soul's content, so pure and bright, On earth no equal claiming!

Even such a lovely serenade as this fails to bring a response from the window, and the Count retires discomfited. Enter Figare, the jack-of-all-trades of the village and general factorum in the house of Bartolo, with his guitar. He sings that gayest and most difficult of all airs, the joy or despair of baritones the world over, and which has been recorded for the Victor by three famous baritones.

FIGARO: Room for the city's factorum here,

La, la, la, la, la.

I must be off to my shop, for the dawn is I must be off to my shop, for the dawn is near,
La, la, la, la, la, la.

La, la, la, la, la, etc.

CAMPANARI AS FIGARO

"Oh! what a happy life," soliloquizes the gay barber, "what pleasure awaits a barber of quality!—Oh, bravo, Figaro, bravo, bravissimo: thou art sure the happiest of men, ready at all hours of the night, and, by day, perpetually in bustle and motion. What happier region of delight; what nobler life for a barber than mine! Razors, combs, lancets, scissors—behold nobler life for a barber than mine! Razors, combs, lancets, scissors—behold them all at my command! besides the snug perquisites of the business, with gay damsels and cavaliers. All call me! all want me!—dames and maidens—old and young. My peruke! cries one—my beard! shouts another—bleed me! cries this—this billetdoux! whispers that. Figaro, Figaro! heavens, what a crowd. Figaro, Figaro! heavens, what a tumult! One at a time, for mercy sake! Figaro here: Figaro above: Figaro below. I am all activity: I am quick as lightning; in a word—I am the factotum of the town. Oh, what a happy life! but little fatigue—abundant amusement—with a pocket that can always boast a doubloon, the noble fruit of my reputation. But I must hasten to the shop!"

THE DISGUISED COUNT AND BARTOLO

Three fine records of this great air are given here. Ruffo, in his rendition, proves himself possessed of an admirable sense of humor, and this. with his powerful and flexible voice, enables him to attack this difficult solo in the true opérabouffe vein. The result is as fine a performance of the Large as one would wish to hear. The extreme difficulties are made a vehicle for the display of the baritone's ample vocal resources, which sweep everything before them; he is indeed a little free with the text, and sings snatches of the accompaniment out of sheer bravado, while bits of comic characterization peep out at every available opportunity. This rendition is a fine example of how the music of this air should be sung, and is a veritable triumph for the singer.

Signor de Gogorza's version differs from Ruffo's in many respects. It is one of the finest records he has made for the Victor, and exhibits his fine voice and wonderful execution to perfection.

The Count now returns and accosts Figure, asking him to arrange a meeting with Rosing.

telling him that his rank must not be known and that he has assumed the name of Lindor.

Figaro consents to become his ally. Rosina and her guardian come on the balcony, and Rosina, perceiving the Count, manages to drop a note, which he secures. Bartolo leaves the house and orders that no one be admitted.

Figaro now says that he is expecting a military friend to arrive in the village, and suggests the Count dress himself as this soldier and thus gain admittance to the house. He agrees, and retires to assume the disguise.

aria is full of charm, and is deservedly popular with those singers whose method enables them to deliver it with the requisite lightness and bravura.

ROSINA: A little voice I heard just now:
Oh, it has thrill'd my very heart!
I feel that I am wounded sore;
And Lindor 'twas who hurl'd the dart.
Yes, Lindor, dearest, shall be mine!
I've sworn it, and we'll never part.

My guardian sure will ne'er consent;
But I must sharpen all my wit:
Content at last, he will relent,
And we, oh, joy! be wedded yet.
Yes, Lindor I have sworn to love!
And, loving, we'll our cares forget.

^{*} Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED BARBER OF SEVILLE RECORDS, page 31.

A bewildering array of artists have essayed this charming song, and Victor audiences can choose whether they will have it sung by an Italian, Polish, Spanish or American prima donna.

Rosina runs out as her guardian and Don Basilio come in. Bartolo is telling Basilio that he wishes to marry his ward, either by love or force. Basilio promises to help him, and says that the Count is trying to make Rosina's acquaintance. They decide to invent some story that will disgrace him. "A calumny!" says Basilio. Bartolo asks what that is, and Basilio, in a celebrated air gives his famous description, which is a model of its kind.

La calunnia (Slander's Whisper)

By Marcel Journet, Bass

(In Italian) 74104 12-inch, $1.50

Basilio: Oh! calumny is like the sigh Of gentlest zephyrs breathing by; How softly sweet along the ground. Its first shrill voice is heard around. Then passing on from tongue to tongue, It gains new strength, it sweeps along In giddier whirl from place to place, And gains fresh vigor in its race; Till, like the sounds of tempests deep, That thro' the woods in murmurs sweep And howl amid their caverns drear, It shakes the trembling soul with fear. Thus calumny, a simple breath, Engenders ruin, wreck and death; And sinks the wretched man forlorn, Beneath the lash of slander torn, The victim of the public scorn! (They go out.)

SEMBRICH AS BOSINA

Rosina and Figaro return, and the barber tells her that her guardian is planning to marry her. She laughs at the idea, and then asks Figaro who the young man was she observed that morning. Figaro tells her his name is Lindor, and that he is madly in love with a certain young lady, whose name is Rosina.

FIGARO: Poor man, he but awaits some sign Of your affection and assent; A little note, a single line, And he himself will soon present. To this, what say you? Rosina: I do not know. FIGARO: Take courage, pray you.

Much fitter that she me should school: What a fool (astonished) Her wits, than mine, can flow much faster. Oh, woman, woman, who can find, Or fathom, all that's in thy mind? (Exit Figaro.)

Bartolo comes in and accuses Rosina of dropping a note from the balcony, and when she denies it he shows her ink marks on her finger and calls attention to a cut pen and a missing sheet of paper. She says she wrapped up some sweetmeats to send to a girl friend, and cut the pen to design a flower for her embroidery. Bartolo then denounces her in another famous air:

Bartolo:

To a doctor of my rank,
These excuses, Signorina,
I advise another time
That you better should invent.
Why is the paper missing?
That I would wish to know.
Useless, ma'am, are all your airs—
Be still, nor interrupt me so.
Another time, sweet Signorina,
When the doctor quits his house
He will carefully provide
For the keeping you inside.
And poor innocent Rosina,
Disappointed, then may pout:
In her room shall she be locked,
Till I choose to let her out.
(He goes out in a rage, followed by Rosina, who is laughing.)

A loud knocking is heard at the street door,—it is the Count in his soldier disguise. He pushes his way in, and insists that the commandant has ordered him to put up in Bartolo's house. A long scene follows, full of comedy, finally ending in the arrest of the Count, who, however, privately informs the officer who he is; and the astonished official salutes respectfully and takes his soldiers away. Bartolo is in such a rage that he can hardly speak, and the act ends with the famous quartet:

ACT II

SCENE-A Room in Bartolo's House

Bartolo is discovered musing on the affair of the soldier, and as he has learned that no one in the regiment knows the man, he suspects that he was sent by the Count.

A knocking is heard and the Count is ushered in dressed as a music master. He greets Bartolo, beginning the duet, Pace e giola.

Bartolo says he is much obliged for these kind wishes and wonders who this can be. The Count explains that Don Basilto is ill and he has come in the music master's place to give Rosina a lesson. He shows Bartolo the note Rosina had written, saying he found it at the inn, and offers to make Rosina believe the Count has shown her note to another lady. Bartolo is pleased with the idea and calls Rosina. Then occurs the celebrated "Lesson Scene" in which Rosina usually interpolates an air. Rossini wrote a trio for this scene, but in some manner it was lost.

Figaro now comes in to shave Bartolo, and in the course of the scene contrives to secure the key to the balcony. At this moment all are petrified at the entrance of Don Basilio, who is supposed to be confined to his bed. Figaro sees that quick action is necessary and asks him what he means by coming out with such a fever. "Fever?" says the astonished music master. "A raging fever," exclaims Figaro, feeling his pulse. "You need medicine," says the Count, meaningly, and slips a fat purse in his hand. Don Basilio partially comprehends the situation, looks at the purse and departs.

The shaving is renewed, and Rosina and the Count pretend to continue the lesson, but are really planning the elopement. Bartolo tries to watch them, but Figaro manages to get soap in the Doctor's eye at each of his efforts to rise. He finally jumps up and denounces on Bartolo now desperately plays his last card, and shows Rosing the note, saving that ver is conspiring to give her up to the Count Almaviva. Rosina is furious and offers to Bartolo at once, telling him that he can have Lindor and Figure arrested when they for the elopement. Bartolo goes after the police, and he is barely out of sight when and the Count enter by means of the key which the barber had secured. Rosina them with a storm of reproaches, accusing Lindor of pretending to love her in order to e her to the vile Count Almaoiva. The Count reveals himself and the lovers are soon d in a fond embrace, with Figure in a "Bless you, my children," attitude.

Don Basilio, who had been sent for a notary by Bartolo, now arrives. The Count demands that the notary shall wed him to Rosing. Basilio protests, but the sight of a pistol in the Count's hand soon silences him.

This scene is rudely interrupted by the arrival of Bartolo and the soldiers. The officer in charge demands the name of the Count, who now introduces Signor and Signora Almaviva to the company. Bartolo philosophically decides to make the best of the matter. However. he inquires of Basilio:

BARTOLO:

Scene and Period: Paris, about 1830.

Puccini's Bohême is an adaptation of part of Mürger's La Vie Bohême, which depicts life in the Quartier Latin, or the Students' Quarter, in 1830. It being impossible to weave a complete story from Mürger's novel, the librettists have merely taken four of the principal scenes and several of Mürger's characters, and have strung them together without much regard for continuity.

The principal characters in Puccini's delightful opera are the inseparable quartet described by Murger, who with equal cheerfulness defy the pangs of hunger and the landlord of their little garret. In the scenes of careless gaiety is interwoven a touch of pathos; and the music is in turn lively and tender, with a haunting sweetness that is most fascinating.

Rudolph, a poet; Marcel, a painter; Colline, a philosopher; and Schaunard, a musician, are four friends who occupy an attic in the Quartier Latin, where they live and work together. Improvident, reckless and careless, these happy-go-lucky Bohemians find a joy in merely living, being full of faith in themselves.

ACT I

SCENE—A Garret in the Quartier Latin

The opening scene shows the four friends without money or provisions, yet happy. Marcel is a work on a painting, "Passage of the Red Sea," and remarks, beginning a duet with Rudolph, that the passage of this supposedly torrid sea seems a very cold affair!

Rudolph says that in order to keep them from freezing he will sacrifice the bulky manuscript of his tragedy. Marcel holds the landlord at bay until Schaunard arrives with an unexpected store of eatables. Having dined and warmed themselves, Marcel, Colline and Schaunard go out, leaving Rudolph writing. A timid knock at the door reveals the presence of Mimi, a young girl who lives on the floor above. She has come to ask her neighbor for a light for the candle, which has gone out. They enter into conversation, and when Mimi artlessly asks Rudolph what his occupation is, he sings the lovely air usually termed the "Narrative."

Caruso has never done anything more perfect in its way than his superb delivery of this number. It is one of his great scenes in the opera, and always arouses the audience to a nigh pitch of enthusiasm. He has sung it here with a fervor and splendor of voice which solds one spellbound. The tender sympathy of the opening—"Your little hand is cold"; be bold avowal—"I am a poet"; the glorious beauty of the love motive at the end—all re given with characteristic richness and warmth of style by this admired singer, while the inal high note is brilliantly taken.

An entirely different interpretation, though also a very fine one, is given by Mr. McCormack, while three other versions—in Italian by Constantino and Hamlin, and in inglish by Evan Williams—complete a list in which every lover of this beautiful air can find a record to suit his taste and purse.

"Mimi's delicate perfection enchanted the young poet—especially ner little hands, which in spite of her menial work, she managed to eep as white as snow."—Murger's La Vie de la Bohême.

This lovely duet occurs just after the Mi chiamano Mimi. The young girl having finished her story, Rudolph hears the houts of his friends in the courtyard below. He opens the vindow to speak to them, letting in a flood of moonlight which brightens the room. The Bohemians go off singing. As Rudolph turns to Mimi and sees her in the moonlight, he is struck with her beauty, and tells her how entrancing she appears to him.

Love awakens in the heart of the lonely girl, and in this beautiful duet she pledges her faith to the handsome stranger who has come into her life.

Mme. Melba's singing in this scene is of exquisite beauty, while Caruso's delivery of the passionate phrases of Rudolph is superb. The beautiful motive with which the duet begins is associated throughout the opera with the presence of Mimi, and is employed with touching effect in the death scene in Act III.

Mimi consents to go to the Café Momus, where his friends are to dine, and after a tender scene at the door they go out, and the curtain slowly falls.

ACT II

SCENE-A Students' Café in Paris

This act represents the terraces of the Café Momus, where the artists are holding a carnival. Puccini has pictured with masterly skill the noisy, bustling activity of this scene, and the boisterous merriment of the gay revelers. The Bohemians of Act I are seated at a table with Mimi, when Musetta, an old flame of Marcel's, appears with her latest conquest, a foolish and ancient beau named Alcindoro. Marcel pretends not to see her, but Musetta is determined on a reconciliation, and soon gets rid of her elderly admirer and joins her old friends.

The gem of this gay scene is the charming waltz of Musetta, which Mme. Viafora sings here with spirit and delightful abandon.

ACT III

SCENE—A City Gate of Paris

This act begins in the cheerless dawn of a cold morning at the city gates, the bleakness of the scene being well expressed in Puccinis music. The snow falls, workmen come and go, shivering and blowing on their cold fingers. Mimi appears, and asks the officer at the gate if

THE DEATH OF MIMI

ACT IV

SCENE-Same as Act I

"At this time, the friends for many weeks had lived a lonely and melancholy existence. Musetta had made no sign, and Marcel had never met her, while no word of Mimi came to Rudolph, though he often repeated her name to himself. Marcel treasured a little bunch of ribbons which had been left behind by Musetta, and when one dayshe detected Rudolph gazing fondly at the pink bonnet Mimi had forgotten, had muttered: 'It seems I am not the only one!'"—Murger.

Act IV shows the same garret in which the events of Act I took place. Bereft of their sweethearts, the young men are living sad and lonely lives, each trying to conceal from the other that he is secretly pining for the absent one.

In the opening scene, Marcel stands in front of his easel pretending to paint, while Rudolph, apparently writing, is really furtively gazing at Mimi's little pink bonnet.

BIZET

Georges Bizet was a native of Paris, where he was born on October 25, 1838. Like Gounod and Berlioz, he won the Prix de Rome (Pree de Roam'); in this case in 1857, the year that his first opera, Docteur Miracle, was produced. Among other productions came Les Pecheus de Perles, in 1863, an opera recently revived at Covent Garden with Mme. Tetrazzini as Leila. Carmen was produced in 1875, and this most Parisian of all operatic works was received at its production with a storm of abuse. It was immoral, it was Wagnerian—the latter at that time being a deadly sin in France! Nevertheless, the supreme merits of Carmen have won it a place among the two or three most popular operas in the modern repertory.

The talents of Bizet are shown by his remarkable lyric gifts; the power of writing short, compact and finished numbers, full of exquisite beauty and convincing style, at the same time handling dramatic scenes with the freedom demanded by modern opera. His music is more virile, concentrated and stimulating than perhaps any other French composer.

It was probably not a little owing to the hostile reception of this, his finest work, that its composer died three months later. The music Bizet has written, however, is likely long to survive him, and chief among the works into which he ungrudgingly poured his life's energy was Carmen.

THE PLOT

T

Carmen has its opening scene in a public square in Seville, showing at one side a guardhouse, where Jose, a young brigadier, keeps guard. Micaela, a peasant girl whom he loved in his village home, comes hither to seek him with a message from his mother. As Jose appears, the girls stream out from the cigarette factory hard by, and with them their leading spirit in love and adventure, Camen, the gypsy, reckless and bewitching. Heedless of the pressing throng of suitors, and attracted by the handsome young soldier, Camen throws him a flower, leaving him dazed and bewildered at her beauty and the fascinating flash of her dark eyes. A moment later a stabbing affray with a rival factory girl leads to the gypsy's arrest, and she is placed in the care of Jose himself. A few more smiles and softly-spoken words from the fascinating Camen, and he is persuaded to allow her to escape. There is a sudden struggle and confusion—the soldier lets go his hold—and the bird has flown!

II

Act II takes place in the tavern of Lillas Pastia, a resort of smugglers, gypsies and questionable characters generally. Here arrives Escamillo, the toreador, amid the acclamations of the crowd, and he, like the rest, offers his homage to Carmen. Meanwhile, the two smugglers, Dancairo and Remendado, have an expedition afoot and need Carmen to accompany them. But she is awaiting the return of the young soldier, who, as a punishment for allowing her to escape, had gone to prison, and she will not depart until she has seen him. The arrival of Jose leads to an ardent love scene between the two. Carmen dances her wild gypsy measures before him; yet, in the midst of all, he hears the regimental trumpets sounding the retreat. While Carmen bids him remain and join her, the honor of a soldier urges him to return. The arrival of his captain, who orders him back, decides Jose. He defies his officer, who is bound by the smugglers, and Jose deserts his regiment for Carmen.

TTI

The next scene finds Jose with the smugglers in the rocky camp in the mountains. The career of a bandit, however, is one to which a soldier does not easily succumb. His distaste offends Camen, who scornfully bids him return home, she also foreseeing, in gypsy fashion, with the cards, that they will end their careers tragically together. In the midst of this strained situation two visitors arrive: Escamillo, the toreador, in the character of a new suitor for Camen; and Micaela, with a message from Jose's dying mother. The soldier, frustrated in his attempt to kill Escamillo, cannot resist the girl's appeal and departs, promising to return later for his revenge.

The final act takes place outside the Plaza de Toros, at Seville, the scene of Escamillo's triumphs in the ring. Carmen has returned here to witness the prowess of her new lover, and is informed by her friends that Jose, half crazed with jealousy, is watching, capable of desperate deeds. They soon meet, and the scene between the maddened soldier and the gypsy is a short one. The jealous Jose appeals to her to return to him, but she refuses with scorn, although she knows it means death. In a rage Jose stabs her, and thus the end comes swiftly, while within the arena the crowd is heard acclaiming the triumph of Escamillo.

Prelude (Overture)

By La Scala Orchestra By La Scala Orchestra

*68052 12-inch. $1.25 10-inch.

The Prelude to Carmen opens with a quick march in 2-4 time, on the following theme:

The march is of an exceedingly virile and fiery description and is taken from the music preceding the bull-fight in the last act. Following this stimulating march comes the "Toreador's Song," leading to the march theme again. These two sections, complete in themselves, are now followed by a short movement in triple time indicating the tragic conclusion of the drama. Here, the appealing notes of the brass, heard beneath the tremolo of the strings, gives poignant expression to the pathos which lies in the jealous love of the forsaken Jose, and expresses the menace of the future death of Carmen. This movement breaks off on a sudden detached chord of the diminished seventh as the curtain rises.

ACT I

SCENE-A Public Square in Seville

The curtain rises on a street in Seville, gay with an animated throng. In the foreground are the military guard stationed in front of their quarters. The cigarette factory lies to the right, and a bridge across the river is seen in the background.

Among the crowd which throngs the stage a young girl may be seen searching for a familiar face. It is Micaela. the maiden whom lose has left behind in his native village. The soldiers accost her, and from them she learns of her lover's absence. She declines the invitation to remain, and departs hastily.

The cigarette girls now emerge from the factory, filling the air with the smoke of their cigarettes, and with them Carmen, who answers the salutations of her admirers among the men by singing the gay Habanera.

This charming "Habanera" has always been a favorite Carmen number, its entrancing rhythm always being delightful to the ear; and it does not seem strange that Don Jose found it irresistible when sung by Carmen.

Though often attributed to Bizet, the air was not original with him, but was taken from Yradier's "Album des Chansons Espagnoles." The refrain, is a particularly fascinating portion of the number.

To a large number of opera-goers and music-lovers there is but one emotional soprano -but one exponent of such rôles as Carmen and Santuzza. Calvé's Carmen, especially, is almost universally accepted as the greatest of all impersonations of the rôle.

Gerville-Réache's Carmen is a fine impersonation, on quite original lines, her conception being based on a careful study of Mérimée's story and on the teachings of her Spanish mother. Carmen, according to Mme. Gerville-Réache, was a passionate and fickle woman, but not a vulgar one.

The men invite Carmen to choose a new lover. and in reply she flings a flower in the face of the surprised Jose and laughingly departs.

THE INN OF PASTIA-ACT II

Although lose save to himself that the girl is only amusing herself, and whiling away the time with her gypsy songs, the words which fall on his ear-of a meeting-place on the ramparts of Seville—of a soldier she loves—a common soldier, all these play upon the feelings of Jose and rouse in him a love for the changeful gypsy, who is fated to be the cause of his downfall.

He unties her hands, and when the soldiers are conducting her to prison she pushes Jose, who falls, and in the confusion she escapes.

Between Acts I and II is usually played a charming entracte. which has been rendered for this Carmen series by Mr. Herbert.

This is one of the favorite numbers in Bizet's opera, and at the same time one of the most difficult imaginable. When sung as the tempo indicates, it goes at break-neck speed, and it is only the most capable artists who can do it justice.

For the present reproduction, the Victor has assembled a most competent corps of singers, who were under the direction of the late Charles Gilibert, himself the most famous of Remendados.

Jose's voice being heard outside, Carmen pushes her companions from the room and greets him with joy. She then tries her fascinations on the stolid soldier to induce him to join the band of smugglers, but without effect, as he is reminded of his duty when he hears the bugle in the distance summoning him to quarters. "Then go, I hate you!" says Carmen, and mocks him, singing

Ah, this is too mortifying!

From Schirmer score. Copy't G. Schirmer

The number might have been written expressly for Caruso, so well does it suit his voice and style. One can but marvel at the masterful ease of phrasing, and the warmth of vocal coloring imparted by the singer. The changing moods of the lover are here indicated with dramatic expression—the regret at the havoc Camen has played with his life mingling with the devotion for her he still feels. This is a remarkable and memorable performance, the whole song being lighted up with that rich vocal beauty and artistic genius which belong only to a Caruso.

McCormack also makes a fine impression in this rôle, and his singing of this famous Flower Song is always greeted with enthusiasm. Dalmores' interpretation is more vigorous one, his fine voice being shown at its best. Other fine renditions, at varying prices, in both Italian and English, are also offered.

Carmen then paints the joys of the gypsies' life which might be Jose's, if he would desert his regiment and follow her.

To the mountains, together we'll go.

Jose:

Up yonder, up yonder, thus will we go
Away, if thou lov'st me, together!

However, in spite of Carmen's fascinations, Jose is about to return to his duty, when the appearance of his superior officer Zuniga, who orders him back, decides the matter. Don Jose resents the overbearing tone his captain uses and defies him. Zuniga is finally overpowered and bound by the gypsies, and the smugglers all depart on their expedition.

The retreat in the mountains is musically described by this pastoral intermezzo. A dreamy melody given to the flute, with a pizzicato accompaniment, is taken up by the other instruments in turn, the strings joining in the coda.

This is one of the finest records made by the Herbert Orchestra, who have given an artistic and finished rendering of the interlude.

SCENE—A Wild and Rocky Pass in the Mountains

As the curtain rises, the smugglers are seen entering their rocky lair. Here occurs the famous sextette, a portion of which is given in the "Gems from Carmen" (page 51).

The smugglers prepare to camp for the night. It is evident that Jose is already repenting of his folly, and that Carmen is tiring of her latest lover. After a quarrel with Jose, she joins Frasquita and M cedes, who are telling fortunes with cards.

The neighboring camp being ready, the smugglers retire, and the stage is once more deserted.

The two men compare notes, and learning that they are rivals, Jose challenges the other to a duel with knives, which is interrupted by the timely arrival of Carmen herself. This dialogue, with the fiery duet at the close, well depicts this exciting scene.

The Dalmores-Journet record is of especial interest because of the brilliant success Mr. Dalmores has achieved in the part of Don Jose. Journet sings Escamillo's music splendidly, with that full resonant voice always pleasant to hear. A popular priced rendition by Beyle and Dufranne, of the Opéra, is also listed above.

Finale—"Mia tu sei" (You Command Me to Leave You) By Antonio Paoli, Tenor: Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano:

Inez Salvador, and Francesco Cigada

(In Italian) 92035 12-inch, $3.00 A dramatic scene between Carmen and Jose is interrupted by Micaela, who begs Jose to return to his mother; and Carmen, with fine scorn, echoes her request. Thus to leave his rival in possession of the field is too much for the soldier, who swears never to be parted from the gypsy until death.

CARMEN (to Jose) Go, and go quickly; stay not here; This way of life is not for thee! Jose (to Carmen): To depart thou dost counsel me? CARMEN: Yes, thou shouldst go—
Jose (fiercely):
Yes, that thou mayst follow Another lover—the toreador! No, Carmen, I will not depart!

MICHAELA: Be not deaf to my prayers; Thy mother waits thee there.
The chain that binds thee, Jose,
Death will break.
Jose (to Michaela): Go from hence; I cannot follow thee. (To Carmen.) Mine thou art, accursed one!
And I will force thee to know
And submit to the fate
That both our lives unites!

The message from his dying mother, however, decides him; he will go, but vows to return. In this wild and tumultuous number the jealous anger of Jose gives rise to some highly dramatic singing, delivered with extreme intensity and power by Paoli, the tragic theme at the close being introduced with meaning effect. The Toreador chorus indicates the triumph of Escamillo in the gypsy's attentions, and this with the orchestral close slowly sinking to rest brings the powerful act to a finish.

JOSE PLEADING WITH CARMEN-ACT IV

ACT IV

(A Square in Seville, with the walls of the Bull Ring shown at the back)

Prelude

By Victor Herbert's Orchestra 70066 12-inch. $1.25

The fourth act opens with a momentary brightness. Outside the Plaza de Toros, in Seville, an animated crowd awaits the procession about to enter the ring. This short movement is a quick bustling one, only the plaintive oboe solo indicating the tragedy which is soon to occur. The playing of this striking prelude is on the same artistic level which marks each of the renditions by this famous orchestra.

This scene, as the orange sellers, hawkers of fans, ices and the rest, press their wares on the waiting crowd, is extremely gay, and affords welcome relief from the intensity of the drama.

Escamillo, who has returned to take part in the bull-fight, now enters, and all join in the refrain of the Toreador Song in his honor.

Se tu m'ami (If You Love Me)

By Inez Salvador, Mezzo-Soprano, and Francesco Cigada, Baritone
(Double-faced—See page 52) (In Italian) 62102 10-inch, $0.75

Escamillo takes farewell of Carmen before entering the arena. He promises to fight the better for her presence, and she, half conscious of what is coming, avows her readiness to die for him. This number is full of lovely melodies and one of the most beautiful records of the Carmen series.

As the procession passes on, the warning comes to Carmen that Jose is here, to which she replies that she fears him not.

THE DEATH OF CARMEN-ACT IV

Duetto e Finale (Duet and Finale)

By Maria Passeri, Mezzo-Soprano; Antonio Paoli, Tenor; and La Scala Chorus 92050 12-inch. $3.00

Jose now enters and makes a last appeal, which is dramatic in its intensity. It takes the form of a swinging melody to an insistent triplet accompaniment. To each request of her lover, Carmen adds her disdainful negative, reckless of the danger which threatens her.

Jose (in desperation):
Now thou refusest my prayers,
Inhuman girl! For thy sake am I lost!
And then to know thee shameless, infamous!
Laughing, in his arms, at my despair!
No, no! it shall not be, by Heaven!
Carmen, thou must be mine, mine only!
CARMEN (proudly):
No, no, never!
Jose:
Ah! weary am I of threats.
CARMEN:
Cease then,—or let me pass!
Chorus (in bull ring):
Victory! victory!
Viva Escamillo!
Jose:
Again I beseech thee, Carmen,
Wilt thou with me depart?

MARTIN AS DON JOSE

Carmen's last refusal, as she flings him back his ring, rouses the soldier's lealousy to madness and he stabs her to the heart.

As she falls the success of the Toreador in the arena is announced by the singing of his well-known refrain. The last notes of the opera are a few pitiful tones from the stricken Jose addressed to the mute form of his beloved.

This is another truly powerful record by Paoli, worthy of a climax such as this. The music is delivered with the realism and earnestness beyond the reach of all but the very few tenors, and it enables the listener to fully realize the stress and pathos of the moving dramatic picture which thus concludes the last act of Carmen.

THE COMPOSER

Pietro Mascagni, son of a baker in Leghorn, was born December 7, 1863. Destir his father to succeed him in business, the young man rebelled, and secretly entered Cherubini Conservatory. He began composing at an early age, but none of his wort tracted attention until 1890, when he entered a contest planned by Sonzogno, the publisher. Securing a libretto based on a simple stale by Verga, he composed the whole of this or eight days, producing a work full of dramatic fir rich in Italian melody, and easily won the prize. duced in Rome in 1890, it created a sensation, a a short time has become one of the most populoperas.

This beautiful chorus is rendered here both by the famous organization of La Scala, Milan, and the New York Grand Opera Chorus.

It is Easter Day and crowds of villagers cross the stage and enter the church. Santuzza enters, and knocking at Lucia's door, asks her if she has seen Tunddu. His mother replies that he is at Francofonte, but the jealous girl refuses to believe it, and suspects that he is watching for Lola.

The cracking of a whip and shouts of the villagers announce Alfio, who appears and sings a merry song.

He is happy and free, his wife Lola loves him and guards his home while he is gone—this is the burden of his air.

The peasants disperse and Alfio is left with Lucia and Santuzza. When he says he has just seen Turiddu, Lucia is surprised, but at a gesture from Santuzza she keeps silent.

After Alfio has entered the church, the Easter music is heard within and all kneel and join in the singing.

SANTUZZA:

Well do you know, good mother,
Ere to the war he departed
Turiddu plighted to Lola his troth,
Like a man true-hearted.
And then, finding her wedded
Loved me!—I loved him!—
She, coveting what was my only treasure—
Enticed him from me!
She and Turiddu love again!
I weep and I weep still!-

Three fine renditions of this dramatic number, by three fam sopranos, are offered to music lovers.

Lucia tries to comfort her and passes into the church jus Turiddu appears. He asks Santuzza why she does not go to m She says she cannot, and accuses him of treachery, which puts in a rage, and he tells her brutally that she is now nothing to l This great duet has been recorded in its entirety by two far artists of Milan.

In striking contrast to the prevailing tragic tone of Mascagni's opera comes this merry drinking song, which Turidda sings as gaily as if he had not a care in the world. although at that moment the culminating tragedy of the duel was close at hand. Turiddu calls to the crowd about the inn:

then sings the Brindisi, which has a most fascinating swing:

At the close of the song occurs a C natural, which is taken by Caruso with consummate ease.

Hail the red wine richly flowing, In the beaker, sparkling, glowing, I ike young love, with smiles bestowing, Now our holiday 'twill bless.

Hail the wine that flows and bubbles. Kills care, banishes all troubles Brings peace, pleasure it redoubles, Causes sweet forgetfulness!

Alfio now enters, and when Turiddu offers him a cup refuses, saying:

Thank you! but wine to drink with you I fear now,
Poison I might be drinking, ere I was thinking!

Turiddu throws out the wine, saying carelessly:

Very well! suit your pleasure!

The seriousness of this scene is not lost on the peasants, who now leave the young men together. The challenge is quickly given and accepted after the Siciliana fashion. Turiddu viciously biting Alfio's ear. sobered by the deadly earnestness of his neighbor, feels something of remorse, and says to him:

> Neighbor Alfio But if through you I perish Poor hapless Santuzza— Left without her lover—

(Suddenly changing his tone)

Yet will I drive my dagger in your heart! ALFIO (coldly):

I will await you behind the garden!

Turiddu now calls his mother from the cottage, and asks for her blessing, bidding her, if he does not return, to be a mother to Santuzza.

Hector Berlioz's dramatic legend in four parts; book based on de Nerval's version of the's poem, partly by Gandonniere, but completed by Berlioz himself. First performed ember 6, 1846, at the Opéra Comique, Paris, in concert form, and in New York under Leopold Damrosch in 1880. It was given at Monte Carlo as an opera in 1903. THE COMPOSER

No one to-day doubts the genius of Berlioz, and critics are almost unanimous in praising priginality, his spontaneous force and immense creative power. Le Damnation de Faust, pest known work, originally written as an oratorio, but which has since been adapted he stage, was first produced in 1846 and met with a cold reception. Ten years after leath, however, what a change began! A Berlioz memorial in Paris, at the Hippodrome, re thousands were turned away; Berlioz monuments erected in Grenoble and other 5 of France; and finally, the production of Damnation of Faust as an opera at Monte Carlo 303, amid scenes of the wildest enthusiasm.

In his "Faust" Berlioz has given us a musical legend which has all the picturesqueness of the original work.

Whatever severe critics may say of its merits in the highest artistic sense, it is nevertheless a wonderful work. Strange eccentricities and rare beauties are found side by side; even the wild orgie of fiends called "Pandemonium," which almost transgresses the license of genius, must be admired for its astounding orchestral effects. On the other hand, there are melodies of purest beauty, such as the numbers for Marguerite. However, the most striking numbers in the opera are those written in the opera are those written by Berlioz for Mephistopheles, three of which have most effectively rendered for the Victor by Plançon.

AVERDACH'S BEER CELLAR IN LEIPSIC-ACT II

THE OPERA

Berlioz, disregarding Goethe's poem, located the opening scene on a plain in Hi simply to excuse the interpolation of the Rakoczy March. We quote Berlioz h here: "The march on the Hungarian Rakoczy theme, written one night at V made such a sensation at Pesth that I introduced it into my Faust score, taking the lib putting my hero in Hungary and making him witness the passage of a Hungarian across the plain where he is wandering in reverie." But Raoul Gunsbourg, who at the cantata for the stage, changed the first scene to a room with open windows showing peasants dancing and the military passing by to the strains of the Hungarian March. Faust soliloquizes on the vanity of all things, while the people make merry outside, an march of the soldiers makes an inspiring finish to the scene

Hungarian (Rakoczy) March

31424 12-inch.

This is Berlioz's treatment of the famous "Rakoczy M known as a national Hungarian melody for a hundred year stirring measures so fascinated the composer that, contrary original intention, he laid the scene of his "Faust" legend in Hu in order that he might make use of this wild and pulse-quich melody. His treatment of it is brilliant in the extreme, a remains one of the most effective portions of his "Faust."

In this connection it is interesting to remember that although a warm friend of Berlioz, considered himself agg and wrote to Mme. Tardieu in 1882: "My transcription Rakoczy March * * * is twice as long as the well-known v of Berlioz, and it was written before his. Delicate sentime friendship for the illustrious Frenchman induced me to withh from publication until after his death. * * * In writing made use of one of my earlier transcriptions, particularly harmony."

Scene II shows Faust alone in his study, as in the Goversion. He is about to take poison, when the strains of Easter hymn come from the adjoining church and arrest his pu Mephistopheles then appears and suggests that they go ford see the world together, to which Faust consents.

In the third scene Faust and Mephistopheles go to a beer ce Leipsic, where students and soldiers are carousing. Brander his song of the rat, which as in the Gounod opera, meets but ironical praise from Mephistopheles, and he volunteers his famous "Romance of the Flea," a curiosity of music as effective as it is difficult to render.

RENAUD'S STRIKING CON-

Chanson de la puce (Song of the Flea)

By Pol Plancon, Bass

(In French) 81087 10-inch, $2.00

Gounod's Mephistopheles is mild and innocent by the side of the strange utterances of the Devil as portrayed by Berlioz.

This is one of the most interesting numbers in the work, for Berlioz has described, by means of clever forms in the accompaniment, the skipping of the flea in various directions. The words are most fantastic—

Once a king, be it noted, had a fine and lusty flea, And on this flea he doted, cherish'd him tenderly, So he sent for his tailor, and to the tailor spake: "Please to measure this youngster, and coat and breeches make!"

Faust dislikes the scene, and the two vanish from the gaze of the astonished students amid a fiery glow.

We next discover Faust asleep in a lonely forest on the banks of the Elbe, where the demon murmurs a softly penetrating melody into his ear, lulling him to slumber with these seductive words—

'Mid banks of roses, softly the light reposes, On this fair, fragrant bed, rest, O Faust, rest thy head— Here slumber, while lovely visions haunt thy dream Of radiant forms, rare lips and eyes that fondly beam!

while the gnomes and sylphs dance through his dreams, and the vision of Marguerite is seen for the first time.

The next scene corresponds to the Carden Scene of Counod, and shows a room in Marguerite's cottage.

The demon now summons the will-o'-the-wisps in this evocation:

Ye aptr its of in-constant fire.

Hast on here, on the wings of air!

The sprites come flying to Marguerite's door to aid in her enchantment, and the demon continues:

Ye spirits of caprice and of evil, conspire To enchant and subdue, and win a maiden soul. Now dance, ye sons of Evil, dance in the name of the devil, Will-o'-the-wisp and gnome, dance, or away you go!

Then follows the beautiful dance of the will-o'-the-wisps, after which Mephistopheles sings-

"To this lute, I'll sing a serenade One that shall please the lady It is moral, her tastes to suit!"

FAURE AS HOËL, 1859

Although the name of Meyerbeer is usually associated with Robert le Diable, Prophéte and Huguenots, his opera, Pardon de Ploërmel (afterwards revised and renamed Dinorah), was at one time a favorite work with opera-lovers.

The revival of Meyerbeer's sparkling opera during the last Manhattan season was most welcome, not only for its tunefulness, but because it was an ideal medium for the exhibition of Mme. Tetrazzini's marvelous gifts of vocalism.

Old opera-goers in America will remember the productions of the past—that arranged for Marie Van Zandt in 1892; Patti's famous performance a dozen years before; and the fine impersonations of Gerster, di Murska and Marimon. But it is safe to say that no exponent of the part of the wandering Breton shepherdess has ever excelled Mme. Tetrazzini in the rôle.

The plot is utterly absurd—its demented goat-girl, seeking a runaway lover; the lover himself, who contrary to operatic precedent is a baritone, and who spends a year chasing an imaginary treasure; a weak-kneed bag-piper. These are the principal characters.

But in the music Meyerbeer has atoned for the triviality of the libretto, and the audience listens to the delightful melodies and pays little attention to the plot.

The action is laid in Brittany. Dinorah, a maiden of he lage of Ploërmel, is about to be wedded to Hoël, a goat-herd, when a storm destroys a house of the bride's father. Hoël resolves to rebuild it, and goes off to seek treasure a haunted region, while Dinorah, thinking herself deserted, loses her reason, and wanders rough the country with her faithful goat, seeking the absent Hoël.

As the curtain rises, Dinorah enters in her bridal garments, seeking her pet goat, and uding the animal asleep, sings this lullaby to him. So lovely an air is worthy of a better piect.

i, carina caprettina (Yes, My Beloved One)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano (In Italian) *35180 12-inch, $1.25

Mme. Huguet has sung this pretty air with charming fluency, and the record is one of he most attractive in her list. The translation follows:

Slumber, darling, sweetly slumber,
Sleep, my belov'd one, sleep!
Soft the evening breeze is playing,
'Neath the cooling shadows here
Flows a streamlet, fresh and clear,
Swift, among the flowers straying.
Alas! six days has she been away,
Nor yet returns!

Perchance she has wandered on the hills

Amid the thorns!

Ah! wert thou to be seized by the wolf—fear not!

I will be there to defend thee—fear not!

Yes, darling sleep in peace,
Sweet little birds your warbling ceas,
My beauteous one must sleep.

Awake her not! Yet softer still!

*Double-Faced Record—On opposite side is the Mad Scene from Hamlet, by Mme. Hugus...

Corentino, a bag-piper, enters and is terrified at the sight of Dinorah, believing her to be an evil fairy about whom he had heard, who causes the runaway traveler to dance till he dies. Dinorah, in a spirit of mischief, makes him dance until he is exhausted, and runs away laughing.

Hoël enters, still seeking the treasure, and confides in Corentino, telling him that the wizard with whom he had lived for a year had instructed him to seek for a white goat which would guide him to the gold. The bell of Dinorah's goat is heard, and Hoël pursues it, dragging with him the terrified Corentino.

The second act begins with the famous shadow dance, for which Meverbeer has furnished some most beautiful music. Dinorgh enters, and seeing her shadow in the moonlight, imagines it is a friend and sings and dances to it.

Scene and Period: Seville, in the middle of the seventeenth century.

Mozart's Don Giovanni was written in 1787 and produced during the same year at rague. Da Ponte, the librettist, was a Viennese Court dramatist, who had also written Le lozze di Figaro. The plot of the opera was probably founded upon a play entitled El unlador de Sevilla y Convirada de piedra, attributed to Tirso de Molina, a Spanish monk ad prior of a monastery at Madrid. This had also served as a basis for numerous other Don Juan" plays and operas by Fabrizzi, Gardi, Raimondi, Carnicer and latterly Dargonyszky, the Russian composer.

Donna Elvira is horrified and drives of, swearing vengeance.

SCENE III—In the Suburbs of Seville. Giovanni's Palace Visible on the Right

A rustic wedding party comprising Zerlina, Masetto and a company of peasants are enjoying an outing. Don Giovanni and Leporello appear, and the Don is charmed at the sight of so much youthful beauty. He bids Leporello conduct the party to his palace and give them refreshments, contriving, however, to detain Zerling.

Masetto protests, but the Don points significantly to his sword and the bridegroom follows the peasants.

The Don then proceeds to flatter the young girl and tells her she is too beautiful for such a clown as Masetto. She is impressed and coquettes with him in the melodious duet, La ci darem, the witty phrases and delicate harmonies of which make it one of the gems of Mozart's opera.

NIELSEN AS ZERLINA

JEAN DE RESZKE AS DON GIO-VANNI. HIS DÉBUT AS A BARITONE (LONDON, 1875)

.. This celebrated number, which has been sung by many famous artists during the one hundred and twenty years since its first hearing, is one of the best examples of the many sparkling concerted numbers which Mozart has written. Always interesting, it is wholly delightful when sung by such artists as those who have rendered it for the Victor. Not less than four versions, by famous exponents of the characters of Zerlina and Don Giocanni, are presented here.

> DON GIOVANNI: Nay, bid me not resign, love, coldly the hand I press, Oh! sav t say thou wilt be mine, love, breathe but that one word "ves.

ZERLINA I would and yet I would not, I feel my heart

misgive,
Shouldst thou prove false, I could not, become thy scorn and live.

Don Giovanni: Come then, oh come then, dearest.

ZERLINA: Yet should thy fondness alter.

DON GIOVANNI: Nav. love, in vain thou fearest,

Воти:

Yes, hand and heart uniting, each other's cause requiting. Our joy no bounds shall know!

Miss Farrar's Zerling is a dainty and fascinating character, and she sings the music brilliantly. It is hardly necessary to say anything about Scotti's Don Giovanni, as it is quite familiar to opera-goers, ranking among his best impersonations. The rendition by Mme. Eames and Mr. de Gogorza is a most delightful one, while two other records by famous European artists are also offered. Giovanni is about to lead Zerlina away, when Donna Elvira, who has been watching, rescues the young girl and carries her off, to the chagrin of the Don. Donna Anna now enters with Octavio, who asks the help of his friend Don Glovanni in tracing the murderer of Donna Anna's father. The Don assures them of his devotion, and goes to his palace, while Donna Anna tells her lover that she recognizes by his voice that Don Giocanni is the one who slew her father. They depart, and Legorello and the Don enter. The servant tells his master that when Donna Eloira and Zerlina arrived at the palace, and Eloira attempted to tell the peasants the truth about the Don, he led her gently outside the gate and then locked it. He is complimented by his master, who bids him prepare for the feast of the evening. Left alone, the gay Don sings his brilliant Drinking Song, famous in every land.

Fin ch' han dal vino (Wine, Flow a Fountain)

By Antonio Scotti, Baritone (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 85031 12-inch, $3.00

The scene changes to Don Giovanni's garden. Zerlina is endeavoring to make her peace with Masetto, but he is sulky. She then sings her lovely Batti, batti.

ABOTT AND RENAUD AS ZERLINA AND DON GIOVANNI

(In Italian) 88026 12-inch. 13.00

This gentle number is in striking contrast to the brilliant writing in the lighter bits of Zerlina's music.

Chide me, dear Masetto, Chide Zerlina at your will; Like the patient lamb I'll suffer, Meek and mute and loving still.

Ah! I see, love, you're relenting, Pardon, kneeling, I implore! Night and day, to thee, devoted, Here I vow to err no more.

Masetto is only half appeased, but goes in to dance with his bride. Donna Anna, Donna Elvira and Don Octavio, disguised and masked, enter and sing a trio, in which they pledge themselves to have revenge on the traitor.

The scene changes to the interior of the palace, where the ball is in progress. Don Giovanni continues his efforts to get Zerlina away from her jealous and watchful lover, and finally succeeds, but Zerlina calls for help and Masetto and the three conspirators rush to her assistance. They denounce Don Giovanni, who defies them with drawn sword, and makes his escape from the palace.

ACT II

SCENE I—A Square in Seville. Donna Elvira's Residence on the Left. It is a Moonlight Night

MAUREL AS DON GIOVANNI

Don Giovanni, followed by his servant, enters, wrapped in a mantle and carrying a mandolin. He has heard of a pretty servant whom Donna Elvira possesses, and is plotting to get the mistress out of the way. As Elvira sits at her window, he addresses her, pretending to be repentant, but when she comes out he pushes Leporello forward to impersonate him. While they are conversing, the Don makes a great outcry and the pair run off in fright. The coast clear, the Don sings his famous Serenade to the fair waiting maid.

Don Giovanni:
Ope, ope thy casement, dearest,
Thyself one moment show;
Oh, if my pray'r thou hearest,
Wave but that arm of snow.
Canst thou my ceaseless sighing
With cold indif'rence greet?

Ah! wouldst thou see me dying
Despairing, at thy feet?
Thy lip outvies Hymettian-honied bowers;
Virtue worthy an angel, thy heart doth cherish;

Thy sigh were balm amid a heav'n of flowers;
O, for one kiss, one word, this soul would perish!

Scotti's impersonation of Don Giovanni is admirable in every respect. He is the profligate nobleman and irresistible wooer to the life, and sings the difficult score with ease. This famous serenade is given by the baritone with the grace and ease which never fail him.

EDOUARD DE RESZKE AS LEPORELLO

His amours are rudely interrupted by Masetta, who appears with a company of villagers, all armed with muskets, seeking the villain. The Don, pretending to be Leporello, offers to put them on the right track. Then follows a series of amusing situations, ending with the capture of the supposed Don by the three conspirators, but it proves to be Legorello, who takes advantage of the situation to make his escape.

At the close of this scene occurs the beautiful air of Donna Elvira, in which she reproaches the Don for deserting her.

foremost exponents of Mozart in this country. The music of this master demands singers of great understanding and feeling. who must possess not only voice but intelligence and taste.

That Gadski possesses these qualifications in ample measure is fully apparent to all who listen to this superb reproduction.

The next scene shows the Cathedral Square, with the statue of the murdered Commandant in the centre. The Don and Legorello enter, and are discussing the events of the evening. when the statue speaks to them. Leporello is terrified, but the Don defies all spirits and boldly invites the statue to supper at his palace.

The scene changes to the banquet hall in the palace of the Don. In the midst of the festivities a loud knocking is heard. The guests flee in terror, the lights go out, and the gigantic figure of the Commandant appears at the door. Leporello cowers in terror under the table, but Don Giovanni is defiant until the ghost seizes his hand, when he feels for the first time a terrible fear. The statue sinks, flames appear on all sides, and demons rise and seize the guilty libertine, who utters a fearful cry of agony as he is carried down into the fiery abvas.

(Italian) DON PASQUALE

COMIC OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text and music by Gaetano Donizetti. Libretto adapted from the older Italian opera, Ser Marc' Antonio, by Camerano. First presented at the Théâtre des Italians, Paris, on January 4, 1843. First London production June 30, 1843. First New York production March 9, 1846.

Recently revived at the Metropolitan with Sembrich, Scotti and Rossi; and at the Boston Opera House with Nielsen, Bourrillon, Antonio Pini-Corsi and Fornari.

Scene and Period: Rome; the beginning of the nineteenth century.

This brightest of genuine lyric comedies always appeals to that class of opera-goers who find the present-day comic opera or musical comedy to be cheap, gaudy and lacking in genuine humor. Don Pasquale is pure entertainment, nothing else, the true spirit of comedy being found in the music as well as the plot; and both are delightful when the opera is presented by such artists as the Victor has assembled for this series.

The Doctor soothes her, telling her he will induce Emesto to remain, and then reveals the details of the plot against Don Pasquale, in which he proposes to play on the vanity of the old bachelor, by pretending to find him a young and lovely wife. They decide that Notina shall play the part of this girl, and go through a mock marriage with Don Pasquale. Notina is delighted and begins to rehearse her new vole. This takes the form of a charming duet, which ends the first act and which is always greatly admired. Two records of this sprightly duet, at widely varying prices, are cataloged here.

ACT II

SCENE—A Richly Furnished Hall in Don Pasquale's House

Don Pasquale, in the most youthful of wedding garments, enters and struts up and down, admiring himself, until the Doctor arrives with Norina, who is closely veiled. She pretends to be shrinking and frightened, and the Doctor, beginning a delightfully humorous trio, the first of the concerted numbers in this act, begs her to have courage.

The pretended notary now arrives, and another comical scene ensues as the mock ceremony is performed. Pasquale, so much in love that his judgment is clouded, is not only induced to sign over one-half his property to his wife, but agrees that she shall be absolute mistress of the house. As Norina is signing, Emesto's voice is heard outside demanding admittance, having come to bid his uncle farewell. He is amazed to see Norina posing as the Doctor's sister and about to be wedded to his uncle, and tries to interfere, but is restrained by Malatesta.

The moment Norina affixes her signature to the contract her manner changes, and when Pasquale attempts to embrace her she coldly asks him not to be so rude. Pasquale is astonished and Ernesto laughs, which enrages the old man so that he orders his nephew from the room. Norina stops him and says that as Don Pasquale is too old, fat and feeble to attend a young wife, she must have a young cavalier to attend her, and signifies that Ernesto is her choice. Don Pasquale is thunderstruck and attempts to protest, but Norina warns him that if her words are not sufficient to keep him in his place she will beat him! This is the last straw, and the bewildered old man stands in a daze, his brain refusing to comprehend what has happened!

This tableau is followed by the quartet, E rimasto.

Don't be discouraged, use your brains.
NORINA:
NORINA:
NOW then, at least, my worthy friend,
You must begin to comprehend.

The great finale to Act II then follows, and the curtain always descends amid a gale of laughter from the audience. Norina rings a bell, summoning the servants, and announces that she is now sole mistress of the house. She orders new servants engaged, two carriages, new furniture, etc., planning expenditures on a lavish scale. Don Pasquale attempts to protest, but is silenced, and in a voice choked with rage and astonishment begins the finale.

ACT III

(Same as Act I—On the floor and furniture are piled up dresses, bandboxes, furs, etc., in great profusion. Servants are running to and fro with bustle and excitement)

Don Pasquale is seen amid the confusion, looking with utmost consternation at a huge pile of bills. He throws them down in despair, and as Norina approaches resolves to make one last attempt to remain master in his own house.

As she goes out she intentionally drops a note which Don Pasquale seizes and peruses. He is petrified to find that it reads:

"Adored Sophrania—
Between the hours of nine and ten this evening,
I shall be at the bottom of the garden—

By the small grated gate.

"Tis in a song I shall announce my coming:
Thine to command—thine faithfully;—adieu."

This is too much, and the unhappy man runs in search of Malatesta. Ernesto and the Doctor enter, discussing the plot, and the young man, after being instructed to be at the garden rendezvous at nine that evening, goes out.

Pasquale returns, and going solemnly up to the Doctor, exclaims:

Pasquale:
Brother-in-law, in me, alas, you see
A dead man, walking upright!

and tells him of the contents of the note. Malatesta pretends to sympathize and proposes that they lie in wait for the guilty lovers that evening and teach them a severe lesson. Pasquale gloats over his coming triumph, and begins the duet.

This night, without delay,
Thou must the reckoning pay!
Thou'lt see what little use
Now will be each excuse—
Useless thy tender smiles,
Sighs, and tears—and wiles—
All I have now at stake,
Conquer'd, again I'll take!

MALATESTA (aside):
Oh, the poor fellow!
Vengeance he's prating;
Let the dolt bellow—
He knows not what's waiting!
He knows not he is building rare
Castles in the empty air:
He sees not, the simpletom—
That in the trap, poor elf,
He of his own accord
Now goes to throw himself!
(Exit together.)

SCENE, II—Don Pasquale's Garden—It is Night—Ernesto is Discovered Waiting

This scene begins with the beautiful serenade, the most melodious of the airs in Donizetti's work.

Serenata-Com' e gentil (Soft Beams the Light)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 85048 12-inch, $3.00 By Aristodemo Giorgini, Tenor, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 76010 12-inch, 2.00

Ernesto:

Oh! summer night, thy tranquil light Was made for those who shun the busy day, Who love too well, yet blush to tell The hopes that led their hearts astray! All now is still, on dale, on hill,

And none are nigh, with curious eye; Then why, my love, oh, why delay? Your lattice open to the starry night, And with your presence make the world more bright!

Two renditions of this exquisite air are listed here, headed by Caruso's, familiar to admirers of the great tenor. A fine record by Giorgini, a tenor now much liked in Italy, follows.

Norina joins Ernesto, and they are reconciled in a duet, Tell Me Again. Pasquale and the Doctor, with dark lanterns, enter softly and hide behind the trees, but the irate old man can contain himself no longer and rushes out to denounce the lovers. Ernesto vanishes and Norina calmly declares there was no one with her, that she had merely come out to get fresh air. Pasquale is so beside himself with rage and chagrin that Malatesta considers it time to end the farce, and proposes to rid Pasquale of his bride by marrying her to Ernesto, revealing that the first marriage was not a real one, and that the lady was not his sister but Norina. Pasquale is so glad to be rid of such an extravagant termagant that he pardons the deception, consents to the union, and settles an income on the happy pair.

Scene and Period: A little Italian village; the nineteenth century.

This delightful example of Donizetti's work is a real opéra bouffe, and while simple and unconventional in plot, it has always been a favorite because of the lovely songs with which it abounds.

Adina, a lively village beauty and heiress, is loved by a young peasant, Nemorino, who although handsome and manly, is afraid to press his suit; but while the beauty treats him rather coolly she is by no means indifferent to him.

Ah! how lovely! ah! how dear to me!
While I gaze I adore more deeply;
Ah! what rapture that soft bosom
With a mutual flame to move.
But while reading, studying, improving,
She hath learning and every attainment,
While I can nothing do but love!

Adina then reads to her friends a legend of a cruel lady who coldly treated a knight who loved her, and only smiled on him when he gave her a love potion. Nemorino wishes he could find the receipt for this potent elixir.

Martial music is heard and Belcore, a dashing sergeant stationed near the village, appears with a bouquet for Adina. She has but few smiles for the military man, which cheers Nemorino somewhat, and when Belcore departs he renews his suit, but the fair one tells him that it is useless.

A commotion among the villagers is heard, and Dulcamara, a quack doctor, comes on the scene, riding in a splendid carriage. He announces his wonderful medicines in a famous song, Udite, udite o rustici, the delight of buffos for more than eighty years.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-ELIXIR

After the Doctor has recited the wonderful effects of his medicines, saving:

I cure the apoplectical,
The asthmatical, the paralytical,
The dropsical, the diuretical,
Consumption, deafness, too, The rickets and the scrofula-All evils are at once upset By this new and fashionable mode!

Nemorino exclaims, "Heaven itself must have sent this miraculous doctor to our village!" He draws the quack aside, and asks him if he has an elixir that can awaken love. The Doctor, of course, says that he is the original inventor of the liquid, and soon has Nemorino's last coin in exchange for the coveted potion, which is in reality a bottle of strong wine.

This scene is in the form of an amusing duet, Obbligato.

Obbligato, obbligato (Thank You Kindly)

By Fernando de Lucia, Tenor, and Ernesto Badini, Baritone

(In Italian) 91079 10-inch, $2.00

As soon as the Doctor has departed Nemorino drinks the elixir, and at once feels a new ourage in his veins. He begins to sing and dance, and Adina, coming in, is astonished to ee her love-sick swain so merry. Feeling sure that the potion will bring the lady to his feet, te pays no attention to her, which piques her so much that when the sergeant arrives and enews his suit, she consents to wed him in three days. Nemorino laughs loudly at this, which further enrages the lady, and she sets the wedding for that very day. This sobers Vemorino, who fears that the marriage may take place before the potion works, and he leads for delay. Adina and Belcore laugh at him, and the curtain falls as preparations for he wedding are begun.

ACT II

SCENE 1-Interior of the Farmhouse

The wedding feast is in progress, but the notary has not arrived. Dulcamara is present, and produces the latest duet from Venice, which he asks Adina to sing with him.

lo sono ricco e tu sei bella (I Have Riches, Thou Hast Beauty)

By Mme. Passari, Soprano: Antonio Pini-Corsi, Baritone: La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 16566 10-inch. $0.60

This amusing dialogue, supposed to occur between a rich old man and a young girl, is given here by two well-known singers of La Scala, supported by the chorus.

The company now goes to an adjoining room to dance; all but the Doctor, who says he loesn't know when another free dinner will come his way, and therefore remains at the east. Nemorino enters, distracted, and tells the Doctor that the elixir has not yet taken ≥ffect.

"Take another bottle," says the Doctor, "only twenty crowns." Nemorino says he has no money, so the Doctor promptly pockets the bottle and goes in to the dancers, telling the unhappy youth to go out and raise the amount.

Belcore, the sergeant, comes in, and learning that Nemorino's distress is caused by lack of money, suggests that he enlist as a soldier and be richer the fee of twenty crowns. Nemorino jumps at the chance, signs the articles, runs in search of the Doctor, and drinks the second bottle!

The peasant girls, having heard that the death of Nemorino's uncle has just made him rich, begin to pay him attentions. The Doctor tells Nemorino that this popularity is the result of the elixir he has just sold him. Adina, woman-like, when she sees her lover in such demand, promptly regrets having treated him so coldly, and runs out on the verge of tears. Nemorino, noting her downcast looks, feels compassion for her, and gazing after her sadly, sings the lovely romanza, famous in every land.

Una furtiva lagrima (Down Her Cheek a Pearly Tear)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 81027 10-inch, $2.00 By John McCormack, Tenor (In Italian) 12-inch, 1.50 74219 By Florencio Constantino, Tenor (In Italian) 74065 12-inch, 1.50 By Evan Williams, Tenor (In English) 74150 12-inch, 1.50 Donizetti's delightful little comedy, in spite of the beauty of its music and the opportunities it offers for a colorature soprano, is really a tenor opera, and requires a great artist in the rôle of Nemorino; and it was the advent of Caruso which made the revival of this sparkling opera bouffe possible.

Neglected as the opera, as a whole, has been for many years, this lovely romanza, Una furtiva lagrima, has proved meanwhile an always welcome contribution to the concert stage, and as a test for tenors is comparable to the Come gentil in Don Pasquale. All but four of Donizetti's fifty operas have lost their popularity, but the song which Nemorino sings to the tear that stood in his Adina's eye will always keep the opera from being forgotten. This is one of the most famous of the Caruso records, and his exquisite singing of this beautiful number is something to be long remembered.

Down her soft cheek a pearly tear
Stole from her eyelids dark,
Telling their gay and festive cheer,
It pained her soul to mark;
Why then her dear presence fly?
When all her love she is showing?
Could I but feel her beating heart
Pressing against mine own;
Could I my feeling soft impart, and mingle sigh with sigh,
But feel her heart against mine own,
Gladly I then would die, all her love knowing!

Mr. McCormack's rendition is also a most attractive one. Very few English singers are able to sing an Italian aria in a manner that would be acceptable to Italian audiences, but McCormack is one of these, and his rendering of Donizetti's exquisite air is an example of this mastery of the old school of vocalization. Other renderings, by Constantino in Italian, and a fine one in English by Williams, are also offered.

The crafty Dulcamara now suggests to Adini that she try the wonderful elixir in order to win back her lover, but she says she needs not such aids.

ADINA:
With respect to your elixir,
One more potent, sir, have I—
Through whose virtues Nemorino,
Leaving all, to me will fly!
DULCAMARA (aside):
Oh! she's far too wise and cunning;
These girls know even more than I.

ADINA:
With a tender look I'll charm him—
With a modest smile invite him—
With a tear or sigh alarm him—
With a fond caress excite him.
Never yet was man so mulish,
That I could not make him yield.
Nemorino's fate's decided!

When Nemorino has sung his air Adina comes on with the soldier's contract, which she has bought back, and tells him that he must not go away. All misunderstandings are now cleared away, and Belcore arrives to find his bride-to-be embracing another. However, he is philosophical and saying, "There are other women!" marches off, while the villagem tell Adina and Nemorino of the latter's good fortune. The Doctor claims credit for the reconciliation, and the curtain falls as he is relieving the peasants of their wages in return for bottles of his wonderful Elixir of Love!

Scene and Period: Aragon; about 1519,

ACT I

SCENE I-The Mountains of Aragon

Elvira, a Spanish lady of rank, is about to be married to the elderly Don Gomez de Silva, a Grandee of Spain. Ernani, a bandit chief (in reality John of Aragon, become a brigand after his estates were confiscated), loves Elvira and resolves to prevent this unwelcome marriage. The first scene shows a mountain pass where Emani's men are encamped.

Beviam, beviam (Comrades, Let's Drink and Play)

By La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *35168 12-inch. $1.25

The opera opens with this spirited chorus of bandits and mountaineers, who are drinking and gambling in their stronghold. With reckless satisfaction in their lot they sing:

"What matters to the bandit
If hunted and branded
So wine be his share!"

Emani, their chief, appears on a neighboring height with a melancholy brow. His men remark at his gloomy appearance, and he tells them that he is powerless to prevent the marriage of his betrothed to the aged Silva on the morrow. He describes the peerless Elvira in a fine aria. The Sweetest Flow'r.

Come rugiada al cespite (The Sweetest Flow'r)

By Luigi Colazza, Tenor

(In Italian) *62627 10-inch. $0.75

The bandits offer their lives, if need be, in the service of their chief, and it is decided to rescue Elvira that night.

O tu che l'alma adora (O Thou. My Life's Treasure)

By Martinez Patti, Tenor, and La Scala Chorus (In Italian)

*16567 10-inch. $0.75

Emant, in this passionate aria, sings of the charms of his beloved.

Oh thou, my life's sole treasure. Come, come to my arms adoring, Death at thy feet were pleasure, The joy of heav'n is mine where'er thou art. I love thy starry glances, Thy smile my heart entrances, Most blessed he of mortals To whom thou gav'st thy heart!

Ernani and his men depart in the direction of Silva's castle and the scene changes.

SCENE II—Elvira's Apartment in the Castle

Elvirg is discovered alone, brooding over the prospect of the sacrifice, which she seems powerless to prevent.

ELVIRA:

'Tis near the dawning, and Silva yet returns not! Ah! would he came no more—with odious words of loving, more deeply confirming my love for Ernani!

In this beautiful but despairing number she calls on her lover to save her, singing:

Ernani, fly with me; Prevent this hated marriage! With thee, e'en the barren desert Would seem an Eden of enchantment!

Two brilliant renditions of this famous number are given, by Mme Sembrich and Mme. Boninsegna; while a popularpriced record is contributed by Mme. Grisi, of La Scala.

Elvira's ladies-in-waiting now enter, bringing her wedding gifts, and in the graceful chorus with which this record begins, congratulate her.

She thanks them, saying: "Each kindly wish awakes a response in my own heart;" then sings, aside, a second number, "Tutto sprezzo che d'Ernani," in which she tells of her hope of rescue. The chorus joins in the concluding strain.

Da quel di che t'ho veduta (From the Day when First Thy Beauty)

By Angela de Angelis, Soprano; Francesco Cigada, Baritone

(In Italian) *35168 12-inch, $1.25
We come now to one of the greatest scenes in the opera. Elvira, who has left the room with the ladies, returns and is amazed to discover in her boudoir the King, who has been secretly in love with her. She

"In pity, sire, leave me!"

The record begins with the dramatic dialogue between Carlos and Elvira. Carlos then declares his love in the aria "Da quel di" leading up to a dramatic duet, which concludes this sixth number.

Γu se' Ernani! (Thou Art Ernani!)

By Giacomelli, Martinez-Patti and Pignataro (Italian) *16568 10-inch, $0.75 appeals to his honor, saving:

The King, maddened by Elvira's resistance, is about to carry her away by force. She natches a dagger from Carlos' belt and cries: "Go, or with this dagger I will slay us both!" he King is about to summon his guard, when suddenly a secret panel door opens and irnani appears. Carlos recognizes him and exclaims: "Thou art Ernani, the assassin and andit," and in the spirited trio which follows the rivals declare their hatred, while Elvira, Imost distracted, endeavors to protect her lover.

In the midst of this thrilling tableau now appears Silva, who does not recognize the ing and who is naturally astounded to find two rivals in the apartments of his future ride, quarreling for her possession. He summons his squires and soldiers, then addresses immself to Elvira and reproaches her in this well-known and impressive Infelice, one of the tost beautiful of bass arias. Four records of this favorite number are available—by purnet (in both 10 and 12-inch), by de Segurola and by Sillich.

The editor regrets that he is unable to give satisfactory English translations for the maprity of the Ernani airs, but most of the available translations of Emani are so distorted as be almost meaningless. The few extracts which are given have been revised and made somewhat intelligible. "Opera in English," about which we hear so much nowadays, rould be simply impossible without new translations for some of the older works. For inance, here is a specimen translation of the text of this very air of Infelice.

Ah, to win, to win back summer's blossom In my breast were tho't too gainless, Winter lords it within this my bosom. Far congealing, far congealing to the core, Far congealing unto the core,

Far congealing unto the core. Winter lords it in this bosom. Far congealing, far congealing to the core. Unto the core, congealing unto the core!

Now anyone who can tell just what this means is certainly a highly gifted individual In this connection, however, it should be stated that several American music publishers are entitled to praise for their efforts to improve opera translations, especially G. Schirmer, with many beautiful new editions of the older operas and collections of opera airs; and Oliver Ditson Company, whose Musicians' Library, a splendid piece of music typography, contains many new translations. The editor of this catalogue is indebted to both these firms for permission to quote from their new translations.

By Maria Grisi, Soprano; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; Remo Sangiorgi, Tenor; and Giuseppi Sala, Baritone (In Italian) *35169 12-inch. $1.25

Having reproached his bride for her supposed treachery, Silva thinks of vengeance, and calling for his armor and a sword, demands that the intruders follow him to combat. Before they can reply, the King's squires enter and salute their sovereign. The astounded Silva, though secretly enraged, kneels to his King, saying: "Duty to my King cancels all offences." The great finale then begins with Carlos' solo, sung aside to his squires:

"Well I knew my trusty vassal Fierce in hate, in passion tender Would his wrath and love surrender In the presence of his King."

This is one of the most impressive records of the Ernani series.

Finale, Act I

By Maria Grisi, Soprano; Carlo Ottoboni, Bass; Remo Sangiorgi, Tenor; and Giuseppi Sala, Baritone (In Italian) *16568 10-inch, $0.75

The finale to Act I is continued in this record. The situation at the close of the act may be understood by these quotations from the words the librettist has given to the various characters:

CARLOS (to Ernani):
 I will save thee!
(Aloud to Silva):
 Let this trusty friend depart.

ERNANI.
 I thy friend? Never! unto death my vengeance will pursue thee!

ELVIRA:
 Fly, Ernani, let love teach thee prudence!

CARLOS:
Power, dominion and love's delights,
All these are mine—all my will must obey!
SILVA:
From my eyes a veil has fallen . . .
I can scarce believe my senses!
COURTIERS:
Wall debt Silva hide his anger.

Well doth Silva hide his anger But within it still doth smolder!

Ernani yields to Elvira's pleadings and in the confusion makes his escape. The curtain falls on an impressive tableau.

ACT II

SCENE—A Hall in Silva's Castle

After his escape from the castle, nothing has been seen of Emani. Elvira believes the rumors of his death and despairingly consents to wed Don Silva.

Esultiam (Day of Gladness) By La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *16569 10-inch. $0.75

The first scene of Act II occurs in a magnificent hall in the castle. The company of knights and pages of Silva, and ladies in attendance on Elvira sing the opening chorus in praise of the noble Silva and his peerless bride.

Oro quant' oro (I am the Bandit Ernani)

Silva, attired as a Grandee, enters. His squire, Jago, announces a holy man, who craves the hospitality of the castle. Ernani, disguised as a pilgrim, enters, then throws off his disguise and exclaims, beginning this fine trio:

"I am the bandit Ernani . . . My men are dead or in chains . . . My men are dead or in chains . . . My enter we without the castle . . . Seize me and deliver me up, for I am weary of life!"

Silva, however, refuses to betray one whom he has received as a guest. The trio which is one of the great scenes of the opera, then follows.

The retainers bring news that the King and his warriors are without the castle. Silva hides Ernani, in a secret passage and orders that the King be admitted. Don Carlos inquires, with irony, why Silva's castle is so well guarded, and demands that he surrender Ernani or lose his own life. Silva refuses. The soldiers are ordered to search the castle. This duet then occurs. beginning:

CARLOS: I will prove, audacious greybeard,
If thou'rt loyal to thy King!
In my wrath I will destroy thee!
Silva: Oh King, be just; I cannot yield!

This record begins with a chorus of soldiers, who have explored the castle but have found no trace of Ernani. The King is about to torture Silva into revealing the secret, when Elvira rushes in and begs the mercy of his Majesty. Carlos turns to her, and sings consolingly of the bright future before her as his Queen, and in the great trio which follows the conflicting emotions of those in the scene are expressed in Verdi's fiery music.

A te scegli, seguimi (Choose Thy Sword, and Follow!)

By Luigi Colazza, Tenor, and Torres de Luna, Bass

(In Italian) *35169 12-inch, $1.25
The King, his followers, and the Lady Elvira having retired, Silva exclaims: "Hell cannot hate with the hatred I bear thee, vile King!" He then takes down two swords from the armory, and releasing Ernant from his hiding place, challenges him to combat. Ernant refuses, saying that his life belongs to Silva, who has saved it. Silva taunts him with cowardice and Ernant consents to fight, but asks for one look at Elvira. Silva replies that the King has taken her away. "Fool!" cries Ernant to the astonished Grandee, "the King is our rival!" and agrees to combine with Silva against their mutual foe. Once their revenge is accomplished, Ernant agrees to yield his life at Silva's call, and gives him a hunting horn which shall be the signal for his (Ernant's) death. For this magnificent number Verdi has written some of his most dramatic music.

In arcion, cavalieri (To Horse, Ye Warriors)

By Giuseppi Sala, Tenor: Cesare Preve, Baritone; and La Scala Chorus (Italian) *16571 10-inch, $0.75

The act closes with the spirited duet and chorus by Ernani, Silva and the warriors of the Don, who prepare to pursue the King to the death.

The third act occurs in the Tomb of Charlemagne at Aix-la-Chapelle. Carlos conceals himself in the tomb of his ancestor to witness the meeting of the conspirators who are plotting against him. He is depressed and melancholy, and sings this famous O de verd, in which he pledges himself to better deeds should the Electors, then in session, proclaim him Emperor.

Si ridesti il leon di Castiglia (Rouse the Lion of Castile)

By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *16571 10-inch, $0.75

The conspirators, among whom are Ernant and Silva, assemble at the tomb. Ernani is chosen to assassinate Carlos, and greets the decision with joy, exclaiming that his dead father will at last be avenged. The great ensemble then follows.

O sommo Carlo (Oh Noble Carlos)

The booming of cannon having announced that Carlos is proclaimed Emperor, he comes from the tomb and surprises the conspirators. At the same time the Electors and the King's courtiers enter from a secret door. Carlos condemns the plotters to death, when Elvira rushes to him and asks for mercy. The Emperor heeds her, pardons them all, and unites Elvira and Ernani. In this great finale all glorify the Emperor except Silva, who still secretly cries for vengeance.

ACT IV

SCENE-Terrace of a Palace in Aragon

Festa da ballo (Hail, Bright Hour of Gladness)

By La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *16572 10-inch, $0.75

The lovers are now happily united, and this scene shows them at Ernani's palace, which, with his estates, has been restored to him. A chorus of ladies, masks and pages greets the happy pair.

Ferna crudel, estinguere (Stay Thee, My Lord!)

By Maria Bernacchi, Soprano; Luigi Colazza, Tenor; and Torres de Luna, Baritone (In Italian) *35170 12-inch, $1.25

Elvira and Emani are alone on the terrace, oblivious to all but each other, when a blast from a horn is heard. Ernani awakes from his dream of bliss and recognizes the sound of his own hunting horn, which he had given to Silva as a pledge to die when the revengeful Don should demand his life. The distracted Elvira pleads with Silva for her husband, but in vain. After an affecting farewell Emani fulfills his vow, stabs himself and dies, while Elvira falls lifeless on his body. The curtain falls as the cruel and remorseless Silva is gloating over his terrible revenge.

TERDI'S BIRTHPLACE (OCTOBER 10, 1813), RONCOLE, DUCHY OF PARMA

FAUST

Fifty-two years have elapsed since the first production of this masterpiece by Gounod; and it is to-day sung throughout the world more than any other five operas combined. At the Paris Opéra alone it has been given more than 1500 times, and the new setting recently provided for it there cost not less than 150,000 francs, a sum which would not be risked on any other opera whatever.

It seems strange now, in view of the overwhelming success of Faust, to recall that it was received with indifference in Paris, and all but failed in Milan. The London production, however, with Titiens, Giuglini, Trebelli, Gassier and Santley, was quite successful; and in the following June Patti sang Marguerite for the first time, the opera receiving a tremendous ovation.

The story is familiar to almost every one and will be but briefly sketched here. The libretto by Barbier and Carre does not attempt to follow the Goethe drama, but merely makes use of the Faust-Marguerite incident. This is sufficient, however, to provide an intensely interesting subject for Gounod's lovely music.

Prélude

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris

58016 12-inch. $1.00

The prelude to Faust is a short one, merely giving a clue to the drama which is to follow. The fateful single note of the full orchestra with which it opens and the mysterious chromatic chords stealing in from the strings form a fitting introduction to a drama of such unusual portent.

The tempo is then accelerated and a passage suggesting Faust's mental struggles leads to the lovely melody in F major (Dio possente). The prelude closes with sustained chords, solemn and impressive.

This number is rarely heard apart from the opera, and so excellent a reproduction as this one by the orchestra will be highly appreciated.

ACT I-The Compact

The first act reveals the studio of Faust, an aged philosopher and alchemist, who is seen surrounded by musty parchment rolls and the rude scientific apparatus of the fifteenth century. The fitful light of the expiring lamp is a symbol of the despair in the heart of the aged Faust, as after a lifetime spent in the pursuit of learning, he realizes that he knows but little of true knowledge. Tired of the struggle, he resolves to end it with a poisonous draught, and raises the goblet to his lips; but pauses as the songs of the happy peasants float through the open window. He goes to the window, and filled with rage at the sight of human happiness, he curses all earthly things and calls on Satan to aid him.

This scene is given in a most impressive record by De Tura and the La Scala Chorus.

CHORUS OF PEASANT GIRLS (passing without the window): Ah! careless, idle maiden, Wherefore dreaming still? Day with roses laden Cometh o'er the hill. Brooks and bees and flowers Warble to the grove, Who has time for sadness? Awake to love!

Foolish echoes of human gladness, Go by, pass on your way!

Goblet so often drained by my father's hand so steady. Why now dost thou tremble in mine?

Cometh forth, ye reapers, young and hoary! The earth is proud with harvest glory! Rejoice and pray. FAUST:

If I pray there is none to hear—hack my love. To give me back my love. Its believing and its glow. Accurate he all ye thoughts of earthly pleasure: Fond dreams of hose! ambitions high, And their fulfilment so rare! Accurat, my vaunted learning. And forgiveness and prayer. Infernal king, appear! (Meghistopheles appears.)

FAUST DREAMS OF YOUTH AND BEAUTY

The scroll is signed in letters of fire, Faust drains the magic potion and is transformed into a youth. The spirited duet which follows, ending the first act, is sung with fine effect; both of the Victor renditions being most attractive ones.

Mephistopheles, attired in the dress of a gallant, promptly appears in response to the call and proposes that the good Doctor shall enter into a compact with him. In return for riches, glory, power, anything he desires, Faust shall merely give up his soul. The aged philosopher, spurning gold or power, cries out for youth, only youth!

ACT II-The Fair

(The scene shows a fair in progress in the public square of a German town)
A motley crowd of students, soldiers, old men, young women and matrons are disporting themselves—drinking, talking, flirting, quarreling; and this animated chorus, with which the Kermesse Scene begins, graphically pictures the whole.

Each group delivers its quota in distinctive fashion, the soldiers' sturdy declaration contrasting with the laughing, chattering passages allotted to the women; the high-pitched falsetto of the gossiping old men always proving a favorite portion of this number. At the close the different groups combine into a chorus of six parts. This wonderful piece of choral writing is reproduced in a striking manner, and gives a most realistic picture of the Kermesse.

In the preceding recitative he speaks of his fears in leaving his sister Marguerite alone, and contemplates with affection the amulet she has given him to bring good fortune.

VALENTINE:
Dear gift of my sister,
Made more holy by her pray'r.
However great the danger,
There's naught can do me harm,
Protected by this charm!

The familiar "Cavatina" then follows:

Even bravest heart may swell, In the moment of farewell, Loving smile of sister kind, Quiet home I leave behind; Oft shall I think of you, Whene'er the wine-cup passes 'round, When alone my watch I keep And my comrades lie asleep Upon the tented battleground.
But when danger to glory shall call me,
I still will be first in the fray,
As blithe as a knight in his bridal array,
Careless what fate may befall me,
When glory shall call me.
Oft shall I sadly think of you
When far away, far away.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-GOUNOD'S FAUST

IOURNET AS MEPHISTO

This Dio possente was not in the original production of the opera, but was written by Gounod especially for Santley in the English production at Her Majesty's Theatre, 1864.

The Victor offers a wide choice to buyers of this fine "Cavatina." Scotti's Valentine is always a revelation in dramatic possibilities. This rôle, too often allotted to a mediocre artist, is filled by him with dignity; and he makes a serious and soldierly Valentine, singing the music with admirable richness of tone and beauty of expression.

Although Mr. de Gogorza has not sung the number in opera, it is frequently seen on his concert programs, and he sings it superbly. Other fine renditions in Italian are the ones by Ruffo and Cigada, two famous European baritones, who have not yet visited America.

Le veau d'or (The Calf of Gold)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (In French) 81038 10-inch, $2.00 By Marcel Journet, Bass (In French) 64036 10-inch, 1.00

We are now in the full bustle of the Fair Scene, where in front of an inn a crowd of drinkers are listening to one of their number, Wagner, singing a some what coarse ditty concerning a rat. Mephistopheles breaks in upon the revelers, and offers to sing a song of isown, "The Song of the Golden Calf." After the diabolically suggestive introduction by the orchestra, with its semi-quavers and descending chromatics, we hear the bold opening passage of this anthem in praise of Mammon, of which the calf is symbolic.

MEPHISTOPHELES:
Calf of Gold! aye in all the world
To your mightiness they proffer,
Incense at your fane they offer
From end to end of all the world.
And in honor of the idol
Kings and peoples everywhere
To the sound of jingling coins
Dance with zeal in festive circle,
Round about the pedestal,
Satan, he conducts the ball!
Calf of Gold, strongest god below!
To his temple overflowing
Crowds before his vile shape, bowing,
As they strive in abject toil,
As with souls debased they circle
Round about the pedestal,
Satan, he conducts the ball!

Two renditions of this effective bass ing are offered by the Victor. Plançon's indition is a spirited one, the number ways being sung by him with a full ppreciation of its caustic raillery. Jouret's record is also a splendid one in lany respects, and shows the magnificent oice of this artist to great advantage.

Mephistopheles now proceeds to astonth the company by his feats of magic, rst reading their palms and then drawig wine from the barrel of Bacchus—the in sign perched up aloft—each man rawing the wine he likes the best.

The scene which follows, a most ramatic one, is given in a splendid cord by Amato, Journet and the Metroplitan Chorus.

Let me see if I cannot find you better!
(Striking the image of Bacchus with his sword.)
What ho, Bacchus! up there! some liquors!
Come while you can,
And each one drink the wine he likes the best!

He then affronts Valentine by proposing the health of Marguerite, and the soldier draws his sword, only to find that some unforeseen force has made it powerless in his hand.

MEPHISTOPHELES:
I propose the health of the dearest of all dears,
Our Margarita!
VALENTINE: Enough!
Bridle thy tongue, or thou diest by my hand!
MEPHISTOPHELES:

Valentine, however, turns the handle upwards, thus making the Sign of the Cross, the soldiers doing likewise, and they now face the Tempter with confidence.

VALENTINE AND SOLDIERS:

Strongest earthly might must be unavailing.
VALENTINE:

Holds up his sword to form a cross.)

Thou canst not harm us!

Mephistopheles is discomfited, and cowers in terror as the soldiers sing the choral, with its striking unison passage for male voices, alternated with bursts of harmony.

This is a remarkably fine reproduction, the men's voices being rich and sonorous, and the dramatic feeling intense.

The delightful waltz, which has been a model of its kind ever since the first performance of Faust, now begins.

She modestly declines, saying:

MARGUERITE:
No, my lord, not a lady am I,
Nor yet a beauty;
And do not need an arm,
To help me on my way.

FAUST (gazing after her):
By my youth! what a charm!
She knows not of her beauty.
Oh! darling child, I love thee!

The waltz now re-commences and the act ends in a wild and exciting dance, in which all join—students, soldiers and women.

ACT III-The Garden Scene

The Garden Scene of Faust is undoubtedly Gounod's finest inspiration; and the sensuous beauty of the music with which the composer has surrounded the story of Marguerite's innocence and trust betrayed, has held many millions in rapt attention during the fifty years since it was first heard.

This fresh and dainty song of Siebel ushers in the act. The gentle boy enters Marguerite's garden, thinking of the dark prophecy of Mephistopheles, who had told him (in Act II):

"Each flower that you touch, Every beauty you dote on Shall rot and shall wither!"

Siebel now thinks to put this curse to a test, and prepares to send a message of love to Marguerite by means of a flower, singing

"In the language of love, oh gentle flow'r, Say to her I adore her.

Then gathering a blossom he exclaims, as he sees it fade:

But the happy thought occurs to him to dip his fingers in the font of holy water by the side of the cottage. He does so, and is delighted to find the spell broken. The first strain then reappears, closing the aria.

This popular number is offered in Italian by Homer and Zaccaria, in French by Fornia and in English by Miss Morgan.

Then her thoughts return to and breaking off the song, she sif to herself:

Again impatient with her wandering mind, she finishes the ballad.

Miss Farrar sings this beautiful folk-song with surpassing loveliness of voice, the dreamy sentimental style which it requires, while Mme. Eames' rendition is example of the consummate art of this singer—vocally perfect and sung with exfeeling.

Finding herself in no humor to spin, Marguerite moves toward the house and the flowers, which she stops to admire, thinking them from Siebel. The box of then catches her eye, and after some misgivings she opens it. Then follows the and sparkling "Jewel Song," or Air des bijoux, in which childish glee and virginal c tishness are so happily expressed.

"Oh Heav'n! what brilliant gems! Can they be real? Oh never in my sleep did I dream of aught so lovely!"

exclaims the delighted Marguerite.

By Giuseppina Huguet (Double-faced-See page 10	07) (Italian)	68160	12-inch.

No less than four fine records of this wellknown and popular air are presented for the choice of Victor opera lovers.

Melba's rendition is a most delightful one, her voice exhibiting the most entrancing smoothness: in its loveliness, flexibility and brilliancy it seems absolutely without a flaw.

Sembrich's Marguerite was always a fine impersonation, and her delivery of the number is exceedingly artistic, being one of the cleanest and most finished bits of colorature singing ever heard in opera

Miss Farrar's brilliant Marguerite has been much admired during the past few seasons, and this number shows well the loveliness and flexibility of her voice. A fine record at a lower price is contributed by Mme. Huguet, doubled with the Kermesse record described in Act II.

Stretching out his arms, he invokes the powers of Night that its mysterious scents and seductive charms may aid him in his work of the lovers' undoing. In this stately passage the singer drops for a time the satirical vein of the previous quartet, and gives the invocation with befitting solemnity and grandeur.

MEPHISTOPHELES:

It was high time— See, 'neath the balmy linden See, 'neath the balmy linden, Our lovers devoted approaching; 'tis well! Better leave them alone, With the flow'rs and the moon.

O night! draw around them thy curtain! Let naught waken alarm, or misgivings ever! Ye flowers, aid the enchanting charm, Her senses to bewilder; till she knows not Whether she be not already in Heaven!

This is the most impressive passage in the whole part of Mephistopheles, and it is magnificently sung by Journet.

The lovers appear again, and Mephistopheles discreetly retires from view. The first part of the exquisite duet then follows.

MARGUERITE (leaning out in the moonlight):
He loves me! He loves me!
Repeat it again, bird that callest!
Soft wind that fallest!
He loves me! Ah, our world is glorious,

And more than Heaven above! The air is balmy
With the very breath of love!
How the bows embrace and murmur!
Ah, speed, thou night, away!

MARGUERITE LONGS FOR FAUST'S RETURN

One of the most original and beautiful of the Faust melodies, this makes a fitting termination of the exauisitely beautiful Garden Scene. A lovely melody in 9,8 time, divided between flute and clarionet, forms the basis of the movement, and in this the soprano joins in short dreamy phrases.

Her longing for the passing of night and the return of Faust. expressed in the last ecstatic phrase, is answered by the cry of her lover, and Mephistopheles, who has been holding Faust back, now releases him.

FAUST (rushing to the window): Marguerite! MARGUERITE: Ah! (she faints in his arms). MEPHISTOPHELES (with sardonic laughter):
There! Ha, ha, ha! ha!

SOLDIERS' CHORUS-ACT IV

This number was written for a previous opera by Gounod, but was taken bodily and added to Faust, a happy thought which added another splendid touch to a successful work. Several renditions of this great chorus are offered, both vocal and instrumental, and a complete translation of the words is given.

Fold the flag, my brothers, Fold the flag, my brothers, Lay by the spear! We come from the battle once more; Our pale praying mothers, Our wives and sisters dear, Our loss need not deplore,
Yes! 'tis a joy for men victorious,
To the children by the fire, trembling in our arms,
To old age of old time glorious,
To talk of war's alarms!

Glory and love to the men of old. Their sons may copy their virtues bold, Courage in heart and sword in hand, Ready to fight or ready to die, for Fatherland! Who needs bidding to dare, by a trumpet

Who lacks pity to spare, when the field is Who would fly from a foe, if alone, or last? And boast he was true, as cowards might do When peril is past? Glory and love to the men of old, etc.

Now to home again we come, The long and fiery strife of battle over; Rest is pleasant after toil as hard as ours Beneath a stranger sun.

Many a maiden fair is waiting here To greet her truant soldier lover, And many a heart will fail and brow grow pale,
To hear the tale of peril he has run! Glory and love to the men of old, etc.

The unhappy Marguerite, shunned by her companions and deserted by all save the faithful Siebel, is brooding within the cottage, fearing to meet her brother, who has just returned from the war. Mephistopheles, not content with the evil he has already wrought returns to taunt the maiden with her fault, and sings this insulting and literally infernal song, each verse of which ends with a mocking laugh.

Hearken to my love-lorn pleading; Let thy heart be interceding, Awake, love, and hear! Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! ha! Don't come down until, my dear, The nuptial ring appear
On thy finger sparkling clearly—
The wedding-ring—the ring shineth clear.
Ha! ha! ha! etc.

Caterina! cruel cruel! Cruel to deny to him who loves thee—
And for thee doth mourn and sigh—
A single kiss from thy rosy lips. Thus to slight a faithful lover, Who so long hath been a rover, Too bad, I declare! Ha, ha, ha, ha, ha! Not a single kiss, my dear, Unless the ring appear! Ha, ha, ha, ha! etc.

Plancon's Mephistopheles was invariably a finished performancewitty, elegant, debonaire and sonorous. It is a polished Devil that he pictured; yet beneath the polish we could see the sinister Satan ever present. In his record of this mocking serenade he is at his best,

The Death of Valentine

Morte di Valentino (Death of Valentine)

By Antonio Scotti, Baritone, and Grand Opera Chorus

(In French) 88282 12-inch, $3.00

Leaving the wounded Valentine on the ground, the assailants rapidly depart, and the crowd of soldiers and women assemble around the dying soldier, the chorus here crying out in accents of pity, in which Marguerite joins. Valentine, seeing his sister, utters curses upon her, the solemnity of which is enhanced by the sustained trumpet tones in the accompaniment. The throng endeavor to mitigate the dying man's anger, and Marguerite begs forgiveness, but Valentine dies with the curse upon his lips.

This dramatic scene is vividly pictured in the wonderful painting by Kreling, reproduced on the opposite

Scene de L'Église (I) (Church Scene, Part I) By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Marcel Journet, Bass (In French) 89035 12-inch, $4.00

We now come to the impressive and almost terrible scene outside the church.

Marguerite, cursed by her dying brother, abandoned by all but the faithful Siebel, is kneeling at a small altar. Fearing to enter, and endeavoring to seek consolation in prayer, she supplicates Heaven to accept her repentance.

MARGUERITE:
Oh, Thou who on Thy throne
Giv'st an ear for repentance!
Here, before Thy feet, let me pray!
MEPHISTOPHELES (invisible):
No! thou shalt pray no more!
Let her know ere she prayeth,
Demons of ill, what is in store!
CHORUS OF DEMONS:
Marguerite!
MARGUERITE (faintly):
Who calls me?
DEMONS:
Marguerite!
MARGUERITE (terrified):
I falter—afraid!
Oh! save me from myself!
Has even now the hour of torture begun!

MEPHISTOPHELES (tounting her):
Recollect the old time, when the angels, caressing,
Did teach thee to pray.
Recollect how thou camest to ask for a blessing
At the dawn of the day!
When thy feet did fall back, and thy breath it did falter
As though to ask for aid;
Recollect thou wast then of the rite and the altar
In thine innocence afraid!
And now be glad and hear
Thy playmates do claim thee from below, to their home!
The worm to welcome thee, the fire to warm thee,
Wait but till thou shalt come!

As this terrible prophecy is heard from the invisible Evil Spirit, Marguerite is overcome with terror and sinks down almost fainting.

The unhappy girl, beside herself with terror, cries out wildly:

Ah! what sound in the gloom,
Is beneath me, around me?
Angels of wrath? is this your sentence of cruel doom?

PAINTED BY MARGUERITE AND THE TEMPTER

Then as the chorale is heard from within the church, she endeavors to break the encircling Satanic spell and kneels again in prayer.

Choir (within the church):
When the book shall be unsealed,
When the future be revealed,
What frail mortal shall not yield?
MARGUERITE:

And I, the frailest of the frail,
Have most need of Thy forgiveness!

MEPHISTOPHELES:

No! Let them pray, let them weep!
But thy sin is deep, too deep,
To hope forgiveness! No!

CHOIR:
Where shall human sinner be,
How lie hid in earth and sea,
To escape eternity?
MARGUERITE (wildly):

MARGUERITE (wildly):
Ah, the hymn is around and above me,
It bindeth a cord 'round my brow!

MEPHISTOPHELES:
Farewell, thy friends who love thee!
And thy guardians above thee!
The past is dono! the payment now!

MARGUERITE AND CHOIR:
O Thou! on Thy throne, who dost hear me, Let a tear of mercy fall near me, To pity and save!

MEPHISTOPHELES:
Marguerite! Mine art thou!
MARGUERITE: Ah!

Tormented beyond further endurance, the unhappy girl's reason gives way, and with a terrible cry she falls lifeless before the church.

Words are pitiful things in describing such a scene as this, given as these two artists render it. The conflict in the soul of Marguerite, the taunting apostrophe of Mephistopheles as he strives to prevent his victim from praying, while the sombre strains of the Dies trae issue from the church, form a musical picture which cannot be adequately described.

The two records on which this great scene have been impressed are among the most effective in the Faust series. THE WALPURGIS NIGHT

At the period of the first production of Faust, a ballet was an absolutely essential part of an opera, if it were to be given at the Paris Opera, though to-day it is seldom performed.

Gounod placed his ballet between the death of Valentine and the Prison Scene; called it a Walpurgis Night, set it in a mountain fastness amid ruins, and called to the scene the classic queens, Helen, Phryne and Cleopatra, who danced to weird and distorted versions of melodies from the opera.

Ballet Music (Part I-Valse, "Les Nubiennes")
By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris 58015 12-inch, $1.00

The first part, which in the opera accompanies the dance of the Nubian Slaves, is a most striking portion, beginning with introductory chords, followed by the violins in this delicious melody:

afterward repeated with bassoon obbligato.

Ballet Music No. 2—Adagio (Cleopatra and the Golden Cup)
By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris
58018 12-inch, $1.00

The second part is the adagio movement accompanying the scene in which the Nubian Slaves drink from golden cups the poisons of Cleopatra, who herself moistens her lips from a vase in which she has dissolved her most precious pearls.

Ballet Music Nos. 5 and 6 (Les Trovennes et Variation)

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris 58020 12-inch. $1.00

These two parts are heard during the appearance of the goddess Phrune, who rises, a veiled apparition, and commands the dance to recommence.

Ballet Music-Finale. "Danse de Phryne"

By L'Orchestre Symphonique, Paris

58021 12-inch. $1.00

The finale is brisk in movement, rising to a wild climax and ending suddenly with a crashing chord. It is a most effective and exciting bit of ballet composition, and accompanies the dance of Phryne, who surpasses all her rivals and wins the favor of Faust, arousing the anger and jealousy of the courtesans—Helen, Cleopatra, Aspasia and Lais—and the dance develops into a bacchanalian frenzy, graphically pictured in Gounod's music.

SCENE—The Prison Cell of Marguerite

The short final act of Faust is truly one of the grandest of operatic compositions. Soethe's story giving Gounod ample opportunity for some most dramatic writing.

Marguerite's reason is gone—grief and remorse have driven her insane, and in a frenzy she has destroyed her child. Condemned to death, she lies in prison, into which Mephistopheles and Faust, defying bolts and bars, have entered.

ing on a pallet of straw, Faust cries:

and as the full measure of his own guilt comes to him, continues: MARGUERITE (awaking):
Ah, do I hear once again, the song of time gone by-'Twas not the cry of the demons—'Tis his own voice I hear!

Oh, what anguish! She lies there at my feet A young and lovely being, imprisoned here As if herself, not I, were guilty!
No wonder that her fright has reason ta'en away!

Marguerite! Marguerite!

She forgets all but that her loved one is before her, and sings in a transport of love:

Gazing at the unhappy girl, who is sleep-

MARGUERITE: Ah! I love thee only! Since thou cam'st to find me No tears more shall blind me! Take me up to Heaven,

To Heaven by thy aid!

FAUST (supporting her tenderly): Yes, I love thee only! Let who will, now goad Or mock me, or upbraid. Earth will grow as Heaven. By thy beauty made!

Attends! voici la rue (This is the Fair)

By Geraldine Farrar and Enrico Caruso (In French) 89034 12-inch, $4.00

Marguerite's mind wandering, she sings dreamily of the Fair, where first Faust appeared to her: 'Tis the Fair!

Where I was seen by you, in happy days gone by, The day your eye did not dare To meet my eye!

Marguerite now rehearses the first meeting with Faust, his respectful greeting, and her modest and dignified reply:

"High born and lovely maid, forgive my humble duty;

Let me your willing slave, attend you home to-day?"
"No my lord! not a lady am I, nor yet a beauty,
Not a lady, not a beauty,
And do not need an arm to help me on my way!"

FAUST (in despair) Come away! If thou lov'st me!

MARGUERITE (dreamily, her thoughts in the past): How my garden is fresh and fair!

And through the still evening air
A cloud of dew, with perfume wreathing;
Hark! how the nightingale above
To every glowing crimson rose
Fondly murmurs thy love! FAUST (urging her):
Yes! but come! They shall not harm thee! Come away!
There is yet time to save thee! Marguerite! Thou shalt not perish!
MARGUERITE (listlessly):
"Tis all too late! Here let me die!
Farewell! My memory live to cherish!

Every flower is incense breathing.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-GOUNOD'S FAUST

The impassioned duet then follows, Faust endeavoring to persuade her to escape; but the poor weak mind cannot grasp the idea of safety. The duet is interrupted by the impatient Mephistopheles, whose brutal "Alerte" begins the final trio.

Trio—Alerte! ou vous êtes perdus! (Then Leave Her!)

Mephistopheles, fearing the coming of the jailers, and uncertain of his own power, cries out: What does he here! He who forbade me to

Then leave her, then leave her, or remain to your shame; pray!

If it please you to stay, mine is no more the MEPHISTOPHELES (to Faust):

game! MARGUERITE (in horror, recognizing the Evil One, the cause of all her woes): Who is there! Who is there! Dost thou see, there in the shadow

With an eye like a coal of fire!

Let us go, ere with dawn
Doth justice come on;
Hark! the horses panting in the courtyard below. To bear us away! Come, ere 'tis day; or stay and behold her undone!

As he sings, the tramping and neighing of horses are heard in the accompaniment.

MARGUERITE (with fresh courage, defying him): Away, for I will pray! (in rapture) Holy Angels, in Heaven bless'd My spirit longs with thee to rest! FAUST: Come, mine own, Ere 'tis too late to save thee!

The inspiring trio, perhaps the most thrilling and moving of all operatic compositions, then commences; Marguerite continuing her prayer, Faust urging her to follow him, while Mephistopheles, in desperation, repeats his warning to Faust.

MEPHISTOPHELES: Let us leave her! Come or be lost, for the day is near! Come away! the dawn is grey, Come, ere they claim thee!

FAUST: Come with me! Come, wilt thou not hear?
Lean on my breast. The early dawn is grey.
O come! I'm here to save thee! ARGUERITE:
Holy angels, in Heaven bless'd,
My spirit longs with thee to rest!
Great Heaven, pardon grant, I implore thee,
For soon shall I appear before thee!
O save me! ere I perish forever;
To my despair give ear, I pray thee!
Holy angels, in Heaven bless'd,
My spirit longs with thee to rest! (She dies) My spirit longs with thee to rest! (She dies.)

At the close of the trio, Mephistopheles is about to triumph over the soul of his victim, when a company of angels appear and announce that Marguerite is saved. The Evil One, dragging Faust with him, disappears in a fiery abyss.

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Text by Alphonse Royer and Gustave Waez, adapted from a drama of Baculard-Darnaud, "Le Comte de Comminges." Music by Gaetano Donizetti. In its present form it was first produced at the Académie. Paris. December 2, 1840. First London production February 16, 1847. Produced in America July 29, 1853.

Cast

ALPHONSO XI, King of Castile	Baritone
FERDINAND, a young novice of the Convent of St. James of Compostella	L ₀ .
afterwards an officer
DON GASPAR, the King's Minister
BALTHAZAR, Superior of the Convent of St. James
LEONORA DI GUSMANN, the King's favorite	oprano
INEZ, her confidante	oprano

Courtiers, Guards, Monks, Attendants, etc.

Scene and Period . The action is supposed to take place in Castile, about the year 1340.

Favorita so abounds with charming airs, fine music and striking dramatic situations that it is difficult to account for the neglect of it in America. The opera was revived, it is true, in 1905, with Caruso, Walker, Scotti and Plancon, but has not since been given.

However, for the consolation of those who admire Verdi's beautiful work, the Victor has rendered all the best airs and several of the stirring concerted numbers, so that the opera, given by famous artists, may be enjoyed in the comfort and seclusion of the home.

ACT I

SCENE—The Monastery of St. James

The rise of the curtain discloses a Spanish cloister with its secluded garden and weatherstained wall, while in the distance is a glimse of the tiled roofs of the city. Ferdinand, a novice in the monastery, confesses to the Prior, Balthazar, that he has seen a beautiful woman and has fallen in love with her. He describes his meeting with the fair one in a lovely song, Una vergine.

BALTHAZAR: Ah, my son, my life's latest solace, May thy innocence rescue thee still! Thou, thou who shouldst be my successor, And all my solemn duties fill. FERDINAND:

Ah, father, I love her!

BALTHAZAR: This woman, wretched one! oh, knowest thou Who has lur'd thee thus to shame? Knowest thou her, for whom thy holiest vow Is forfeit? Her rank—her name?

FERDINAND: I know her not; but I love her!

BALTHAZAR:

Begone! too profane! Fly these cloisters Far, far from hence!-avoid my sight.

FERDINAND (in rapture): Yes, ador'd one! this heart's dearest idol! For thee I will break ev'ry tie! To thee all my soul I surrender— At thy dear feet content to die! Forgive me! Father, I go! BALTHAZAR:

Hence, audacious! away in madness! I'll not curse thee! no—depart! If Heaven spare thee, soon in sadness, Thou'lt hither bring a broken heart! FERDINAND:

Ah, dear Idol! this heart so enchaining, In vain thy spell I strive to break!

To thee only my truth maintaining,
My cloister I forsake!

CARUSO AS FERDINAND

The Prior's pleading fails to restore Ferdinand to his duty, and he leaves the convent to search for the beautiful unknown. As he goes he turns and stretches out his arms toward Balthazar, who averts his head.

The scene changes to the Island of Leon, where Inez, an attendant of Leonora, and a chorus of maidens are gathering flowers. They sing a melodious chorus.

Bei raggi lucenti (Ye Beams of Gold) on his way to the Isle at Leonora's request.

Ferdinand, who, shortly after his departure from the monastery, had received a note bidding him come to the lsle of Leon, now arrives in a boat, blindfolded, is assisted to land by the maidens, and the bandage removed. He gazes around him wonderingly, and asks Inez the name of the unknown lady who has sent for him. She smilingly refuses, and tells him only her mistress may reveal the secret. Leonora now appears, and the maidens depart. A tender love scene follows, but the Favorite is anxious, fearing that Ferdinand will learn that she is the King's mistress. She shows him a parchment which she says will insure his future, and then bids him leave her forever.

Fia vero! lasciarti! (Fly From Thee!).

LEONORA:

Thy vows and thy love!
No longer regret me—
Mine image remove.
The rose tho' she fair be,
A canker that wears,
Can never restor'd be
By anguish or tears!

Farewell! Go; forget me!

By anguish or tears!

Inez enters and whispers to Leonora that the King has arrived at the villa. Leonora gives Ferdinand the parchment and exits hastily. He reads it and is delighted to find that it is a captain's commission, and declares that he will win great honors to lay at the feet of his love.

ACT II

SCENE-Gardens of the Alcazar Palace

The King enters and admires the beauty of the palace, which he has just acquired from the Moors by the victory of his army, led by the young captain, Ferdinand. A message comes from Balthazar, the King's father-in-law, who is at the head of the powerful Church party, and Alfonso is threatened with the wrath of the Church if he does not give up Leonora. In a fine air he declares he will not submit.

He consents to the marriage, however, and announcing that they must prepare to wed in an hour, goes out with Ferdinand. Leonora is distracted with the knowledge that she must tell her secret to her lover. She calls Inez, and bidding her seek out Ferdinand and reveal all, goes to her apartments to prepare for the wedding. Inez prepares to obey, but on her way is arrested by the order of the King.

The King enters with Ferdinand, to whom he gives the title of Count of Zamora. Leonora appears and is overjoyed to see Ferdinand still looking at her lovingly, not knowing that Inez has failed in her mission, and that he is yet ignorant of her secret.

The ceremony is performed and the pair are presented to the Court, but are met with cold and averted looks. Ferdinand, although not aware of the cause, resents this and is about to draw his sword when Balthazar enters and demands peace.

When he learns of the wedding he is horrified, and tells Ferdinand he has married the King's mistress. Ferdinand is furious and denounces the King, who, seized with sudden temorse, begins the great finale to Act III.

ACT IV

SCENE—The Cloisters of the Monastery

The opening number in this act is the impressive Splendon plu belle, considered by many critics to be the finest of the Favorita numbers. The scene represents the cloister at the convent of St. James of Compostella, illumined by the rays of the rising sun. The monks have assembled to welcome back the prodigal Ferdinand, who, heartbroken at the falseness of Leonora, is returning to renew his vows. The ceremonies are conducted by Balthazar, who segins this great number.

Balthazar entreats him to lift his eyes from earthly things and contemplate the stars, which typify a forgiving Heaven.

BALTHAZAR AND CHORUS:

Up to them the penitent prayers
Of a purified soul ascend,

And carry back peace and happiness!

The monks now go into the chapel to prepare for the final rites, and Ferdinand, left alone, casts a look behind him to the world he has left forever, and sings his lovely Spirto gentil.

Caruso's Spirto gentil, which was the gem of the recent Metropolitan revival, is given with dazzling brilliancy and with that luscious quality of voice so satisfying to the ear. The record is a supremely heautiful one, while the accompaniment is most delicate and pleasing.

Ferdinand:

Then like a dream all sadly ending,

Grief alone thou leav'st, phantom of love!

Signor de Tura furnishes a lower priced Italian version, while Mr. Williams' rendering is also one of beauty and power.

The monks now lead Ferdinand to the chapel. Leonora, who has come hither disguised as a novice to entreat forgiveness of her lover, hears him take the final vows and despairingly falls at the altar. Ferdinand comes from the chapel, and seeing a poor novice, assists him to rise. He is at first horrified to recognize Leonora, and bids her begone, but she pleads for mercy.

Fidelio must ever be regarded with great interest as being the only opera written by one of the greatest composers. Originally given as Fidelio, it was rewritten and condensed into two acts by Breuning, still a third revision being made in 1814 by Treitschke. At the time of the second production in 1806 the title was changed to Leonore, Beethoven writing a new overture, now known as Leonore No. 3. A portion of this splendid number has been played here by Prvor's Band.

BEETHOVEN (1770-1827)

Leonore Overture No. 3

By Arthur Pryor's Band (Double-faced-See below)

35181 12-inch. $1,25

The action of the opera occurs in a fortress near Seville. Don Florestan, a Spanish nobleman, has been imprisoned here for life, and to make his fate certain his mortal enemy, Don Pizano, Governor of the prison, has announced his death, meanwhile putting the unfortunate man in the lowest dungeon, where he is expected to die by gradual starvation, thus rendering unnecessary a resort to violent means.

One of the best numbers in the opera is this fine air in D minor, which has been sung for the Victor by Mr. Goritz.

Ha, welch ein Augenblick (Fateful Moment)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone

(In German) 64165 10-inch, $1.00

In this the wicked Governor unfolds his hatred and his malignant intentions toward Florestan.

GOVERNOR:
Fateful moment! My revenge is near!
Long I've waited for this hour,
Fearful lest he should escape me!
Over my enemy I triumph;
He who would my life have taken!
Oh, fateful moment!
Ah, what a day is this!
My vengeance shall be sated,
And thou, thy doom is fated.
Once in the dust I trembled
Beneath thy conquering steel,
But fortune's wheel is turning
In torments thou art burning
The victim of my hate!

An extremely pleasant and agreeable person this Spanish Governor must have been! Coritz, whose Pizarro is one of his greatest impersonations, sings this striking air in a highly effective manner, fairly exuding the spirit of revenge.

Don Florestan, however, has a devoted wife who refuses to believe the report of his leath. Disguising herself as a servant, and assuming the name of Fidelio, she secures employment with Rocco, the head jailor. Rocco's daughter falls in love with the supposed handsome youth, and he is soon in such high favor that he is permitted to accompany Rocco on his visits to the prisoner.

Hearing that the Minister of the Interior is coming to the prison to investigate the supposed death of Florestan, the Governor decides to murder him, and asks Rocco's help. Fidelio overhears the conversation and gets Rocco to allow her to dig the grave. Just as Don Pizamo is about to strike the fatal blow, Fidelio rushes forward, proclaims herself the wife of the prisoner and shields him. The Governor is astonished for a moment, but recovers himself and is about to sacrifice both, when a flourish of trumpets announces the coming of the Minister, and Don Pizarro is soon disgraced, while Florestan is pardoned and given back to his faithful wife.

THE STORY

One of the most melodious of Wagner's operas, and the most popular in Germany to-day, Fliegende Hollunder is also the one which was most promptly condemned by the critics after its production. Its present vogue is a notable example of the change in musical taste since 1843.

Wagner was led to write the Flying Dutchman after reading Heine's legend of the unhappy mariner, who, after trying long in vain to pass the Cape of Good Hope, had sworn that he would not desist if he had to sail on the ocean to eternity. To punish his blasphemy he is condemned to the fate of the Wandering Jew, his only hope of salvation lying in his release through the devotion unto death of a woman; and to find such a maiden he is allowed every seven years to go on shore.

Flying Dutchman Overture

By Pryor's Band 31787 12-inch. $1.00

The overture is a complete miniature drama, embodying the events of the opera to follow. Driven by the gale, the Phantom Ship approaches the shore, while amid the fury of the tempest is heard the theme of The Curse:

The storm increases and reaches its height in a wonderful piece of writing. No composer ever succeeded in portraying a raging storm with such vivid effect. Amid a lull in the tempest, we hear the melancholy complaint of the Dutchman from the great air in the first act, "Wie oft . . . Mein Grab, es schloss sich nicht?"

CAST OF THE OPERA IN

HANDWRITING

(My grave—I find it not!) A gleam of hope appears in the Redemption theme, and a joyous strain is heard from the sailors of Daland's ship, which is safe in the harbor.

Thus the various events of the drama are presented in miniature; and the overture is in fact a complete résumé of the opera, summarizing the leading motifs. It is superbly played by Mr. Pryor's fine organization.

ACT I

SCENE-The Coast of Norway

The curtain rises showing a rocky sea coast in Norway, with the ship of Daland anchored near the shore. As the crew furl the sails, Daland goes ashore, and climbing the cliff. sees that he is only seven miles from home, but as he must wait for a change in the wind, bids the crew go below and rest.

The Steersman remains on watch, and to keep awake sings a sailor ballad:

STEERSMAN:

ERNSMAN:
Through thunder and wars of distant seas,
My maiden, come I near!
Over towering waves, with southern breeze,
My maiden am I here!

My maiden, were there no south wind. I never could come to thee; fair south wind, to me be kind!
My maiden, she longs for me!
Ho-yo-ho! Hallo-ho!

From the shores of the south, in far-off lands,

I oft on thee have thought;
Through thunder and waves from Moorish strands,
A gift I thee have brought.

A girt I thee nave brought.

My maiden, praise the sweet south wind—
I bring thee a golden ring.
O fair south wind, to me be kind!

My maiden doth spin and sing.

Ho-yo-ho! Hallo-ho!

He soon falls asleep, however, and fails to see the Flying Dutchman, which now appears with blood-red sails and black masts, for one of her periodical visits.

Wie oft in Meeres tiefsten Schlund (In Ocean's Deepest Wave) By Otto Goritz, Baritone (In German) 74230 12-inch, $1.50

The spectral crew furl the blood-red sails and drop the rusty anchor. The Dutchmon stands on the deck, and delivers his great soliloquy. He gloomily gazes at the land, and ings his preliminary recitative:

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-FLYING DUTCHMAN

VAN ROOY AS THE DUTCHMAN

The term is past, and once again are ended the seven long years: The weary sea casts me upon the land. Ha! haughty ocean! A little while and thou again wilt bear me! Though thou art changeful, unchanging is my doom! Release, which on the land I seek for, Never shall I meet with!

True, thou heaving ocean, am I to thee Until thy latest billow shall break, Until at last thou art no more!

An introduction in 6-8 allegro molto leads to the aria:

When thou didst tell me how to gain release?

When thou dust tell hie now to ken A single hope with me remaineth, A single hope still standeth fast;
When all the dead are raised again,

Ye worlds, your curse continue not! Endless destruction be my lot!

Destruction then I shall attain.

DUTCHMAN

CHMAN:
Engulf'd in ocean's deepest wave,
Oft have I long'd to find a grave;
But ah! a grave, I found it not!
I oft have blindly rushed along, To find my death sharp rocks among; But ah! my death, I found it not. And oft, the pirate boldly daring,
My death I've courted from the sword,
Here, cried I, work thy deeds unsparing, My ship with gold is richly stor'd!

Alas, the sea's rapacious son, But sign'd the cross, and straight was gone Nowhere a grave, no way of death!
Mine is a curse of living breath.
Thee do I pray Bright angel sent from Heaven.
Was there a fruitless hope to mock me given,

Daland comes on deck and is astonished to see the strange ship. He wakes the Steersman and they hail the stranger, who asks Daland to give him shelter in his home. offering him treasure from his ship. On hearing that Daland has a daughter, he proposes marriage. The simple Norwegian is dazzled by such an honor from a man apparently so wealthy, and freely consents, providing his daughter is pleased with the stranger.

The wind changes and Daland sails for his home, the Dutchman promising to follow at once.

ACT II

FIRST ACT SETTING USED IN MUNICH

SCENE—A Room in Daland's Home

Traft ihr das Schiff (Senta's Ballad)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

(In German) 88116 12-inch. $3.00

The maidens are busily spinning—all but Senta, Daland's daughter, who is idly dreamng, with her eyes fixed on the fanciful portrait of the Flying Dutchman which hangs on the escribing the unhappy lot of the man ondemned to sail forever on the sea unse redeemed by the love of a woman. hen with emotion she cries:

The legend of the unhappy Hollander has made a strong impression on the young girl, and he seems almost a reality to her. The maidens ridicule her, saying that her lover, inc, will be jealous of the Dutchman. Senta rouses herself and commences the ballad, which begins with the motive of The Curse. With growing enthusiasm she goes on,

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-FLYING DUTCHMAN

This is the theme of Redemption by Woman's Love, and as Senta sings the beautifully tender and melodious phrase, the runs toward the portrait with outstretched arms, hardly conscious of the now alarmed maidens.

SENTA:
Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Saw ye the ship on the raging deep
Blood-red the canvas, black the mast?
On board unceasing watch doth keep
The vessel's master pale and ghast!
Hui! How roars the wind! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Hui! How bends the mast! Yo-ho-hoe! Yo-ho-hoe!
Hui! Like an arrow she flies
Without aim, without goal, without rest!
(She gazes at the portrait with growing excitement)
Yet can the spectre seaman
Be freed from the curse infernal,
Find he a woman on earth
Who'll pledge him her love eternal.
Ah! that the unhappy man may find her
Pray, that Heaven may soon
In pity grant him this boon!

Mme. Gadski, whose Senta is always a fine impersonaon, sings this dramatic number most expressively. The ficult attack on the high G, which occurs several times, beautifully taken and perfectly recorded.

The maidens are so alarmed at Senta's outburst of passion that they run out and I Eric, who meets them at the door with news of the Dutchman's arrival. They run to the shore while Eric remains and reproaches Senta. She refuses to listen and the distracted lover runs out.

GADSKI AS SENTA

Suddenly the door opens and the Dutchman appears. Senta is transfixed with surprise as she involuntarily compares the portrait with the living man. A long silence follows. The Dutchman, his eyes fixed on the glowing face of the maiden, advances toward her. Daland soon observes that the others pay no attention to him, and well satisfied with the apparent understanding between the stranger and his daughter, leaves them together.

The Hollander sees in Senta the angel of whom he had dreamed and who is to banish the curse, and she sees the original of the portrait on which the sympathy of her girlish and romantic heart had been lavished. The Hollander asks Senta if she agrees with her father's choice of a husband. She gladly consents, and a long love duet follows, the final theme of which is "faith above all."

Daland re-enters and is delighted to find such a complete understanding between the two. He invites the Dutchman to the fête that evening in celebration of the safe arrival of the Norwegian ship. Senta repeats her vow unto death, and a magnificent trio closes the act.

DESTINN AS SENTA

ACT III SCENE—Daland's Harbor

This scene shows the ships anchored in the bay near Daland's home. Daland's vessel gay with lanterns, in contrast to the gloom and silence which marks the Dutchman's lip. A gay Norwegian chorus is followed by a spirited hornpipe with a most peculiar rythm. Bits of these numbers are to be heard in the Pryor's Band records of the Overture of Fantasia.

The maidens now appear with baskets of eatables, and are joyfully received by the ilors. Having supplied the wants of their own countrymen, they approach the Dutchman's ip and call to the sailors, but only a ghostly silence rewards them. Piqued at this neglect, ey turn their remaining baskets over to the Norwegian sailors and return home.

Suddenly the sea around the Dutchman begins to rise, and a weird glow lights the ship

The crew appear and begin a sepulchral chant, which causes the gay Norwegians to cease singing and cross themselves in terror, and finally to go below. With mocking laughter, the crew of the Dutchman also disappear and the ship is in darkness.

Senta and Eric appear and a stormy scene ensues. He has heard of her engagement to the strange captain, and is beside himself. He kneels and begs her to have pity on him. Suddenly the Hollander comes upon the scene and is horror-stricken at the tableau.

Believing Senta to be false, he cries, "All is lost; Senta, farewell!"

The crews of both ships appear and the townsmen rush to the scene. man reveals his identity and declares himself cursed forever. He springs upon his ship—the crimson sails expand as if by magic and the ship departs, with the crew chanting their weird refrain.

Senta, in wild exaltation, rushes to the highest rock, calling to the departing vessel, "I am faithful unto death," and throws herself into the sea. The Flying Dutchman sinks beneath the water, and rising from the wreck can be seen the forms of Senta and the Dutchman clasped in each other's arms. The curse has been banished—true love has triumphed!

MISCELLANEOUS FLYING DUTCHMAN RECORDS

Flying Dutchman Fantasia

Pagliacci—Prologue

By Pryor's Band 35158 12-inch, $1.25

This brilliant selection contains some of the finest music of this wonderful masterpiece, in which Wagner has portrayed the story of the Dutchman condemned to sail forever on the stormy sea unless redeemed by the love of a woman.

Two variations of the exquisite theme representing Redemption by Woman's Love are given. We first hear the magnificent strain played by the orchestra in Act Ill when Senta plunges into the sea, after the Dutchman, believing her false, has sailed away; then follows the theme first heard in Senta's ballad, one of the finest numbers in the opera. Then appears the second of the two principal themes: the Flying Dutchman motive:

a weird melody representing the restless wanderer. In strong contrast comes the rollicking chorus of Daland's sailors, "Steersman, Leave the Watch," and the fantastic dance which follows:

The Fantasia is brought to an effective close with a portion of the great duet between Senta and the Dutchman, leading up to a splendid climax.

Verdi's opera of La Forza del Destino was never a great success; its story, which is taken from a drama of the Duke of Rivas, entitled Don Alvaro o la Fuerzer del Sino, being doleful and so crowded with horrors that not even the beautiful music could atone for the gloomy plot. Old opera-goers well remember the last production of the opera at the Academy in 1881, with Annie Louise Cary, Campanini, Galassi and Del Puente in the cast.

The only production in America subsequent to that time was that of the Lombardi Opera Company in San Francisco several years ago.

The overture is a most interesting and rather elaborate one.

(Overture, Part I Overture, Part II La Scala Orchestra 68009 12-inch, $1.25

It opens with a trumpet blast which sufficiently foreshadows the tragic character of the Pera, this being followed by an air in the minor, leading up to a striking theme which steals a softly from the strings.

This is the beautiful subject of the Madre Pietosa, afterwards heard with such mag-in the opera.

Part II opens with a light and pretty pastoral melody quite in the Italian vein. A Otably brilliant passage for strings brings us again to the Madre Pietosa melody, this time elivered in a triumphant fortissimo, after which the overture works up to a truly animated ad powerful finale.

ACT I

SCENE-Drawing Room in the House of the Marguis of Calatrava

Don Alvaro, a noble youth from India, becomes enamored with Donna Leonora, the daughter of the Marquis of Calatrava, who is strongly opposed to the alliance. Leonora, knowing her father's aversion, determines to make her escape with Alvaro, aided by Curra, her confidant.

She is in the act of eloping when her father appears, and is accidentally slain by her lover. Leonora, horror-stricken, rushes to her father, who curses her with his dying breath.

ACT II

SCENE I-An Inn at Hornacuelos

The second act begins in a village inn, where Don Carlo, son of the murdered Marquis, is disguised as a student in order to better avenge his father. Leonora, who is traveling in male attire, arrives at the inn, and is horror-stricken at seeing her brother, who has swom to kill her lover Alvaro and herself. She flees to the convent of Hornacuelos, arriving at night.

SCENE II—The Convent of Hornacuelos

Kneeling in the moonlight, she prays to the Virgin to protect her. This beautiful prayer is splendidly sung here by Mme. Boninsegna, accompanied by the chorus of La Scala.

Madre, pietosa Vergine (Holy Mother, Have Mercy)

By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano, and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) 92031 12-inch, $3.00

The effect produced by the solo voice with the background of male voices singing the Venite in the chapel is powerful and thrilling, and forms one of the finest of the Victor reproductions of Verdi's scenes.

LEONORA:

Oh, Holy Virgin,
Have mercy on my sins!
Send help from Heaven

It gives faith, comfort,
And quiet to my soul.
I will go to the holy sanctuary.
The pious father cannot refuse to receive me.
O Lord! Have mercy on me,
Nor abandon me.
(She rings the bell of the convent.)

Leonora is admitted to the convent by the Abbot, to whom she confesses. He procure her a nun's robe and directs her to a cave, assuring her that a curse will rest upon anyone who seeks to know her name or to enter her abode. In her gratitude she sings the second great air.

La Vergine degli angeli (May Angels Guard Thee) By Celestina Boninsegna, Soprano, and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) 91075 10-inch, $2.00

Again we have the effect of the solemn chant of the priests blending with the prayer of Leonora.

THE FRIARS:

La Vergine degli Angeli
Vi copra del suo manto,
E voi protegga vigile
Di Dio l'Angelo santo.

LEONORA:

LEONORA:

Let the Holy Virgin
Cover you with her mantle,
And the angels of God
Watch over you!

(Leonora kisses the hand of the Abbot and goes to her retreat. The monks return to the church.)

ACT III

SCENE—A Military Camp near Velletri

In Act III we are transported to Italy, where we meet Alvaro, who has enlisted in the Spanish army. In a sad but beautiful air he recounts his misfortunes, and appeals to heaver for pity.

Life is a misery . . . In vain I seek death. . . . Seville! . . . Leonora!

prison. . . . The desert educated me; unknown is my royal descent! My ancestors aspired to a throne. Alas! They were beheaded! Oh, when will my misfortune cease? Thou who hast ascended in heaven, all beautiful and pure from mortal sins, do not forget to look on me, a poor sufferer, who without hope fights eagerly for death against destiny! Leonora, help me and have mercy on my sufferings!

In the next scene he saves the life of Don Carlo, whose wanderings in search of vennce have led him to this region. Both having assumed fictitious names, they do not know hother, and swear eternal friendship.

Shortly afterward, during an engagement, Don Alvaro, wounded, is brought in on a tcher by his soldiers. Thinking himself dying, he sends away the soldiers and requests: he be left alone with Don Carlo. The great duet, the finest number in the opera, then

ALVARO (feebly):

Now I die happy let me embrace you . . . farewell!

CARLO: Put thy trust in heaven! Both: Adieu!

The Caruso and Scotti rendition of this number is considered by many to be one of the st perfect and beautiful of all the Red Seal Records. It is certainly the most wonderly lifelike reproduction of these two great voices which could be imagined.

Just at this point it may be well to settle a controversy which has been raging ever since issue of this record in 1906. This argument concerns the identity of the voices in the ening measures, and is the natural result of a remarkable similarity between Caruso's wer register and the medium tones of Scotti's voice. The Victor Catalogue Editor now points himself a court of final appeal, and declares that contrary to the usual impression is Caruso, not Scotti, who begins the record. Here are the opening measures just as sung the artists:

Alvaro, however, does not die, and in the next scene his identity becomes known to Don Carlo, who challenges him. They fight, and Alvaro, thinking he has killed his enemy, resolves to end his days in a monastery.

ACT IV

SCENE-Same as Act II. Scene II

Five years have now elapsed and the last act reveals again the cloister of Hornacuelos, where Alvaro, now Father Raphael, is discovered by Don Carlo, who with a persistence rivaling that of a Kentucky mountaineer, revives the feud and tries to force him to renew the combat. Alvaro finally consents, and they agree to fight in a deserted spot near by. This agreement is expressed in a fiery duet.

Invano Alvaro! (In Vain. Alvaro!)

The host of Victor opera-lovers who are familiar with the wonderful duet from Act |||, by Caruso and Scotti, will note with delight the issue of another famous duet from this opera, sung by Caruso and Amato.

This great scene has been recorded in two parts. Carlo demands that Alvaro renew the feud, but the priest refuses, saying that vengeance is with God. Don Carlo taunts him with a terrible persistence, until the monk, goaded past endurance, consents to fight to the death.

CARLOS:
In vain, Alvaro,
Thou hast hid from the world,
And concealed thy coward heart
With the habit of a monk!
My hate and desire for vengeance
Have enabled me to persist
Until I have discovered your retreat!
In this lonely spot
We shall not be disturbed,
And your blood shall wipe out
The stain upon my honor;
That I swear before God!
ALVARO (recognizing him):
Don Carlos! Thou livest!

CARLOSE

Yellow
ALVARO (recognizing him):

CARLOS:
Yes! and for long years
I have sought and now find thee.
By thy hand I fell,
But God restored my strength
That I may avenge thy crimes!
Here are two swords,
Thy choice now make!
ALVARO:
Leave me! By this holy habit
Thou may'st see my repentance!
CARLOS (in fury):
Coward!
Thou shalt not hide behind thy robes!
ALVARO (agitated):
Coward! Oh, God
Give me strength to forgive thee!

Alvaro recovers his poise and endeavors to appeal to the reason of his enemy, showing him the futility of reopening the feud. Part II begins as follows:

ALVARO (firmly):

ALVARO (firmly):

Thy menaces wild Be heard only by the winds, I cannot listen! Brother, let us submit to fate And the will of God! CARLOS: Thou hast left me A sister deserted and dishonored! No! I swear it! I adore her with a holy love. CARLOS (furiously): Thy cowardly pleadings Cannot move me to pity. Take thy sword and fight! ALVARO: Brother, let me kneel to thee. (He kneels.) CARLOS: Ah, by such an act Thou showest thy base origin!

ALVARO (rising, unable to control himself):
My lineage is brighter than a jewel—
Carlos (sneeringly): A jewel flaw'd and discolored! ALVARO (in fury): Thou liest! Give me a sword. Lead on! CARLOS: At last! ALVARO (recovering himself):
No, Satan shall not thus triumph.
(Throws down his sword.) CARLOS: Then coward, I brand thee with dishonor! (Strikes him.) ALVARO: Oh, God, no more! (To Don Carlos) Defend thyself! Вотн: We both must die, Our hatred will be appeased And Satan will claim us for his own!

ACT V

SCENE-A Wild Spot Near Hornacuelos

The scene changes to the vicinity of Leonora's cave. Pale and worn, the unhappy oman comes from the cave, and in another great air implores Heaven to let her die, as e is unable to forget her lover.

(In Italian) 92027 12-inch. $3.00

LEONORA:
Mercy, oh Lord!
My sorrows are too great to bear.
This fatal love has been my undoing,
But still do I love him,
Nor can I blot his image from my heart;
Yet 'tis Heaven's decree that I shall see him no more!
Oh Lord, let me die,
Since death alone can give me peace!

A storm now breaks, and Leonora retires within the cave just as Alvaro and Carlo apar for the final combat. Alvaro recognizes the spot as an accursed one, but declares at it is a fitting place for the ending of so deadly a feud.

Don Carlo falls mortally wounded, and desiring to repent his sins asks Alvaro, who is own as Father Raphael, to confess him, but the monk is under the curse of the cave and nnot. He goes to call the friar who dwells in the cave; Leonora rushes forth, sees her other wounded and embraces him, but true to his vow made in Act I he makes a dying jort and stabs her to the heart.

This dramatic scene has been put by Verdi into the form of a trio.

Don Alvaro then completes the catalogue of horrors by throwing himself from a cliff st as the monks arrive singing the Miserere. The curtain then falls, evidently because, as a critic has said, every member of the cast being dead, there seems to be no reasonable cuse for keeping it up any longer!

verture

By Sousa's Band By La Scala Orchestra * 35000 12-inch, $1.25 * 62636 10-inch. .75

The overture presents the story of the opera in a condensed form. An introduction with a tender horn passage leads us into the forest. Night is falling and mysterious sounds are heard. The allegm, representing the doubts of the good but vacillating young hunter, begins, and the sound of the magic bullets can be heard as they drop in the melting pot. Next a beautiful melody, portraying love and happiness, appears, but this in turn is succeeded by another mood of distress. At length the triumphant strain indicative of the final victory is sounded, leading up to a solendid climax.

"Sousa's Band has given a stirring performance of this brilliant overture, while the rendition by La Scala Orchestra will please those who prefer orchestral music.

The story of the opera is founded on a German tradition, told among huntsmen, that whoever will sell his soul to Zamiel, the Demon Hunter, may receive seven magic bullets, which will always hit the mark. For each victim whom he succeeds in securing for the Demon, his own life is extended, and he receives a fresh supply of the charmed missiles.

Cuno, head ranger to Ottokar, a Bohemian prince, has two assistants, Max and Caspar, both excellent marksmen. Max is in love with Agnes, Cuno's daughter, who has promised to be his bride only on condition that he proves himself the best shot at a forthcoming contest. This contest, however, is won by Kilian, a peasant. Max, in a dramatic air, bitterly bewails his bad luck.

He believes he is cursed by an evil spirit which causes his hand to fail at the critical ment.

Max: O, I can bear my fate no longer!
E'en hope is banished from my soul!
What unknown grief thus haunts my spirit,
And o'er me works its dark control?
Thro' the forests, thro' the meadows,
Joy was wont with me to stray,
While my rifle, never failing,
Made each bird and beast my prey.
When at length from chase returning,
Ere home rose before my sight,
Agnes, smilling met me,
Cloth'd in beauty's heavenly light.
But now am I by Heaven forsaken
And left—the power of chance to know?
Will hope's long slumber ever waken,
Or am I doomed to endless woe?
Now, methinks, beside her lattice,
I my lovely fair one see:
While her ear seems fondly list'ning,
Every coming sound for me:
See, she fondly waves a welcome,—
Fancy's eye her lover sees;
But her signal gains no answcr,
Save the sigh of whispering trees!
What dark ning power is ruling o'er me?
My anxious bosom fear hath riven,—
Despair hath spread her snares before me:
Does fate rule blindly?
Aid me, Heaven!

Caspar, who has already put himself in the power of Zamiel, sees an opportunity to extend his own days of grace, and advises to seek the magician and secure some of the magic bullets.

Agnes:

Softly sighing, day is dying, Soar my prayer heav'nward flying! Starry splendor shining yonder, Pour on us thy radiance tender! How the golden stars are burning Thro' yon vault of ether blue, But lo, gath'ring o'er the mountains Is a cloud, foreboding storm.

ANNIE:
Comes a gallant youth towards me,
Be he golden hair'd or dark,
Eyes that flash as he regards me,
Him my captive I will mark!

Eyes bent down to earth for shyness, As befits a modest maid, With a stolen look of slyness Yet may ev'rything be said!

And if swift emotion rushes, Shot from answ'ring lip and eye, Nothing worse than maiden blushes Need the gallant stranger spy!

Annie begs Agnes to retire, but the young girl says she will wait for her lover. Left alone, she draws the curtains aside, revealing a starlight night. She exclaims at the beauty of the night, and folding her hands in prayer she delivers the lovely air which is the gem of the opera.

Preghiera di Agatha (Agatha's

By Emilia Corsi, Soprano (Piano acc.)
(In Italian) *62636 10-inch, $0.75

She prays for the safety of her lover, and asks Heaven to watch over them both.

Earth has lull'd her care to rest; Why delays my loitering love? Fondly beats my anxious breast: Where, my Rudolph, dost thou rove? Scarce the breeze among the boughs Wakes a murmur thro' the silence, Save the nightingale, lamenting, Not a sound disturbs the night!

Max arrives, followed by Annie, but seems embarrassed and says he must go to bring in a stag he has shot near the Wolf's Glen. Agnes begs him not to go near that haunted spot but he disregards her warning and goes out.

The scene changes to the Wolf's Glen, where Max meets Caspar, and the magic bullets are cast amid scenes of horror, while the demon Zamiel hovers near awaiting his prey. Max is returning with his prize when he meets the Prince, who asks him to shoot a dove. The hunter complies, just missing Agnes, who has come to the wood in search of her lover. Caspar is wounded by the very bullet which he had intended should slay Agnes at the hands of Max. Zamiel rises and carries off his victim, while Max is forgiven and all ends happily.

The opera is the work of an Italian nobleman, who, although a very wealthy man, is abitious and makes the writing of operas his hobby. Germania is a picturesque and inesting opera, full of local color, describing the Germany of the time of Napoleon, with its my conspiracies; and for this the Baron has written much effective and agreeable musicular action takes place in 1813, at the time of the battle of Leipzig.

PROLOGUE

SCENE—An Abandoned Mill near Nuremberg A company of students, under the leadership of Gioganni Palm, have occupied an old mill, and are shipping sacks of grain, which really contain political documents intended to rouse the people to revolt. Prominent among the students is Worms, who previously had a love affair with Ricke, a young girl who is now betrothed to Loewe, the poet and warm friend of Worms. Loewe is expected to arrive at any moment, and Ricke dreads his coming as she has made up her mind to tell him her guilty secret. Worms, however, divines her purpose and bids her keep silent, as in the duel which was sure to occur Loewe would likelv be the one to die.

Loewe arrives and is joyfully greeted by the conspirators. He encourages them to fresh efforts in his noble aria.

Studenti, udite! (Students, Hear Me!)

The enthusiasm which follows Loewe's great address is rudely interrupted by the arrival of the police, who seize Palm and take him away to his death.

ACT I

SCENE-A Cottage in the Black Forest

Seven years have elapsed. Hither Loepe has come after the disastrous campaign of 1806, which followed the plotting in the old mill. He lives in this hut with his aged mother and the two girls, Ricke and her sister Jane. Worms has disappeared and is supposed to be dead.

Loewe is about to be married to Ricke, and the bridesmaids now arrive to deck the cottage with flowers. Ricke, thinking of her past, is melancholy, but the marriage ceremony is performed and the bride and bridegroom are left alone. Federico clasps her in his arms and sings his beautiful air to the eyes of his bride.

Non chiuder gli occhi vaghi (Close Not Those Dreamy Eyes) By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 87054 10-inch, $2.00

Forgetting the past, Ricke yields herself to the joy of the moment and tenderly kisses him, when suddenly from the forest is heard a familiar voice singing an old student song. Worms!" joyfully cries Federico, and runs out to meet his old friend, who is wasted and battle-scarred.

Worms comes in and is astonished to see Ricke. She looks coldly at him and he uneasily says he must be on his way. Federico protests, but Worms insists and departs. Ricke, overcome by this reminder of her past misfortune, resolves to leave her husband, and writes him a note and flees into the forest. Federico returns, reads the note, and wrongfully concludes that she has fled with Worms.

ACT II

SCENE-A Cellar in Konigsberg

In this underground retreat Worms is again plotting against Napoleon. A meeting of the Council is in progress, when Federico appears and demands that Worms shall fight with him to the death, but Worms, kneeling, asks Federico to kill him. Federico replies with a violent blow in the face, at which Worms decides to fight him, and preparations for the duel are begun. They are interrupted by the entrance of Queen Louise, who suggests that such brave men had better be using their swords for their country. Fired with enthusiasm, the enemies embrace each other and swear to die for Germany.

EPILOGUE

SCENE—The Battlefield of Leipzig

The awful three days' conflict is over and the field is a mass of ruins, battered wheels and dead and wounded men. Ricke searches for the body of Federico that she may lool upon his face once more. She finds him dying, but he recognizes her, and telling her tha the body of Woms is nearby, asks her to forgive him as he himself has done. Ricke looks on the face of the man who had ruined her life and forgives him. She returns to her husband and when he dies in her arms waits beside his body for her own death, which she feels approaching. As the sun sets the defeated Napoleon with the shattered remains of his army is seen retreating.

Gioconda is a work of great beauty, full of wonderful as, duets and ensembles, with fine choral effects, and a miferent ballet. The book is founded on Hugo's "Tyrs gnificent ballet. The book is founded on Hugo's "Tyrant of Padua," and tells a most matic story, which, however, cannot be called inviting, as the librettist has crowded into it nearly all the crimes he could think of!

But the average audience does not concern itself much with these horrors, being engaged in listening to the beautiful music, and admiring the splendid scenes and colorful action. Therefore the story will be but briefly sketched here.

ACT I

SCENE-Street near the Adriatic Shore, Venice

Gioconda, a ballad singer who is in love with Enzo, a Gencese noble and captain of a ship now in the harbor, supports her blind mother, La Cieca, by singing in the streets of Venice. She has attracted the attention of Bamaba, an influential police spy, and he plans to gain her affections.

This is the situation at the rise of the curtain. The stage is filled with people: peasants, sailors, masquers, all in holiday attire. Barnaba is leaning against a pillar, watching the gay scene. The chorus sing their opening number, Sports and Feasting.

Feste! pane! (Sports and Feasting!)

At the close of this number, Barnaba advances and announces the commencement of the Regatta. All hasten to the shore, while Barnaba remains to soliloquize on his plot to secure the lovely Gioconda. Gioconda enters, leading her mother, La Cieca, by the hand, and Barnaba hastily hides behind a column to watch them. La Cieca sings a beautiful air, blessing her daughter for her tender care, and this leads to a trio.

For thee I pray and render thanks to Fate

Gioconda leaves to seek Enzo, but Barnaba stops her and boldly declares that he loves her. She shudders with an instinctive aversion, and bids him stand aside. He attempts to seize her, but she eludes him and makes her escape, leaving the spy furious and planning revenge.

The people now return from the Regatta, bearing the victor on their shoulders. Barnaba, seeing the defeated combatant, Zuane, conceives a plan to deprive Gioconda of her mother, thus leaving him free to carry out his plans. He takes Zuane aside and tells GIOCONDA (tenderly): Place thy dear hand once more in mine Thy steps I'm safely guiding; Here recommence thy daily life, In calm contentment gliding. That heightens thy affection:

Alvise, Chief of the Council, enters with his wife Laura, formerly betrothed to Enzo. Laura pleads for Cieca, and she is protected by Alvise. The blind woman voices her gratitude in this lovely song, which is familiar to most concert-goers.

Voce di donna (Angelic Voice)

By Louise Homer, Contralto (In Italian) 85104 12-inch, $3.00

Although the part of the blind mother, La Cieca, has never been sung by Mme. Homer, she being usually cast for Laura (the superb lady of Venice and rival of Gioconda), this beautiful air has always appealed to her. It is considered the finest single number in Ponchielli's work, and is undoubtedly one of the loveliest gems in this or any other opera.

Certain it is that no Cieca of present memory has ever delivered this romance with such richness of voice and such touching pathos. This beautiful passagewhich is sung as La Cieca presents the rosary, is perhaps the most effective part of the aria.

HOMER AS LAURA

Mme. Homer's singing of this Voce di donna makes this record one of the gems of the Victor's fine production of La Gioconda, and it should form part of every opera collection.

PRELUDE

SCENE-The Walkure's Rock

The Dusk of the Gods, the last part of the tetralogy, consists of three acts and a preluc In the prelude we once more see Brünnhilde on the rock, where she had lain during I magic sleep, and where Siegfried had found her and taken her as his bride. Siegfried, at a brief period of domestic happiness in a cave near by, decides to leave her for awhile search of adventures, and gives her the Nibelung's Ring as a pledge of faith. This ring had obtained when he slew the dragon Fafner, and as the opera progresses it will be se that he is doomed to suffer the consequences of the fatal curse, invoked on every posses of the Ring by Alberich, from whom it was forcibly taken by Wotan.

EDOUARD DE RESZKE AS HAGEN

As the curtain rises Brunnhilde and Siegfried come out of the cave, Signified in full armor and the Valkurie leading her horse by the bridle. She begins her tender address of farewell:

Did I not send thee, sweetest hero, to fresh exploits, frail were my love. But one misgiving fights against it, for fear not wholly thy heart I hold.

gave to thee all that gods had taught: heavenly runes, the richest hoard; but my restoreless maidenhood's strength snatch'd thou from

ACT I

SCENE—Castle of King Gunther

Siegfried joyously sets out on his journey and soon comes to the Court of King Gunther on the Rhine, where dwells also Gunther's sister Gutrune, and their half-brother Hagen, who is a son of Alberich, the dwarf. Hagen knows the history of the Ring and is anxious to restore it to his father, so he artfully tries to win the help of Gunther. Knowing that the hero is approaching the castle, he outlines this scheme, which is to give Siegfried a drink which will make him orget Brünnhilde and fall in love with Gutrune, after which Gunther can win the peerless Britanhilde for himself. Gunther is tempted, and when Siegfried's horn announces his approach

Siegfried greets them as friends, and when offered the magic drink he accepts and mmediately loses all recollection of Brunnhilde. Seeing the lovely Gutrune, who stands with owered eves, he exclaims:

Stegfried (gazing on Gutrune with a kindling eye):

Thou fair one, whose beams My breast have enflamed, Why fall thus thine eyes before mine? (Gutrune looks up at him, blushing.) Ha! sweetest maid! Screen those bright beams! The heart in my breast Burns with their strength.

Gutrune, trembling with emotion, leaves the Hall, and Siegfried, gazing after her, asks Gunther I he has a wife. The King, prompted by Hagen, replies that he knows of one he would wed, but that she is surrounded by a magic fire which he Sannot pass. Siegfried seems trying to remember his past, but fails, looks confused, then suddenly says:

SIEGFRIED (with a sudden start): I-fear not the fire, And thy bride fain will I fetch; For thy own am I And my arm is thine: If Gutrune for wife I may gain!

In order that Brunnhilde may think that it is sunther who has won her, it is agreed that wegfried shall, by means of the Tarnhelm, change himself into Gunther's form. Thinking aly of his reward, Siegfried eagerly departs.

SCENE II-The Walkure's Rock

The scene changes to the Valkyrie Rock again, where Brünnhilde awaits Stegfried's return. She is astonished and alarmed when she sees a stranger approaching, not understanding how he has penetrated through the fiery barrier. It is Stegfried in the form of Gunther. He announces that he is Gunther come to win her for his wife. Brünnhilde, in horror and despair, holds up the Ring, exclaiming:

BRÜNNHILDE:
Stand back! bow to this token!
No shame can touch me from thee
While yet this Ring is my shield.

Siegfried attempts to take it from her and after a struggle, succeeds. As he draws the helpless and despairing Brünnhilde into the cave the curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE-The Rhine near Gunther's Castle

Hagen and Albertch discuss the progress of the plot to regain the Ring. Hagen swears to accomplish it, and Albertch vanishes. Siegfried, in his own form, but wearing the Tarnhelm, arrives, greets him cheerily and says he has gained Gunther's wife for him, but that they are returning home more slowly. Gutrune comes to meet Siegfried, and a long duet follows, after which they go to the Hall. Hagen sounds his horn to summon the vassals and bids them prepare for a feast, as Gunther has taken a bride.

Gunther now arrives in his boat, leading Brünnhilde, who is pale and downcast. Siegfried and Gutrune come out to meet them and Brünnhilde sees Siegfried in his rightful form. She recoils in horror at seeing him with another woman, and regarding her as a stranger. She then perceives the Ring on Siegfried's finger and demands to know where he obtained it. He seems confused and regards the Ring with a puzzled air. Brünnhilde, beginning to comprehend what has occurred, denounces him, and Gunther, beginning to doubt whether Siegfried had kept his oath to respect Brünnhilde as a brother's bride, looks threateningly at him. Siegfried, eager to set himself right, swears the oath of the spear.

The vassals make a ring round Stegfried and Hagen. Hagen holds out his spear; Stegfried lays two fingers of his right hand on its point.

SIEGFRIED:
Haft of war, hallowed weapon!
Hold thou my oath from dishonor!
On this spotless spear-head
I speak the oath:
Spear-point, aid thou my speech!

Where steel e'er can strike me, Strike thou at me: Wher'er death can be dealt me Deal it to me, If she is really wronged,—
If I have injured my friend!

Brünnhilde, unable to contain herself at this evidence of Siegfried's baseness, repeats his oath and denounces him.

GADSKI AS BRÜNNHILDE

Siegfried looks at her in pity, thinking her mad, and goes to the Hall with Gutrune. Brünnhilde, Hagen and Gunther remain behind, the latter in deep depression. Hagen tells Brünnhilde that he will avenge her wrongs. "Thou?" says Brünnhilde, contemptuously.

BRÜNNHILDE:
One angry glance of his glittering eyeball—
That, e'en through his fraudulent shape,
Fell unshadowed on me,—
Would subdue thy most mettlesome daring!

She then tells him that only in his back is he vulnerable, and that no magic protection was placed there because she knew that never would he retreat. Gunther now rouses himself and the three decide that Siegfried must die for his treachery.

ACT III

SCENE I-A Wild Valley near the Rhine

The Rhine nymphs rise to the surface of the water and sing of the Rhinegold. They py Siegfried and ask him to give up the Ring, but he refuses, and they warn him that he hall die that very day. He laughs at the prophecy, and as he watches them swim away, ays lightly:

THE RHINE MAIDENS WARN STEGFRIED-ACT III, SCENE I

SIEGFRIED:

Woman's ways I've learnt to know. The man who resists their smiles They seek by threats to frighten. And when these both are scorned They bait him with bitter words. And yet were Gutrune not my wife, I must have promptly captured One of those pretty maids!

Hunting horns are heard and Siegfried gayly answers with his own. Gunther, Hagen and the hunters descend from the hill and greet him. They camp and begin to eat and drink. Siegfried tells them of his adventure with Mime and the Dragon. Hagen gives him a magic drink which brings back his memory and he goes on to tell of the forest bird and his quest of the lovely Brünnhilde. Gunther begins to listen attentively, but when Siegfried reaches this Part of his narrative, Hagen plunges his spear in Siegfried's back and he falls. Gunther, in Pity for the dying man, leans over him, and Siegfried faintly says:

Ah! now forever open her eyelids!
Ah! and what od'rous breeze is her breath!
Thrice blessed ending—
Thrill that dismays not—
Brünnhilde beckons to me! (He dies.)

SCENE II-Hall in Gunther's Palace

Stegfried's body is borne mournfully to the Hall, where the weeping Gutrune meets them and clasps her husband's lifeless form. Hagen now demands the Ring as his booty, but Gunther refuses to yield it and they draw their swords, Gunther being killed by Hagen.

Gunther refuses to yield it and they draw their swords, Gunther being killed by Hagen.

Hagen now attempts to withdraw the Ring from Siegfried's finger, but as he approaches, the arm of the dead hero is raised threateningly. All recoil in terror and Brünnhilde approaches. She gazes long and sadly at Siegfried's face, then orders a funeral pyre erected to burn the hero's body. The vassals obey and build a huge pyre on the bank of the Rhine, on which the body is laid. Brünnhilde summons two ravens from the rocks, and begins her great Immolation Scene.

The story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, is so well known that it would seem hardly necessary to describe the plot at any length. However, for operatic purposes the librettists were obliged to modify and reconstruct certain portions of the tragedy, and the revised vertion will be briefly sketched here.

The present King of Denmark, Claudius, has seized the throne, after having murdered he late King, Hamlet's father. At the opening of the opera Hamlet knows nothing of the nurder, but is highly incensed at his mother for having married Claudius before she had been two months a widow.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Room of State in the Palace

The new Queen is being presented to the Court at a public reception. She is annoyed secause Hamlet shows his displeasure by absenting himself from the ceremony. After the presentation is over, Hamlet enters slowly, in a melancholy mood.

Hamlet: Ah! vain indeed is grief!
Affection, too, doth seem short lived indeed.
My much-loved father but two months dead;
And yet, unto another wedlock, my mother hath consented;
"Frailty, thy name is woman."

His bitter musing is interrupted by the entrance of Ophelia, his betrothed. She has heard hat Hamlet intends to leave the kingdom and asks if he has ceased to love her. In the beautiful ove duet he reassures her, and tells her why the palace has become intolerable to him.

Horatio and Marcellus are discovered excitedly discussing the appearance of the spectre of the murdered King. They greet Hamlet and tell him of the ghostly visitor, which appeared just at midnight. Hamlet is much affected, and suggests that as it is nearly

The clock strikes, and the figure of the murdered King appears. Hamlet speaks to the

HAMLET:
Yes! Shade revered! Thy bidding shall be done.
O light, O sun, O glory, O love to me so dear, Farewell! Farewell!

The ghost, before disappearing, pauses at the back of the stage, and stands with one hand extended toward Hamlet; at this moment Horatio and Marcellus re-enter, and appear terrorstricken at the spectacle before them. Trumpets and joyous music are heard without as the curtain falls.

acted strangely toward his mother and fears his reason is affected.

Hamlet, seeking to entrap the King in some manner into betraying himself, has engaged a troupe of players to present a play which shall enact a similar crime. The King and Queen are delighted that he seems to seek amusement, and gladly accept his invitation to witness the play.

When the royal pair have departed, the players come on and are instructed by Hamle: n the plot he has conceived. The Prince then calls for wine and bids the players be merry. offering to sing them a drinking song.

By Titta Ruffo, Baritone (In Italian) 92042 12-inch, $3.00 This is Thomas' splendid setting of the well-known soliloguy and one of the most concuous numbers in the opera. Although the librettists took many liberties with Shakeare's drama, they did not venture to alter such a well-known excerpt as this. Ruffo sings famous monologue in a superb manner, delivering it with great dramatic power.

The Queen and Ophelia enter and plead with Hamlet to banish his wild imaginings. He sternly rebukes them, advises Ophelia to retire to a convent, and accuses his mother of being an accomplice. The ghost again appears, visible only to Hamlet, bids him spare his mother, and slowly disappears. The Prince conducts the Queen to the door, urging her to pray and repent.

Ophelia then turns to the shepherds and asks them to listen to her song, a strange, sad melody, which is interrupted at intervals by wild laughter and weeping. Presently she seems to forget, and placidly plays with her flowers, until the magical siren's song is heard luring her to the water's edge, and she plunges in and floats away, singing of Hamlet's vow of love.

Mme. Melba fairly surpasses herself in this scene, with its sudden alternations of joy and sorrow, the pathos which overshadows every phrase.

Several numbers from this interesting opera are presented here,—the first being the beautiful Prelude.

Prelude

By Arthur Pryor's Band 31853 12-inch, $1.00

This Prelude is an especially beautiful number. It opens with the Prayer of the Children, played by the brass—at first softly, then swelling to the full strength of the band. This is followed by a passage portraying morning in the forest, and upon this pastoral scene there breaks in rudely the Hocus pocus, or Witches' motive. The Prelude is brought to a close with a return of the Prayer theme.

The delicacy and charm of this music is well brought out by the band under Mr. Prvor's masterly baton.

The second number is Peter's air in Act I.

Mr. Goritz's admirable character study as Peter, the tipsy, kind-hearted and superstitious father, is one of the features of the Metropolitan revival, and this odd number is given with much effectiveness.

The third number is the famous Hexenritt, or Witch's Ride, which occurs in Act Ill.

The curtain rises, showing Hänsel and Gretel still asleep in the wood. The Dawn Fairy shakes dewdrops on the children and wakes them just as the mist clears away, revealing the house of the Witch.

The children approach cautiously and begin to nibble at the gingerbread fence, when the Witch comes out and casts a spell over them. She makes a good fire in the stove for the purpose of roasting the babes, and in her joy she rides wildly around the room on a broomstick, singing this unique Hexenritt.

Mr. Reiss tries his best to conceal his naturally sweet tenor when delivering this number, but only partially succeeds. However, the Witch's part is not intended to be sung but "squeaked," and as a humorous performance this rendition is a masterpiece.

He then sings the famous Vision fugitive, considered the most beautiful of the airs in the opera.

RENAUD AS HEROD

Herodiade was first produced in Brussels in 1881. The first Paris production of this opera was especially interesting because of the first appearance of lean de Reszke as a tenor (he was formerly a baritone). It was not until 1904, however, that the opera was brought out in London (under the title of Salome) with Mme Calvé, Dalmores and Renaud in the leading roles, Mr. Hammerstein's brilliant production of this work was one of the events of a recent season at the Manhattan.

The opera contains much of the best music Massenet has written; and several of the most melodious of these airs have been recorded by the Victor.

The plot, while based on the well-known Scriptural story, does not follow the Bible or tradition very closely, and differs quite largely from Salome.

ACT I

Salome enters and is greeted by Phanuel, a young lew, who is astonished that she should be in the Palace. and wonders if she can be ignorant of the fact that Herodias is her mother. Salome tells him she is seeking John the Prophet, and in this air she describes how he had saved her from the desert when a child, and how good and kind he is.

IN HERODIADE

Herod describes the vision of Salome which haunts him night and day, and declares that to possess her he would gladly surrender his soul. He drinks the love potion, and falls on the couch in a delirious sleep.

The scene changes to the great square at Jerusalem, where Herod receives messages from the allies, and denounces Rome. Herodias enters and announces that the Roman general, Vitellius, is approaching. The people are

He calls upon the stars to tell him what manner of man is this John, who speaks with such authority. "Is he a man or a god?" he cries. Herodias enters, much agitated. Phanuel inquires what has brought the Queen to his house, and she cries, "Vengeance on the woman who has stolen Herod's love!" He reads her fate by the stars, and sees nothing but blood in the horoscope. She asks him about her child, lost so long ago, and he takes her to the window and shows her Salome, who is just entering the Temple. Horrified, Herodias cries, "My daughter? Never! That is my rival!"

The second scene shows the entrance of the Temple. Salome enters half fainting, having heard that John has been cast in prison, and falls exhausted at the prison entrance. Herod enters, and seeing Salome, breaks out into a mad declaration of his love, but she repulses him with horror, and tells him she loves another. He declares he will find this lover and kill him, and goes out as the people enter the Temple.

John is brought in and denounced by the priests, but prays for them as they demand his death. Salome runs to John and falls at his feet, wishing to die with him. Herod, seeing that it is John whom Salome loves, orders them both put to death, and they are seized and COUNT OF ST. BRIS, (Sah Bree') Catholic noblemen Baritone RAQUL DE NANGIS, (Rah-ool' day Non-zhee') a Protestant gentleman Tener URBANO, (Ur-bah'-noh) page to Queen Margaret Mezzo-Soprano Ladies and Gentlemen of the Court, Pages, Citizens, Soldiers, Students, etc.

Scene and Period: Touraine and Paris; during the month of August, 1572.

This opera is considered the composer's masterpiece, and is indeed a wonderfully imposing work, with its splendid scenes, beautiful arias and concerted numbers, and its thrilling dramatic situations. The romance as well as the fanaticism of the period are faithfully pictured, and the whole presented on a magnificent scale. The work however, is undeniably too long for a single evening's performance, requiring fully five hours when given entire; and it is to be regretted that some courageous impresario does not prune and pare it until it becomes of reasonable length. The Victor, however, has been merciful. and has selected only the gems of the work, which have been given by a fine cast headed by Caruso.

The story relates to one of the most dramatic periods in French history, and tells of the massacre of Huguenots in 1572, and of the efforts of Margaret of Valois, the betrothed of Henry IV. to reconcile the disputes between the Protestants and the Catholica.

ACT I

SCENE I-House of the Count of Nevers

The overture is a short one and consists mainly of the Lutheran chorale, which occurs several times in various portions of the opera. The curtain rises, disclosing a magnificent salon in the house of Nevers, where a gay party of Catholic noblemen are feasting. The Count explains that he expects another guest, a Huguenot, whom he hopes they will treat with courtesy. Racul arrives and makes a favorable impression on the guests. Nevers toasts the ladies, proposing that each relate an adventure with some fair one; Rooul, being the latest arrival, is called upon first, and describes his rescue of an unknown beauty (who proves afterward to be Valentine, St. Bris' daughter) from some drunken revelers. In this air he tells of her beauty and the deep impression she made on him.

Caruso makes a manly picture as the young nobleman, and sings the music allotted to Rapul charmingly, especially this delicate Romanza, in which he describes the vision of the unknown with whom he has fallen in love. In dreamy tones he sings the recitative, after which a short introduction brings us to the romanza, beginning

A French rendition by M. Gautier, of the Paris Opera, is offered at a popular price, and the record is a most excellent one. The applause which greets this recital is interrupted by the entrance of Marcel, who makes no secret of his displeasure at seeing his master dining with Romanists. Raoul apologizes, begging indulgence for an old soldier and faithful servant who loves him, and the guests call on Marcel for a song. The grim soldier offers to sing an old Huguenot song of warning both against Rome and the wiles of woman.

This gay and brilliant cavatina is considered one of the most difficult of contralto numbers. It begins with a long and very ornamental cadenza, followed by this graceful melody:

worked up with much spirit and reintroduced after a striking series of vocal figures suns on the word "no." Mme. Homer's execution of this florid air exhibits well the great flexibility of her fine voice.

Meyerbeer intended this part for soprano, but it is usually transposed and sung by a contralto.

URBANO:

I do not name him; but honor be Unto the good knight, whoe'er be he!
And ontil now, sirs, there ne'er hath

The note proves to be for Raoul, and bids him consent to come blindfolded in a carriage, without question, to wherever his guide will take him. The young man is puzzled but decides to obey, and shows the note to the others. They recognize the seal of Margard of Valois, and cast looks of envy at him as he follows the page.

A terrible scene follows, St. Bris challenging Raoul, who is ordered under arrest by the Queen. Valentine is overcome with shame, and the Catholics are furious. Marcel is delighted that his master has escaped marriage with a Catholic, and the curtain falls as the Lutheran chorale is again heard in the orchestra.

NILSSON AS VALENTINE

ACT III

(A Sauare in Paris)

A wedding procession passes on its way to the church: it is for Valentine, who has been persuaded to wed Nevers. Valentine asks that she be permitted to spend the day in the chapel in prayer. While there she overhears a plot to assassinate Raoul, and at once goes in search of Marcel to inform him of the plan. She meets him in the square and in a great duet tells him of the plot.

A general conflict is threatened but is prevented by the Queen, who appears just in time. She tells Raoul that Valentine is innocent of wrong, having merely gone to Nevers' house to ask him to release her. Raoul is overcome with remorse, but the knowledge comes too late, as Valentine is already the wife of Nevers.

A richly decorated boat approaches, occupied by the nuptial suite. Nevers leads Valentine to it, and as all salute the bridal couple the boat moves away, while Raoul, overcome by grief, is supported by Marcel. The curtain falls.

ACT IV

(A Room in Nevers' Castle)

Valentine, alone, broods over her sorrows, confessing to herself that although wedded to another, she still loves Raoul. She is astounded to see her lover appear, he having braved death and entered the castle to see her again. Valentine hears her father's voice, and hastily conceals Raoul behind the tapestry. The Catholic nobles enter to discuss the plot outlined by St. Bris. They finally agree to his fiendish proposal, and swear to slaughter the Huguenots. Nevers is horrified at the bloody scheme to exterminate all Protestants, and refusing to become an assassin. he breaks his sword, and is led away by the guards.

The conference closes with the famous Benediction of the Swords, perhaps the greatest and most thrilling of all operatic scenes. A magnificent record of this number has been given by Journet and the Opera chorus.

The number begins with the strain sung by St. Bris in his recital of the plan.

This is followed by the noble strain of the Benediction, one of the best known passages everbeer's work—

Then comes the furious and fanatical chorus of priests and lords, one of the most ult of ensembles.

: trike them down, men and children, all! nd let no mercy ever be shown! y the sword they shall perish, nd their temples be o'erthrown!

Now for vengeance we go!

St. Bris:

Be silent, my friends, and breathe not e'en a murmur

To wake our slumb'ring foe!

ALL:
Whisper low, not a word,
Not a breath or sign revealing, while we,
silent stealing,
Strike the impious foe!
(With fury.)
Now for vengeance! we will go!

The number closes with the famous passage for the basses which finishes on a low E natural, sung very pianissimo, as the company disperses.

The nobles having gone, Raoul comes out, horrified at what he has heard, and wishes to warn his friends, when Valentine, thinking to save his life, urges him to remain, telling him that she loves him. In a transport of delight he begins the great duet.

The great bell of St. Germain, the signal to prepare for the slaughter, is heard tolling, and Raoul makes a fresh effort to go to the aid of his people. He rushes to the window, while Valentine clings to him, and shows her that the massacre has already begun; then tears himself from her arms and leaps from the window, while she falls fainting.

In recent productions in America, because of the great length of Meyerbeer's work, the opera has ended with the shooting of Raoul by the mob as he leaps from the window; but in the original version a fifth act occurs, in which Nevers is killed, and Valentine, renouncing her faith, is united by Marcel to Raoul. St. Bris and his party enter the street, and not recognizing Valentine, fire upon the three and kill them. The curtain falls as St. Bris discovers that he has murdered his daughter. This final tragedy is graphically pictured in the accompanying reproduction from an old drawing.

Scene and Period: India, at the present time.

This opera, with its graceful music and scenes of Oriental splendor, was first given in America by the American Opera Company in 1886. (The Emma Abbott version in 1883 need not be considered seriously.) Since then it has had three revivals—the Patti production of 1890; that of 1895 for Marie Van Zandt, and the Metropolitan revival of 1906-7. The music of the opera is wholly beautiful, and the principal numbers are exquisite compositions—lovely in idea and execution.

The story resembles in some points both Aida and Africaine; all three are more or less Oriental; Lakmé, like Aida, loves her country's enemy; Nilakantha and Nelusko possess similar traits; while Lakmé and Selika both poison themselves botanically.

The Oriental atmosphere is somewhat spoiled by the introduction of the modern and somewhat commonplace English characters, but the romantic ending atones for any shortcomings.

ACT I

SCENE-A Garden in India

Nilankatha, Lakmé's father, hates the English invaders and resists their presence in India. Getald and Frederic, English officers, while sauntering with some English ladies, venture on sacred ground near Nilakantha's temple, and when rebuked they all depart but Gerald, who remains to sketch some Oriental jewels which Lakmé had left in the garden. He takes up the trinkets and sings his charming air, Idle Fancies.

Fantaisie aux divins mensonges (Idle Fancies)

By M. Rocca, Tenor (Double-faced See page 162) (In French) 16573 10-inch, $0.75

He is struck with the daintiness and beauty of the gems and tries to picture the unknown beauty to whom they belong.

CERAIR

Idle fancy, cradled by delusion,
You mislead me now as of old.
Go to dreamland, turn back in confusion, Fair dove fantastic, with wings of gold. (Taking up a bracelet.) Of some fair maid round her arm folding. This bracelet rich must oft entwine. Ah! what delight would be the holding. The hand that passes there, in mine. (Taking up a ring.)

This ring of gold, my dream supposes,
Oft has followed, wand'ring for hours,

The small foot, that but reposes On mossy banks or beds of flowers. This necklace, too, with her own perfume scented Embalm'd as yet with sweets from her lips that came,

Has felt the true heart, heating, glad, contented. Trembling with joy at the one well-loved name

Away, fly, fond illusions,
Swiftly passing visions that my reason disturb! Idle fancy, cradled by delusion, etc.

(From the Ditson Edition.) This beautiful air has been sung for the Victor by a brilliant and accomplished young tenor, M. Rocca, of the Opera Comique.

Hearing some one approaching, he hides himself in the shrubbery. Lakmé enters and lays flowers at the feet of an idol. She is about to go when she pauses and tries to analyze a strange feeling which has come over her, saying:

> LAKMÉ: In my heart now I feel there's a murmur so strange, The flow'rs are more lovely appearing, And Heaven's more radiant now. From woods a new song I am hearing, Fond zephyrs caress my brow.
> And a fragrance that's rare is filling All my senses with a rapture so thrilling!

She then sings her first lovely song.

Pourquoi dans les grands bois (Why Love I Thus to Stray?)

By Alice Verlet, Soprano (Double-faced-See page 162) (French) 45006 10-inch, $1.00 and asks herself why she loves to wander in the forest and why she is both sad and glad.

LAKMÉ: Why love I thus to stray In woods here, day by day, While tears have sway? Why doth the dove's note sadden, And fill my heart with sighing; As doth a fading flow'ret, Or a leaf eastward flying? Yet are these tears most sweet to me, Tho' sad they be! And my heart is gladsome, Tho' I'm sighing, I'm gladsome.

Ah! why?
Why look for reasons here, in the song of the stream,
Where roses dream? In my heart soft reposes, like a lily at rest, Sweeter balm than yield roses, by gentle winds caressed. Or by loving lips pressed. Tho' I sigh, I'm gladsome, Ah. why?

She suddenly sees Gerald among the trees and utters a cry of fear. Her attendants run in, but some intuition tells her not to reveal Gerald's presence, and she sends them away. Going to his hiding place she denounces him for trespassing on sacred ground, and bids him begone. He begs her for a few moments' conversation, and tells her of the impression she has made on his heart.

> GERALD: Ah! linger, go not yet, so thoughtful, sweet, unchiding! Let blushing charms that mine eyes now have met, O'ermantle thy cheek. Its lily pallor hiding!

Lakmé looks on the handsome youth with interest, but tells him she fears the return of her father, who would surely seek vengeance for the Englishman's desecration of holy ground. Gerald departs just as Nilakantha, summoned by Lakme's attendants, enters, and seeing traces of a trespasser, declares that he must die. They go in pursuit of Gerald, leaving Lakmé motionless with fear.

ACT II

SCENE—A Street in an Indian Citu

Act II shows a public square, lined with Chinese and Indian shops and bazaars. lish visitors are strolling about, viewing the scenes with interest. Nilakantha, disguised as a beggar, is seeking traces of the intruder, whom he has sworn to kill. Lakmé is with him, wearing the dress of a dancing girl. He orders his daughter to sing, hoping that the Englishman will recognize her voice and betray himself. She sings the famous Bell Song.

The sound of a little bell ringing,

ABOTT AS LAKMÉ

Mme. Tetrazzini's rendition of this beautiful air is wholly charming, and the vocal emshments which she introduces will be something of a novelty to those who are familiar with the usual cadenzas.

Other fine renditions of this brilliant air are given by Mme. Galvany, who indulges in e quite astonishing cadenzas; by Bessie Abott, whose fresh young voice is heard to t advantage; and by Miss Yaw, who provides a lower-priced version.

As Nilakantha had planned, Gerald recognizes Lakmé and betrays himself. The Brahman to collect his Hindoos, intending to kill the Englishman, while Lakmé finds Gerald warns him of the plot. She begins the duet:

ns la forêt, près de nous (In the Forest) tells him of a hut in the forest where he may be free from pursuit.

In the forest near at hand, A hut of bamboo is hiding, 'Neath a shading tree doth stand, This roof of my providing. Like a nest of timid birds, In leafy silence abiding.

From all eyes secret it lies,
And waits it there a happy pair!
Far away from prying sight,
Without there's naught to reveal it,
Silent woods by day and night,
Far is all only to general it. Ever jealously conceal it; Thither shalt thou follow me!
When dawn earth is greeting.
Thee with smiles I shall be meeting.
For 'tis there thy home shall be.

Gerald at first refuses thus to hide, declaring it unworthy of a British officer, but Lakmé pleads with him and he consents; but as he attempts to follow her he is stabbed by Nilakantha, who then escapes. Lakmé runs to Gerald, and overjoyed to find his wound is not serious, she prepares, with the help of her faithful attendant Hadji, to bear him to the forest retreat.

ACT III SCENE—An Indian Forest

Act III shows the hut in the tropical forest. Gerald is lying on a bed of leaves while Lakmé watches over him, singing soothing melodies. He opens his eyes and greets her with rapture, singing his beautiful In Forest Deaths.

Vieni al contento profondo (In Forest Depths)

By John McCormack, Tenor (In Italian) 64171 10-inch, $2.00 This lovely cantilena is given in delightful style by Mr. McCormack.

GERALD:

I too recall,—still mute, inanimate,—
I saw you bent o'er my lips; while thus lying,
My soul upon your look was attracted and fastened;
'Neath your breath life awoke and recovery hastened.
O my charming Lakmé;
Through forest depths secluded,
Love's wing above us has passed;
Earth-cares have not been intruded,
And heaven on us falls at last.
These flow'ring vines, with blooms capricious,
Bear o'er our pathway scents delicious;
Which soft hearts, with raptures beset,
While all else we forget!

As the days pass and Gerald recovers his strength, he seems to forget all else but his love for the Brahman maiden, but one day, while she is absent, his friend Frederic finds him and urges him to return to his duty. When Lakmé comes back she finds Gerald changed. She asks the reason, but before he can answer the distant sound of bugles calling the regiment together is heard. She sees by his face that he means to go back to his friends, and in despair she eats some flowers of the deadly stramonium tree and dies in his arms.

ORTRUD, his wife
THE KINC'S HERALD

Scene and Period: Antwerp, first half of the Tenth Cen

Most of us are familiar with the story of the K Lohengrin, who comes in his boat, drawn by a swidefend Elsa from the charge (preferred by Telramuna Ortrud, who covet Elsa's estates) of having murdered young brother, Godfrey.

Telramund is vanquished and disgraced by Lohe who wins Elsa as his bride. One condition he compared from her—that she shall never ask who he is or when came. By the influence of Ortrud, however, she questions him, and in fulfillment of his vow, but in deep grief, he leaves her and departs in his boat drawn by a dove. The ethereal Grail harmonies, the lovely Swan Motive, the noble Prayer of the King and the Bridal Chorus make this one of the most melodious of all the master's operas.

Prelude

By La Scala Orchestra 31779 12-inch, $1.00

The prelude, one of the most beautiful of all Wagner's compositions, symbolizes the descent from Heaven of a group of angels bearing the Holy Grail.
The number begins with soft A major chords in the highest register of the violin. The motive of the Grail is then announced:

Coming nearer and nearer, the light of the Grail is seen in the sky, while the air is filled with the blessings dispensed by the holy cup. As the sounds grow louder, the senses are overwhelmed, until at the tremendous climax thundered out by the full orchestra the mystic light of the Grail is seen in all its glory.

GADSKI AD ELBA

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-WAGNER'S LOHENGRIN

The mysterious Grail motive then fades away, being played at the end by muted strings; and the number ends with the same A major chords pianissimo.

The performance of this wonderful prelude, which is written almost wholly for strings, shows why this organization has become famous for the exquisite playing of its string section.

ACT I

SCENE-Banks of the Scheldt, near Antwerp

King Henry of Germany arrives at Antwerp and finds Brabant in almost a state of anarchy. He summons the counts and nobles of Saxony and Brabant to meet under the Oak of lustice, and calls on Frederick of Telramund for an explanation.

King. Here, to my grief, I meet with naught but strife, All in disunion, from your chiefs estranged! Confusion, civil warfare meet we here. On thee I call, Frederick of Telramund! I know thee for a knight as brave as true, I charge thee, let me know this trouble's cause.

Frederick now advances and begins his narrative, boldly accusing Elsa of the murder of her brother.

Dank, König, dir, dass du zu richten kamst! (Frederick's Charge Against Elsa)

One day, when Elsa had with her brother wandered forth, Without the boy, trembling, she returned. With feign'd lamenting, questioned of his safety, Pretending she had been from him divided,

And in vain his traces she had sought, Fruitless was every search we made to find him;

And when I questioned her with words severe, Her pallor and her falt'ring tongue betray'd her,

Her crime in its guilty blackness stood confess'd!

A horror fell upon me of the maid; The claim upon her hand her father had conferr'd With willing heart, I straight re-

Ortrud, daughter of Radbod, true in death. I here arraign her, Princess Elsa of Brabant; Of fratricide be she charged! claim dominion o'er this land by right: I claim dominion o'er this land by right;
My nearest kinsman was the valiant duke,
My wife descended of the race
That gave this land their rulers thro' long ages past.
O King, give judgment! All now thou hast heard!

The host of admirers of this famous Dutch artist, whose sonorous bass is now at its best, will be greatly pleased by the issue of this record of the dramatic air of Telramund. Mr. Van Roov, whose fine impersonations of Wagnerian roles are familiar to opera goers, is always an effective Frederick, acting the part with the ruggedness it demands and singing the difficult music in the true Wagnerian style.

The King is much disturbed, and savs:

King: A dreadful accusation thou hast brought! A crime so deadly, how can I believe?

Frederick vehemently repeats his accusation, and demands that the King choose between them. The King asks that Elsa be sent for, and when she enters timidly with downcast eyes, he says kindly:

I pray'd in tears and sorrow,
With heavy heart and sore,
Hoping a brighter morrow
Yet was for us in store. Away my words were wafted, I dreamt not help was nigh, But One on high vouchsafd it, While I in sleep did lie. (with growing enthusiasm)
I saw in splendor shining, A knight of glorious mien, On me his eves inclining, With tranquil gaze serene.
A horn of gold beside him, He leant upon his sword, Thus when I erst espied him, 'Mid clouds of light he soar'd; His words so low and tender, Brought life renew'd to me. (with rapture) My guardian, my defender, Thou shalt my champion be.

The King is much moved, and calls for a judgment of God after the fashion of the time. The trumpeters blow the summons to the four points of the compass, and the Herald calls:

HERALD: Who will do battle here on life or

For Elsa of Brabant! Let him appear! At first there comes no response, and Elsa is in despair, but after a second call a knight in shining armor is seen approaching in a boat drawn

ACT II

SCENE-Court of the Palace

This scene shows the inner court of the palace at Antwerp, It is night, Frederick and Ortrud, disgraced and dressed in sombre garments. are seated on the church steps. They upbraid each other, Frederick accusing Ortrud of inventing the story of Elsa's crime. A long duet follows, ending in a terrible plot for vengeance.

Elsa appears on the balcony of the palace, all un-conscious of the wretched and disgraced Telramund and Ortrud, who are hidden in the shadow. In a blissful reverie. the young girl sings to the soft breezes of the knightly Lohengrin, to whom she is now betrothed.

Ortrud warns Elsa against trusting her husband too blindly, hinting of the mystery in his life, and thus plants a seed of suspicion in the young girl's heart. The duet then follows:

ELSA:

Oh, let me teach thee How trust doth hallow joy and love. Turn, then, to our faith, I beseech thee, Oh, turn unto our faith divine, For God is love!

ORTRUD (aside-with fierce joy):

Oh! pride of heart, I yet will teach thee, That an illusion is this love, The gods of vengeance soon shall reach thee, Their wrath-destroying thou shalt prove!

Elsa enters the palace and the dark plotters renew their vow of imprecation.

Day breaks, and the Herald appears and announces the banishment of Telramund. Elsa, attended by her ladies, passes on her way to the minster but is suddenly confronted by Ortrud, who has arrayed herself again in splendid garments. She taunts Elsa with the fact that her knight has no name.

This is followed by the beautiful Bridal Chorus, one of the loveliest numbers in the opera. As the curtain rises, showing the bridal chamber, the strains of the march continue. but in a softer mood. The great doors at the back open, and the bridal party enters,the ladies leading Elsa and the King and nobles conducting Lohengrin,—they come to the front and the chorus begins:

CHORUS HORUS: Faithful and true, we lead thee forth Where Love, triumphant, shall crown ye with joy! Star of renown, flow'r of the earth, Blest be ye both far from all life's annoy! Champion victorious, go thou before! Maid bright and glorious, go thou before! Mirth's noisy revel ye've forsaken, Tender delights for you now awaken; Fragrant abode enshrine ye in bliss; Splendor and state in joy ve dismiss!

Eight Ladies (bassing around the bridal bair): As solemn vows unite ye
We hallow ye to joy!
This hour shall still requite ye,

When bliss hath known alloy!

After a striking and effective modulation the first strain is repeated by the full chorus.

Faithful and true, now rest you here. Where Love, triumphant, etc.

The party goes slowly out, leaving the bridal pair alone, while the strains of the nuptial air die away in the distance.

The full strength of the Victor organization has been used for the vocal rendition, and the result is a record of surpassing beauty. An instrumental record of this number is also offered.

The nobles surrender, and Elsa falls senseless in Lohengrin's arms. After a long silence. Lohengrin orders the body into the Judgment Hall, and gives Elsa in charge of her ladies.

SCENE II-Same as Act I

A quick change of scene shows again the banks of the Scheldt at Antwerp, as in Act I. The King and his nobles await the coming of Lohengrin, who is to accompany them to battle. They are startled by the entrance of the nobles bearing the body of Telramund. greeted by the King with warmth:

> KING Hail, heav'n-sent hero, welcome here! Thy loyal vassals all are near, Waiting for thee to give the word, And fight by thy all-conq'ring sword.

All are surprised when the knight announces that he is forced to decline the command of the expedition, and tells of the attempt on his life.

LOHENGRIN: My gracious sov'reign, bear me blameless, Reasons have I that must be nameless, Reasons have I that must be nameless, The destin'd campaign I suspend!
To lead ye forth to battle here I came not; But judge me, for your leniency I claim not. Then, firstly, do ye hold that I am guilty? Your just decree to me is due.
He sought my life despite honor and fealty—Say, did I right when him I slew?

The King declares Telramund to be justly slain, and Lohengrin now reveals with reluctance that Elsa has broken her promise.

LOHENGRIN: And further, I declare in face of Heav'n, Though bitter grief to me it bode, That from her fair allegiance hath been driven The wife that Heav'n on me bestow'd. Elsa! say, oh, what hast thou done? Sentence so stern how hast thou won? LADIES: Woe is thine, Elsa!

Lohengrin's Narrative

LOHENGRIN: In distant land, by ways remote and hidden, There stands a mount that men call Monsalvat; There stands a mount that men call Monsalvat; It holds a shrine, to the profane forbidden: More precious there is nought on earth than that, And thron'd in light it holds a cup immortal, That whoso sees from earthly sin is cleans'd; "Twas borne by angels thro the heav'nly portal—Its coming hath a holy reign commenc'd. Once every year a dove from Heav'n descendeth, To strengthen it anew for works of grace." To strengthen it anew for works of grace; 'Tis called the Grail, the pow'r of Heav'n attendeth The faithful knights who guard that sacred place. He whom the Grail to be its servant chooses Its armed henceforth by high invincible might; All evil craft its power before him loses, The spirits of darkness where he dwells take flight, Nor will he lose the awful charm it blendeth, Nor will he lose the awful charm it blendeth, Although he should be called to distant lands, When the high cause of virtue he defendeth: While he's unknown, its spell he still commands. By perils dread the holy Grail is girded, No eye rash or profane its light may see; Its champion knight from doubtings shall be warded, Its champion knight from doubtings shall be war If known to man, he must depart and flee. Now mark, craft or disguise my soul disdaineth, The Grail sent me to right yon lady's name; My father, Percival, gloriously reigneth, His knight am I, and Lohengrin my name!

After this amazing narrative, which causes a great stir among the people, the swan appears to conduct Lohengrin away.

LOHENGRIN:

LADIES AND MEN:
While I hear him the wondrous tale revealing, The holy tears adown my cheek are stealing! Tis dark around me! Give me air! Oh, help, help! oh, me, most wretched! LADIES AND MEN (in great excitement): The swan! the swan! the swan! The stream he floateth down. The swan! ah, he comes!

Too long I stay—I must obey the Grail!
My trusty swan! O that this summons neer had been!

nad been!
Oh, that this day I ne'er had seen!
I thought the year would soon be o'er
When thy probation would have pass'd;
Then by the Grail's transcendent pow'r,
In thy true shape we'd meet at last!
Oh, Elsa, think what joys thy doubts have ended! Couldst thou not trust in me for one short

Elsa (half-fainting):
Oh, horror! ah, the swan! vear? Ortrud, in triumph, now reveals the fact that the swan is really Elsa's brother, whom she had transformed by magic. Lohengrin kneels in prayer, and as the dove of the Grail's seen descending, the swan sinks, and Gottfried, the young Duke, arises, restored to human form. Lohengrin's boat is drawn away by the dove as Elsa faints in her brother's arms.

LUCY OF LAMMERMOOR

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Salvator Cammerano, derived from Scott's novel, "The Bride of Lammermoor." Music by Gaetano Donizetti. First production at Naples, September 26, 1835. Performed in London, April 5, 1838; Paris, 1839; New York, in English, at the Park Theatre, 1843; and in Italian, 1849.

Scene and Period: The action takes place in Scotland, part in Ravenswood Castle, part in the ruined tower of Wolfscrag. The time is the close of the sixteenth century.

The prolific Donizetti (1797-1848) wrote no fewer than sixty-three operas, the most popular of these being, of course, Lucia di Lammermoor. It has long been the custom with a certain class of critics to run down the old Italian school of opera represented by Lucia, and talk about the artificiality of the music, thinness of the orchestration, etc. But the public in general pays very little attention to these opinions, because they love the music of Lucia, as their grandfathers did, and realize that throughout the whole work there runs a current of tenderness and passion, expressed in simple melody that will ever appeal to the heart and senses.

Let us now forget the critics and tell the simple and sorrowful story, and listen to the melodious airs which have given pleasure to many millions in the seventy-six years since its production.

The plot of Lucia is founded on Sir Walter Scott's novel, The Bride of Lammermoor. Lord Henry Ashton, Lucy's brother, knowing nothing of her attachment to his enemy, Edgar of Ravenswood, has arranged a marriage between Lucy and the wealthy Lord Arthur, in order to retrieve his fallen fortunes. Learning that Lucy is in love with Edgar, he intercepts her over's letters and executes a forged paper, which convinces Lucy that Edgar is false to her. Convinced of her lover's perfidy, and urged by the necessities of her brother, she unwillingly consents to wed Sir Arthur.

The guests are assembled for the ceremony, and Lucy has just signed the contract, when Edgar appears and denounces Lucy for her fickleness. Edgar is driven from the castle, and the shock being too much for the gentle mind of Lucy, she becomes insane, kills her tusband and dies. Edgar, overcome by these tragic happenings, visits the churchyard of avenswood and stabs himself among the tombs of his ancestors.

ACT I

SCENE I—A Forest near Lammermoor

The curtain rises, disclosing Norman, and followers of Sir Henry. Norman tells the etainers to watch carefully and ascertain who is secretly meeting Lucy. In the opening horus they promise to watch with diligence.

Opening Chorus, Act I

Sir Henry enters and talks with Norman of his suspicion that Lucy has formed an attachment for some unknown knight. Norman suggests that it may be Edgar. Henry is furious and declares he will have a deadly vengeance.

SCENE II-A Park near the Castle

Lucy enters, accompanied by her faithful attendant, Alice. She has come from the castle to meet her lover, Edgar; and while waiting for him, tells Alice of the legend of the fountain, which relates how a Ravenswood lover once slew a maiden on this spot.

Lucy shudderingly relates how she once saw the spectre of the murdered girl, and fears it is an omen of the future.

LUCIA:

Silence o'er all was reigning
Dark was the night and low'ring,
And o'er yon fountain her pallid ray
Yon pale moon was pouring,
Faintly a sharp but stifled sigh
Fell on my startled ear,
And straightway upon the fountain's brink,
The spectre did appear!
But slow on high its skeleton hand,
Threat'ning it did uprear,
Stood for a moment immovable,
Then vanish'd from my view!
(Despondently.)
Oh, what horrid omen is this?
I ought to banish from my heart this fatal love,
But I cannot; it is my life,
And comfort to my suff'ring soul!

CONSTANTINO AS EDGAR

This graceful number is given by Mme. Tetrazzini with rare charm and pathos; the concluding ornamental passages being sung with especial delicacy, and the beauty of the long sustained A at the close being notable. The popular-priced rendition by Mme. Huguet is also a very attractive one.

This is followed by the second part,—the beautiful Quando rapita,— also given here by Mme. Huguet and Mme. Pareto. This animated melody is well fitted to display the brilliant tones of these admirable singers.

Edgar appears and tells Lucy that he has been summoned to France, and proposes that he seek out Henry and endeavor to end the mortal feud which exists between the families. Lucy, knowing her brother only too well, entreats him to keep their love secret or they will be forever parted. Edgar, roused to fury by this evidence of Henry's mortal hate, renews his vow of vengeance, beginning this dramatic duet, Sulla tomba.

Think what misery will soon enthral me;
I can scarce from fear sustain me; Would'st thou have me die from terror?
Yield thee, yield thee to the dictates of affection,
'Tis a nobler, purer passion,
Let that thought thy rage assuage!

Edgar now says that he must go, and in a tender duet, which closes the act, the lovers bid each other farewell.

ACT II

SCENE I-An Ante-room in the Castle

Sir Henry and his retainer Norman are discussing the approaching marriage of Lucy to Arthur. The events which have occurred since Act I are indicated by this extract from the text: HENRY

Should Lucy still persist In opposing me-

NORMAN:

Lucy enters, pale and listless, and to her brother's greeting:

HENRY:

May this glad day, sacred to Love and Hymen,

Auspicious prove to thee. Thou hear'st me? Thou'rt silent!

she answers with a last appeal to him to release her from this hated marriage.

Henry, in desperation, now tells her that unless she consents to wed Arthur he will be disgraced and ruined. This begins another duet, the Se traditme.

Hark! the deep toned deathbell clanging.
Hath affection lost all power?
Wilt consign me unto the tomb?

I'm thy sister, dost thou love me!
I am dying, will that move thee!
From the hands of thee, my brother,
Must I meet now this dreadful doom!
Hopeless misery all surrounding,
E'en while the marriage bell is sounding:
Fear and hate will be my dower;
Better had I wed the tomb!

However, convinced of Edgar's falseness, she half consents to the sacrifice, and retires to prepare for the ceremony.

SCENE II-The Great Hall of the Castle

The knights and ladies sing a chorus of congratulation to the bride and bridegroom, while Sir Henry greets the guests and asks them to pardon Lucy's agitated bearing, as she is still mourning for her mother.

Lucy enters and is escorted to the table where the notary is preparing the marriage papers. Believing her lover false, she cares little what becomes of her, and passively signs the contract. Pale as death and almost fainting, she is being supported by her faithful maid and her family adviser, Raymond, when suddenly a terrible silence ensues, as Edgar, the lover of Lucy and the deadly enemy of her brother, appears at the back of the room dressed in a sombre suit of black. The wedding guests are dumb with amazement at the daring of the young noble in thus presenting himself unbidden at the house of his enemy. The great sextette, the most dramatic and thrilling number in the entire range of opera, now begins,

Unlike many operatic ensembles, this sextette is not merely a most remarkable bit of concerted writing, but is so well fitted to the scene in which it occurs that even the enemies of Donizetti, who call Lucia merely a string of melodies, are compelled to admit its extreme beauty and powerful dramatic qualities.

Henry and Edgar, who have drawn their swords, are separated by Raymond, who commands them in Heaven's name to sheath heir weapons. Henry asks Edgar why he has come, and the thight replies:

Unto me her faith hath sworn!
RAYMOND:
Thou must all hope of her relinquish;
She is another's!

He exhibits the signed contract, but Edgar refuses to believe the evidence of his eyes and asks Lucy if she had signed it. With her eyes fixed on him she tremblingly nods her head in assent. Edgar, in a furious rage, tears the contract in pieces, flings it at the fainting maiden, and rushes from the castle as the curtain falls.

ACT III

SCENE I-The Tower of Ravenswood Castle

Edgar is brooding on his misfortunes when a horseman rides up, dismounts and enters the tower. It proves to be Sir Henry, who has come to challenge Edgar to a duel to the death. They agree to fight the following morning, and in this duet ask the night to hasten away, that their vengeance may be consummated.

Why the gentlemen do not take advantage of the present moment the librettist does not reveal! This scene is so melodramatic that it borders on the absurd, and it is usually omitted in this country, although it is well worth hearing from a musical point of view.

SCENE II—Hall in Lammermoor Castle

The peasants and domestics of the castle are making merry at their feast in honor of the marriage when Raymond enters, greatly agitated, bearing the featful news that Lucy has become insane and has killed her husband. This gives opportunity for a dramatic air, rung here by Signor Sillich and the La Scala Chorus.

Forgetting her marriage, the demented maiden speaks one moment of the happy day when she will be Edgar's wife, and next is terrified by a vague feeling that something has come between them.

This famous number must be judged solely as a brilliant piece of vocalism: it can hardly be considered dramatically, because when the prima donna loses her reason in this style of opera, it only means that the scales become more rapid and the roulades more difficult! The unfortunate Lucy in her agony seems inclined and able to sing the most difficult and florid music conceivable, and venture without hesitation on passages at which a same person would stand aghast! In short Donizetti forgot his dramatic mission temporarily in his efforts to write a show piece of musical execution.

Lucy:
I hear the breathing of his voice low and

I hear the breathing of his voice low and tender,
That voice beloved sounds in my heart forever.
My Edgar, why were we parted?
Let me not mourn thee;
See, for thy sake, I've all forsaken!
What shudder do I feel thro' my veins?
My heart is trembling, my senses fail!
(She forgets her trouble and smiles.)
Come to the fountain;
There let us rett to be the

There let us rest together,

Ah me! see where yon spectre arises, Standing between us! Alas! Dear Edgar!

Ah! Tis the hymn for our nuptials!
For us they are singing!
The altar for us is deck'd thus,
Oh, joy unbounded!
'Round us the brilliant tapers brightly are shining. The priest awaits us.
Oh! day of gladness!
Thine am I ever, thou mine forever!

See you phantom rise to part us! (Her mood again changes

Yet shall we meet, dear Edgar, before the altar. Hark to those strains celestial!

Ah! 'Tis the hymn for our nuptials!

(She falls fainting into the arms of Raymond)

Donizetti's scene seems especially set apart for the display of such a coloratura as Melba possesses, and she sings this florid music with such brilliancy and graceful fluency that the listener is dazzled. Her runs, trills and staccato notes glitter and scintillate, and compel a new admiration for the wonderful vocal mechanism over which she has such absolute command. The rôle of the unhappy Lucy is also admirably fitted to Tetrazzini's peculiar talents, and as the heroine of Donizetti's lovely opera she has made quite the greatest success of her career. When she reaches this florid and difficult Mad Scene, the listeners are absolutely electrified, and such a torrent of enthusiasm bursts forth that the diva is usually compelled to repeat a portion of the aria.

Mme. Sembrich's rendition proves that the compass of her voice is all but phenomenal, and she sings the difficult music with delightful flexibility and with an intonation which is faultless.

Other renditions of this well-known scene are given by Mme. Galvany and Mme. Pareto, the famous Italian prima donnas, and by Michailowa, the famous Russian singer. Although none of these artists has yet visited America, their beautiful voices are heard in thousands of homes in which the Victor is a welcome entertainer.

The unhappy Lucy, after having in this scene again enacted the terrible events of the previous day, falls insensible and is carried to her room by Alice and Raymond.

TETRAZZINI AS THE DEMENTED LUCY

SCENE II—The Tombs of the Ravenswoods

Edgar, weary of life, has come to the rendezvous arranged with Henry, intending to throw himself on his enemy's sword, the last of a doomed race. But he waits in vain, for Henry, filled with remorse at the consequences of his schemes, has left England, never to return Edgar sings the first of the two beautiful airs written by Donizetti for this scene.

Fra poco a me ricovero (Farewell to Earth)

By John McCormack, Tenor (In Italian) 74223 12-inch $1.50

His attention is now attracted by a train of mourners coming from the castle accomsanied by Raumond, who reveals to the unhappy man that Lucu is dving, and even while hey converse the castle bell is heard tolling, a signal that the unhappy maiden is no more.

The grief-stricken lover then depicts his emotion in the second air, a lovely number with sadness in every tone.

The dramatic interest deepens as the air proceeds, until the finale, when Edgar, in an excess of penitence, prays that not even the spirit of the wronged Lucy may approach so accursed a tomb as that of Ravenswood.

I'll follow thee above. Tho' the world frown'd on our union, Tho' in this life they did part us, Yet on high, in fond communion, EDGAR:
Tho' from earth thou'st flown before me, My ador'd, my only treasure; Tho' from these fond arms they tore thee. Soon, soon, I'll follow thee. Shall our hearts be turned to love!

Breaking from Raymond, who endeavors to prevent the fatal act, Edgar stabs himself, and supported in the good man's arms, he repeats in broken phrases the lovely O bell' alma innamorata, and lifting his hands to Heaven, as if to greet the spirit of Lucy, he expires.

Scene and Period: Italy; the beginning of the sixteenth century.

The plot of Donizetti's opera cannot be called a cheerful one—it is, in fact, crowded with horrors. However, it was a great favorite with American audiences for many years, being one of the stock operas of Emma Abott during nearly her whole career. The opera was revived in 1904 for Caruso, but failed to score, and it is quite likely that those who admire its few fine airs must depend on their Victors if they wish to hear them.

Lucrezia, the heroine, was a conspicuous member of the notorious patrician family—the Borgias—celebrated for their diabolical success as poisoners.

Lucrezia Borgia married as her second husband Don Alfonso, Duke of Ferrara. By her former marriage she had a son named Gennaro, of whose existence the Duke is ignorant. This son had, at birth, been placed in the care of a fisherman who brought him up as his own child.

DE MOSCHI AS LUCREZIA

At the opening of the story Lucrezia, who in spite of her criminal practices has still the mother's yearning towards her own child, goes in disguise to Venice to visit him.

She finds her son in the company of some gay Venetian gallants. She watches them, and presently Gennaro, wearied by the mirth of his companions, draws apart and falls asleep on a seat. Lucrezia draws near, and gazing on his youthful beauty, she forgets everything except that she is his mother. She gently presses a kiss on his brow and prepares to depart, when he awakes and asks her who she is. She evades the question, and leads him to talk about his mother, whom he says he has never seen. Feeling drawn toward the beautiful stranger, he tells his story, in the fine Di pescatore.

She bids him farewell, and is about to take her leave when Orsini appears, recognizes her, and after brutally reciting her crimes one by one, tells the horror-stricken Gennaro that it is the Borgia. All turn from her in horror, and Lucrezia falls fainting.

Gennaro afterwards shows his hatred and contempt for the Borgias by tearing down Lucrezia's coat of arms from her palace gates, and is imprisoned by the Duke's orders. Lucrezia, ignorant of the identity of the individual who has insulted her, complains to the Duke, who promises that the perpetrator shall be immediately punished. He gives vent to his feelings in his air, Vieni la mia vendetta.

Gennaro is sent for and Lucrezia at once recognizes him. Full of horror, she turns to the Duke and begs him to overlook the offense. The Duke is relentless and compels Lucrezia herself to hand a poisoned cup to her son. She obeys, but afterward contrives to give the youth an antidote. He suspects her of treachery, but she pleads so tearfully with him that he trusts her and drinks the remedy.

ACT III

This act opens with a chorus of bravos, who have been set to watch the dwelling of Gennaro.

Gennaro, whose life has been saved by the antidote Lucrezia had given him, instead of escaping from the city as she had advised him, accompanies Orsino to a banquet which has been secretly arranged by Lucrezia, and to which have been invited the young men who had recognized and denounced her in Venice.

In this scene occurs the famous Brindisi, or drinking song.

Brindisi (It is Better to Laugh)

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In German) 88188 12-inch. $3.00

This air is a very well known one, and has been frequently sung, but Mme. Schumann-Heink puts such brilliant spirit into it, and sings it with such wealth of gayety, such astonishing range and such agility, that the rendition amazes the listener. It is certain that no music-lover of the present generation has ever heard it sung so brilliantly. The high notes are taken with the ease of a soprano, and altogether this familiar drinking song has never been so well delivered.

The rôle of Maffio Orsini was always one of Mme. Schumann-Heink's favorites, and she makes a gallant figure as the gay Roman youth. The words are well suited to the gayety of the music, and have been translated as follows:

Brindiai

It is better to laugh than be sighing. When we think how life's moments are flying; For each sorrow Fate ever is bringing. There's a pleasure in store for us springing. Tho' our joys, like to waves in the sunshine, Gleam awhile, then are lost to the sight, Yet, for each sparkling ray
That so passes away,
Comes another as brilliant and light.

In the world we some beings discover, Far too frigid for friend or for lover; Souls unblest, and forever repining, Tho' good fortune around them be shining. It were well, if such hearts we could banish To some planet far distant from ours; They're the dark spots we trace, On this earth's favored space; They are weeds that choke up the fair flow'rs!

Then 'tis better to laugh than be sighing; They are wise who resolve to be gay; When we think how life's moments are flying, Enjoy Pleasure's gifts while we may!

In the midst of the feast the door opens, the Borgia appears and tells them that they are doomed, as the wine has been poisoned by her.

LUCREZIA DISCOVERS SHE HAS POISONED HER SON

To her horror she sees Gennaro among the guests. He, too, has drunk of the fatal wine. She again offers him an antidote, which he refuses, because the amount is insufficient to save the lives of his friends. Lucrezia confesses the relationship between them, but Gennaro spurns her and dies. The Duke now appears, intending to share in Lucrezia's hideous triumph, but finds his wife surrounded by her victims—some dead, others dying Lucrezia, a witness to the horrible result of her crime, suffers the keenest remorse, drinks some of her own poison and herself expires.

MADAM BUTTERFLY

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

A Japanese lyric tragedy, founded on the book of John Luther Long and the drama by rid Belasco, with Italian libretto by Illica and Giacosa. Music by Giacomo Puccini. First duced at La Scala, Milan, in 1904, it proved a failure. Revived the following year in htly changed form with much success. First American presentation (in English) occurred October, 1906, in Washington, D. C., by Savage Opera Company. First representation in ian at Metropolitan Opera House, February 11, 1907, with Farrar, Caruso, Homer and ttti.

At Nagasaki, Japan—Time, the present.

The Story

Puccini's opera, which from the first aroused the keenest interest among opera-goen, has become an enduring success. The original Metropolitan production in Italian was under the personal direction of Puccini himself, who refined and beautified it according to his own ideas into one of the most finished operatic productions ever seen here.

The story of the drama is familiar to all through John Luther Long's narrative and the Belasco dramatic version. The tale is the old one of the passing fancy of a man for a woman, and her faithfulness even unto death, which comes by her own hand when she finds herself abandoned.

Puccini has completely identified his music with the sentiments and sorrows of the characters in John Luther Long's drama, and has accompanied the pictorial beauty of the various scenes with a setting of incomparable loveliness. Rarely has picturesque action been more completely wedded to beautiful music.

ACT I

SCENE—Exterior of Pinkerton's house at Nagasaki

At the rise of the curtain Goro, the marriage broker who has secured Pinkerton his bride. is showing the Lieutenant over the house he has chosen for his honeymoon. Sharpless, the American Consul and friend of Pinkerton, now arrives, having been bidden to the marriage.

Then occurs the fine duet, which Caruso and Scotti have sung here in splendid style.

Amore o grillo (Love or Fancy?)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone

(In Italian) 89043 12-inch. By Riccardo Martin, Tenor (In Italian) 87081 10-inch. NOTE.—Mr. Martin sings only Pinkerton's solo from above duet.

MARTIN AS PINKERTON

Pinkerton, joyous in the prospect of his marriage with the dainty Japanese girl, and quite careless of the consequences which may result from such a union, describes his bride to the Consul, who gives the young lieutenant some good advice, bidding him be careful, that he may not break the trusting heart of the Butterfly who loves him too well.

The number closes with a splendid climax, as Pinkerton recklessly pledges the "real American wife" whom he hopes to meet some day; while the Consul gazes at his young friend with some sadness, as if already in the shadow of the tragedy which is to come.

Now is heard in the distance the voice of Butterfly, who is coming up the hill with her girl friends; and she sings a lovely song, full of the freshness of youth and the dawning of love.

This dainty little number is given by Miss Farrar with the naïveté and grace of a fascinating child of fifteen, as ale pictures the young girl in Act I.

The friends and family having been duly introduced Pinkerton, they go to the refreshment table, while Butter timidly confides to Pinkerton, in this touching number. she has for his sake renounced her religion, and will is future bow before the God of her husband.

(In Italian) 89014 12-inch, $4.00

Butterfly is visited by Sharpless, who has received a letter from Pinkerton, and has accepted the unpleasant task of informing Butterfly that the Lieutenant has deserted her. He finds his task a difficult one, for when he attempts to read Pinkerton's letter to her, she misunderstands its purport and continually interrupts the Consul with little bursts of joyful anticipation, thinking that Pinkerton will soon come to her. Finally realizing something of his message, she runs to bring her child to prove to Sharpless the certainty of her husband's home-coming.

BUTTERFLY AND "TROUBLE"

Sai cos' ebbe cuore (Do You Know, My Sweet One)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano (In Italian) 87055 10-in., $2.00 By Emmy Destinn, Soprano (In Italian) 91084 10-in...

In this pitiful air she asks little "Trouble" not to listen to the bad man (Sharpless), who is saving that Pinkerton has deserted them.

Shocked at the sight of the child, which he knew nothing about, Sharpless gives up in despair the idea of further undeceiving her, knowing that she will soon learn the truth, and leaves Butterfly, who refuses to doubt Pinkerton, in an exalted state of rapture over the idea of her husband's return.

Throughout the duet may be heard the mournfully sweet "waiting motive" played softly by the horns, and accompanied by strings pizzicali. This is beautifully given here, and the record is a most impressive one.

The sound of a cannon is heard, and with aid of a glass the two women see Pinkerton's ship, the Abraham Lincoln, entering the harbor.

Duet of the Flowers

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Louise Homer, Contralto $4.00 (In Italian) 89008 12-in.,

Greatly excited. Butterfly bids the maid strew the room with flowers, and they scatter the cherry blossoms everywhere, singing all the while weird harmonies which are hauntingly beautiful.

Miss Farrar's impressive Cio-Cio-San, childish and piquant in its lighter aspects and pitifully tragic in its final scenes, and Mme. Homer's Suzuki, the patient handmaiden, who loves and protects her mistress through all the weary years of waiting, are two most powerful impersonations. Of the music written for these two rôles, this exquisite duet is especially attractive.

Night is falling, and not expecting Pinkerton until morning, Butterfly, Suzuki and the child take their places at the window to watch for his coming. As the vigil begins, in the orchestra can be heard the "Waiting Motive," with its accompaniment by distant voices of the sailors in the harbor, producing an effect which is indescribably beautiful.

FARRAR AND HOMER IN ACT II

SCENE II—Same as the Preceding

The curtain rises on the same scene. It is daybreak. Suzuki, exhausted, is sleeping, but Butterfly still watches the path leading up the hill. Suzuki awakes and insists on Butterfly taking some rest, promising to call her when the Lieutenant arrives.

Sharpless and Pinkerton now enter, and question Suzuki, the Lieutenant being deeply touched to find that Butterfly has been faithful to him, and that a child has been born.

Suzuki, seeing a lady in the garden, demands to know who she is, and Sharpless tells be it is the wife of Pinkerton, he having married in America.

TOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-MADAM BUTTERFLY

ne introduction by Puccini's librettist of this character has been severely criticised, considering it of doubtful taste, and forming a jarring note in the opera. So strong feeling in France, that the part of Kate has been eliminated from the cast.

ne faithful maid is horrified, and dreads the effect of this news on her mistress.

ng bitterly, she goes into Butterfly's chamber, while the friends are left to bitter one, expressed by Puccini in a powerful duet.

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano By Emmy Destinn, Soprano (In Italian) 87030 10-inch, $2.00 (In Italian) 91086 10-inch, 2.00 ow comes the pathetic death scene at the close of the opera. Butterfly, convinced inkerton has renounced her, blindfolds her child that he may not witness her suicide, lown the dagger with which her father committed harl-karl, and after reading the tion on the handle, "To die with honor when one can no longer live with honor," has herself.

her death struggle she gropes her way to the innocent babe, who, blindfolded aving his little flag, takes it all in the spirit of play. The tragic intensity of this scene always moves many to tears.

Miss Farrar puts into this final number all the pathetic despair of Cio-Cio-San's overburdened heart; her rendition being a most impressive and wholly pathetic one; while Mme. Destinn gives a most dramatic interpretation of this scene, perhaps the most heart-rending in the entire range of opera.

Pinkerton enters to ask Butterfly's forgiveness and bid her farewell, and is horrified to find her dying. He lifts her up in an agony of remorse.

In the orchestra, strangely mingling with the American motive, the tragic death motive may be heard as the curtain slowly falls.

This motive, which is also sung by a distant chorus with a peculiarly charming and mysterious effect, is one of the composer's happiest inspirations. The pizzicati passages on the violin which accompany this strange melody are most effectively given by the orchestra.

Priests and Priestesses of the Temple of Isis; Male and Female Slaves; Warriors of the Temple, Attendants, etc.

The scene is laid in the vicinity of and in the Temple of Isis at Memphis. The action is represented as taking place about the time of Ramses 1,

"A fantastic fable was the groundwork; supernatural apparitions and a good dose of comic element were to serve as garnish. But what did Mozart build on this preposterous foundation? What godlike magic breathes throughout this work, from the most popular ballad to the noblest hymn! What many-sidedness, what marvelous variety! The quintessence of every noblest bloom of art seems here to blend in one unequaled flower."—Richard Wagner.

Strictly speaking, the Magic Flute is not an opera, but rather a fairy extravaganza accompanied by some of the most delightful music imaginable. To fully appreciate Mozart's work it should be heard in some German town on a Sunday evening, where middle-class families and sweethearts find much enjoyment in the mixture of mystery, sentiment, comedy and delightful music which make up the opera. The libretto is, of course, utterly absurd, describing as it does the magic of the pipes of Tamino which had the power to control men, animals, birds, reptiles and even the elements, and as flute is continually playing throughout the work, the results may be imagined.

Overture

By Victor Band By Pryor's Band By La Scala Orchestra 31012 12-inch, $: *35135 12-inch, 1 *68207 12-inch.

The overture is not only one of the greatest of its kind, but one of the most gene appreciated. Its wonderful fugue, "in which Mozart sports with fugal counterpoin though it were mere child's play," is played by the band in a striking manner. This fi is announced first by the clarinets and a few bars later the cornets take up the the followed by every instrument in the band in the marvelous finale.

The scene shows a rocky landscape with the Temple of the Queen of the Night vi in the background. Tamino, an Egyptian prince who is traveling with his friends, becauseparated from them, is pursued by a huge serpent, and finally faints from fright and fat Three veiled ladies, attendants on the Queen, come from the Temple to his rescue stab the snake with their javelins. While they go to tell the Queen of the occurr Tamino revives, sees the dead serpent and hides as he hears a flute.

Ein Vogelfanger bin ich ja (A Bird Catcher Am I)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone (In German) 64163 10-inch, $
Papageno, a bird catcher, admirer of damsels, and all-around rogue, enters and a merry lay, piping at every pause. In his song the fowler describes his occupation snaring birds, but says he would like catching women better!

PAPAGENO:
The fowler comes, in spite of rain,
And sings his song in merry strain;
This merry fowler, too, is known
By young and old, from zone to zone.
Knows how to whistle every sound
That birds may sing the whole year round.
Oh, none can be more blithe than I,
With these sweet warblers of the sky.

The fowler comes, in spite of rain, And sings his song in merry strain; This merry fowler, too, is known By young and old, from zone to zone. A net for maidens I should like Would catch the pretty dears by dozens, I'd shut them safely up at home, And never let them forth to roam.

In the part of Papageno Mr. Goritz has few rivals, and his impersonation was one of great features of the recent revival at the Metropolitan.

Tamino now comes forward and gives Papageno credit for having killed the serpen honor which he promptly accepts. The three ladies now return, rebuke Papageno and s Tamino a photograph of the Queen of Night's daughter, the lovely Pamina, who has taken from her mother by Sarastro, the Priest of Isis, to save her from evil influences. Tamino falls in love with the picture and offers to rescue the maiden. He is given an all-powerful magic flute, and accompanied by Papageno sets out for Sarastro's palace.

The scene changes to a room in the palace of the High Priest, where Pamina is discovered in charge of Monostatos, a Moor.

The Moor is betraying his trust by persecuting Pamina with his attentions, when Papageno enters and frightens him away. The bird catcher then tells Pamina of Tamino's love for her, and offers to conduct her to this mysterious lover.

La dove prende (Smiles and Tears)

By Emma Eames, Soprano, and Emilio de Gogorza, Baritone

(In Italian) 89003 12-inch. $4.00

This charming duet, with its grace and inimitable gaiety, introduces the melody of an old German song, Bei Mannern welche Liebe fuhlen.

Smiles and Tears

The smile, that on the lip is playing,
How oft 'twill hide a heart's deep woe!
The tear, that down the cheek is straying,
From purest springs of joy may flow.
And smiles and tears, so legends say,
Make up the sum of Life's brief day.

Yet, whilst that smile the brow is wreathing, One word shall change it to a tear, And one soft sigh's impassion'd breathing Shall bid the tear-drop disappear, When each alike misleads in turn.
Oh, who the heart's deep lore shall learn!

Fair seems false! and false seems fair! Still, what bliss, what joy are there!

After many adventures Tamino and Pamina meet, and by means of the magic flute they are about to escape, but are interrupted by Sarastro, who agrees to unite the lovers if they will remain and be purified by the sacred rites; and as the priest separates them and covers their heads with veils, the curtain falls.

ACT II

The first scene shows a noble forest showing the Temple of Wisdom. The priests assemble, and Sarastro orders the lovers brought before him. He then sings this superb Invocation, one of the most impressive numbers in the opera.

Invocation (Great Isis)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 85042 12-inch. $3.00

In the Invocation, Sarastro calls on the gods Isis and Osiris to give Tamino and Papageno strength to bear the trial now at hand.

Great Isis, great Osiris!

Great Isis, great Osiris!
Strengthen with wisdom's strength this tyro pair;
Ye who guide steps where deserts lengthen,
Brace theirs with nerve, your proof to bear!
Grant them probation's fruit all living;
Yet, should they find a grave while striving,
Think on their virtues, gracious gods, SARASTRO Take them elect to your abodes

In the noble rôle of Sarastro Plançon is especially effective, and his dignified impersonation of the benignant High Priest, who smooths out all the fantastic tangles in the situations which occur in Mozart's opera, is always singularly impressive.

The lovers are admitted to the Temple and begin their probation.

In the next scene Pamina is discovered asleep in a bower of roses. The Queen suddenly rises from the earth and gives Pamina a dagger, telling her to kill Sarastre or Tamino can never be hers. Pamina hesitates, and her mother, in a terrifying and dramatic song, threatens vengeance on all concerned.

Aria della Regina (The Queen's Air)

By Bessie Abott, Soprano By Maria Galvany, Soprano (In Italian) 88051 12-inch, $3.00 (In Italian) 87059 10-inch, 2.00

The Queen of Night, Astriftammante, is one of the most striking characters in Mozart's opera, and the few numbers allotted to her are difficult and florid ones. This great aria is one which the most experienced of sopranos always approaches with misgiving, because of its excessive demands on the vocal powers. Miss Abott and Mme. Galvany completely meet these demands, both singing the air gracefully and with superb execution.

RIFLAMMANTE:
The pangs of hell are raging in my bosom,
Death and destruction wildly flame around!
Go forth and bear my vengeance to Sarastro,
Or as my daughter thou shalt be disown'd!
I cast thee off forever,

I spurn thee and renounce thee, If thou dar'st to brave my wrath; Through thee Sarastro is to perish! Hear, gods of vengeance! Hear a mother's vow! (She disappears.)

Sarastro enters and soothes Pamina, saying that he will take a righteous revenge on the Queen by obtaining the happiness of her daughter. He then sings the noble Cavatina, considered one of the greatest of bass arias.

Qui sdegno non s'accende (Within These Sacred Walls)

By Pol Plançon, Bass (Piano acc.) (In Italian) 85077 12-inch, $3.00 In this number the singer is at his best, and the noble strains are delivered in the broad sonorous style which the music requires.

SARASTRO: Within this hallowed dwelling
Revenge and sorrow cease;
Here troubled doubt dispelling,
The weary heart hath peace.
If thou hast stray'd, a brother's hand
Shall guide thee t'ward the better land.
This hallow'd fane protects thee
From falsehood, guile and fear;
A brother's love directs thee,
To him thy woes are dear.

The probationary trials of the lovers continue through many strange scenes, in one of which Pomina meets Tamino, and not knowing that he has been forbidden to speak to any woman, cries out that he no longer loves her. She then sings this pathetic little air, which Mme. Gadski has interpreted here so beautifully.

Ah lo so (All Has Vanished)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

(In Italian) 88254 12-inch, $3.00

Mme. Gadski has long been recognized as one of the foremost exponents of Mozart in this country. The music of this master demands singers of great understanding and feeling, who must possess not only voice but intelligence and taste.

That Gadski possesses these qualifications in ample measure is fully apparent to all who listen to her superb

Mozart reproductions.

PAMINA: Wretch that I am, too well I know Nought is left me but to mourn, Condemn'd to drain the cup of woe, Joy to me will ne'er return. Oh, Tamino, if for thee, My sighs and bitter tears are vain, Come, kind death, in pity free My weary bosom from its pain!

The trials being finally completed, the lovers are united in the sacred Temple. The Queen and her accomplices attempt to prevent the ceremony, but the scene suddenly changes to the Temple of the Sun, where Sarastro is seen on his throne with Tamino and Pamina beside him, while the baffled Queen and her train sink into the earth.

Time and place: 1721; Amiens, Paris, Havre.

The story of Manon is, of course, taken by Massenet's librettists from the famous novel f the Abbé Prévost, but for operatic purposes several changes have been made, notably in the events of the fourth act, which takes place in France instead of America. Although the lie is very well known, a brief sketch will be included here.

Manon is a country girl, gay, pretty and thoughtless, who meets a handsome young avalier, des Grieux, while on her way to a convent to complete her education. He falls in we with her and she with him as far as her nature will allow, and when he tells her of the aieties and pleasures of Paris, she needs little persuasion to induce her to elope with him, the Capital, to the chagrin of Guillot, whose carriage the lovers appropriate.

Soon tiring of love in a cottage, however, the young girl encourages the attentions of a ch nobleman, de Brétigny, and when des Grieux is taken away forcibly by his father, she ezes the opportunity and leaves with her new lover.

In Act Ill she learns that des Gieux, despondent because of her faithlessness, has resolved penter a monastery. Her fickle affections turn again to him, and she visits him at the eminary of St. Sulpice. He at first repulses her, saying his love is dead, but is unable to exist her, and they depart together.

The next act occurs in a gambling house, where des Grieux is endeavoring to win money support Manon in the luxury she demands. Guillot, in revenge for the trick played on im in Act I, causes their arrest, des Grieux for cheating and Manon as a dissolute woman.

The last scene occurs on the road to Havre, where des Grieux and Lescaut, Manon's rother, plan to rescue Manon as she is being taken to the ship, en route to the prison colony n Louisiana. The soldiers appear, but it is a dying Manon they escort, and the unfortunate pirl, after repenting and asking forgiveness of des Grieux, dies in his arms.

ACT I

SCENE 1-Courtyard of an Inn at Amiens

As the curtain rises the crowd of villagers, including Lescaut, are waiting the coming of the coach, which presently arrives and discharges Manon. The young girl regards the animated scene with much interest, and soon espies Lescaut, her cousin, who was to meet the at this point and escort her to the convent school. He greets her and compliments her in her charming appearance. She blushes and then artlessly tells him of her impressions luring the journey from her country home. The scene from this point has been recorded by the Scala singers.

Tenor; Riccardo Tegani, Baritone (In Italian) *55000 12-inch, $1.50

Lescaut asks Manon to excuse him for a while as he must go to see after her luggage.

LESCAUT (to Manon): Wait a moment.

Be prudent; I am going to find your luggage.

He goes out, and the townspeople desert the square, leaving Manon alone. The roue, Guillot, appears on the balcony of the hotel, crying: "Miserable landlord! Are we never to have any wine?"

He sees Manon, and his evil eyes light up at this vision of youth and beauty.

GUILLOT:
Heavens! What do I see? Young lady!
Ahem! Ahem! Young lady!
(Aside)
Really, my head is turning round!

MANON (aside and laughing):
What a funny man!

GUILLOT:
Young lady, I am Guillot de Morfontaine. I

Young lady, I am Guillot de Morfontaine. I am rich and would give a good deal to hear a word of love from you. Now, what do you say to that?

Manon:
That I should be ashamed, if I were not more disposed to laugh.

DE BRETIGNY:
Now then, Guillot, what's the game? We are waiting for you.

GUILLOT: Oh, go to the Devil.

POUSETTE (to Guillot):
Are you not ashamed? At your age!

DE BRETIGNY:

This time I swear the dog has by chance found a prize.

Never did sweeter look light up a woman's face!

Now then, Guillot, let the girl alone and come in. We are calling you.

GUILLOT:

Ay, ay, in a moment.
(To Manon):
My little one, give me a word.
DE BRETIGNY:
Guillot, let the girl alone.

Guillot, let the girl alone.

GUILLOT (softly to Manon):

A postillion is coming directly; when you see him, understand that a carriage is at your service. Take it, and afterwards you shall Service. Take it, and alterment know more.

Lescaut (who has just entered):
What do you say?
Guillot (confused):
Oh, sir! nothing, sir!
Lescaut (boisterously):

Lescaur (boisterously):
Oh, sir! Did you say—
Guillor (returning to the pavillion):
Nothing, sir, I said.

Guillot is frightened by the gruff soldier, to the amusement of the bystanders, who laugh at the baffled libertine until he flees in confusion.

Lescaut now warns Manon to beware of the men she may meet.

LESCAUT (to Manon):
He spoke to you, Manon.

Manon (lightly):
Well, can you say 'twas my fault?

LESCAUT:
That's true; and in my eyes you are so good that I won't trouble myself.
(The two guardsmen enter.)

FIRST GUARDSMAN (to Lescaut):
How now! Thou comest not!

SECOND GUARDSMAN

Both cards and dice are waiting your pleasure below.

LESCAUT:

I come; but first to this young lady, with your leave, good sirs, I must speak some words of counsel full of

I must speak some words of counsel full of wisdom.

(In Italian) *55000 12-inch, $1.50

The young girl promises to be prudent and Lescaut leaves with the guardsmen.

Lescaut (to Manon):
Give good heed to what I say—
Duty calls me now away,
To consult these comrades here
Upon a point that's not quite clear.
Wait for me, Manon, just a moment, no more.
Make no mistake, but prudent be,
And if, forsooth, some silly man

Should whisper folly in your ear,
Behave as though you did not hear.
For safety's sake adopt that plan.
(To the Guardsmen. aside)
Now let us go and see on which of us the goddess of the game will look with loving

But I know how much I am loved.

Des Grieux (with passion):
Thou art loved! Manon. I adore thee!

MANON:

Do you think your father will give his consent?
Des Grieux:

Yes; he will never in such a matter as this oppose me.

MANON: Dost thou desire it? DES GRIEUX:

I desire it, with all my soul! MANON:

Then embrace me, Chevalier. (They embrace.) And now, go;-send thy letter.

Des Grieux starts to go, but seeing some beautiful flowers on the table asks who sent them. Manon replies evasively, and asks if he does not trust her and if he is iealous. He assures her of his perfect confidence.

A noise is heard outside, and Lescaut, accompanied by de Brétigny, a French nobleman, enters, the former loudly demanding satisfaction from des Grieux for the abduction of his cousin. Des Grieux at first defies him, but remembering that he is a member of Manon's family, shows him the letter he had written to his father asking her hand in marriage. Lescaut engages him in conversation, thus giving de Brétigny an opportunity to speak to Manon aside. He tells her that des Grieux is to be carried off by his father that night, and urges her to fly with him. Tempted by the thoughts of wealth and pleasure, the young girl hesitates. Lescaut now loudly expresses satisfaction with the attitude of des Grieux, and departs with de Brétigny.

Des Grieux goes out to post the letter and Manon struggles with the temptation which has come to her; the pathetic air. Adjeu notre petite table, indicating that she is yielding.

space we lovers filled. A single glass served both of us, and each, in drinking, sought upon its margin where dear lips had been. Ah! best of friends, how thou hast loved!

Hearing des Grieux approaching, she hastily tries to conceal her tears. He observes them, however, and tries to soothe her by relating a dream he has had.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-MASSENET'S MANON

"Listen, Manon," he cries, "On my way I dreamed a lovely dream,"

DES GRIEUX:
With fancy's eye I saw, Manon,
A sweet and lowly cot,
Its white walls, deck'd with flowers fair,
Gleam'd thro' the wood!
Beneath whose peaceful shadows
Ran clear the babbling brook;
Overhead, 'mid verdant leaves
Sang so sweet and full the joyous birds,

'Tis paradise! Ah, no, All is sad, so sad and dreary, For, O my only love, thou art not there.

Manon (softly):
"Tis a vision, 'tis but a fancy!

Des Grieux:
No! for thus we'll pass our life,
If but thou wilt. O Manon!

A knock is heard and Manon exclaims, aside, "Oh, Heaven, already they have come for him!" She tries to prevent him from opening the door, but he insists, and is seized and carried away, while Manon, suddenly repenting, is overcome with grief.

ACT III

SCENE-A Street in Paris on a Fête Day

Manon enters, accompanied by de Brétigny and several gallants. She is in a gay mood and extols youth and love in a fine vocal gavotte, charmingly given here by Miss Farrar.

Gavotte—Obéissons quand leur voix appelle (Hear the Voice of Youth)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

(In French) 87023 10-inch. $2.00

ANON:
List to the voice of youth when it calleth,
It bids ye to love for aye!
And ere the pride of beauty falleth,
Love then while you may.
Profit then by the time of youth,
And do not stay to count the days,
Remember well this adage—be merry and gay always!
The heart, alas, to love is e'er willing,
And ever willing to forget,
So while its pulse is thrilling,
Love, ere its day hath set!

Manon, seeing des Grieux's father, timidly approaches him and asks if des Grieux has forgotten her. She learns that the young man has forgiven her, buried his love, and is planning to enter a monastery. When the Count has departed, the capricious girl resolves to go to St. Sulpice and see for herself if she has been so easily forgotten; and as the curtain falls she is calling to Lescaut to conduct her thither.

SCENE 11-Reception Room at St. Sulpice

At the beginning of this scene the Count pleads with his son not to retire from the world, but des Grieux says he is resolved, and his father takes a sorrowful leave.

Left alone, des Grieux sings his lovely song of renunciation, which the Victor offers in Italian, French and German by five famous tenors, the Caruso record also including the preceding recitative.

He declares he will now seek the peace of mind which only faith in Heaven can give.

Des Grieux: I'm alone at last! The supreme moment now has come. From earthly ties I'm free, and only seek the rest which faith in heaven can give!

Ah! depart, image fair,
Leave me now at rest;
Have regard to my prayer,
Ease my poor tortured breast.
To the dregs I have drain'd
Life's most bitter cup,
Nor to Heaven once complain'd,
Though heart's blood filled it up.
Dead to me now are love and all that men call glory. I desire to banish from my memory an evil name—a name which haunts me! Oh Heaven! with fame all searching, my soul now purge from stain', Oh! Jet thy pure and glorious light chase far away the gloom that lays on my heart.

He goes slowly out and Manon enters, shuddering at the gloomy walls and wondering f her lover has quite forgotten her. Des Grieux soon returns and is astounded to see Manon, sidding her begone, saying his love is dead. She says she cannot believe it.

MANON:

These eyes that oft thou hast kissed with ardor, do they shine no more, even through my weeping! Am I not myself? Do not turn away, but look on me. Am I not Manon?

Des Grieux is deeply moved, but asks Heaven for strength to resist her. Her pleadngs finally have their effect, and he cries: "Ah! Manon! No longer will I struggle against nvself!" and they depart together.

THE GAMBLING SCENE-ACT IV

ACT IV

SCENE—A Gambling Room in Paris

Des Grieux has been persuaded by Manon to come to this place in the hope of winning money to satisfy her desire for luxury. He plays for high stakes and wins large sums from Guillot, who leaves in a rage. As des Grieux is showing Manon the gold he has won, a loud knocking is heard and the police enter with Guillot, who denounces des Grieux as a swindler and Manon as his accomplice. They are arrested and taken to prison, but des Grieux is afterward released through his father's influence, while Manon is ordered to be deported to America by way of Havre.

ACT V

SCENE-On the Road to Havre

Des Grieux and Lescaut are on the Havre road, waiting for the soldiers who are escorting the prisoners to the ship bound for America, des Grieux having conceived the mad idea of rescuing Manon. Beginning the duet he sings his sad and remorseful air, Manon in Chains!

DES GRIEUX (discovered seated by the wayside):

Manon, poor Manon! Must I see thee herded with these wretched beings and be powerless to aid? O Heaven! Merciless Heaven! Must I then despair! (He sees Lescaut approaching.) He comes! (Advancing impetuously to Lescaut.) Thy fellows now make ready; the soldiers will soon reach this place. Thy men are fully armed; they will rescue Manon and give her back to me! What! can it not be done? Are all my fond hopes vain? Oh! why dost thou keep silence?

Lescaut hesitates and finally says:

LESCAUT: Sir, I have done my best— DES GRIEUX (anxiously): Go on! LESCAUT: And grieve to say that all is lost. Des Grieux (piteously): Lost! LESCAUT: Scarce had the sun shone on the arms of the soldiers ere all our men fled!

Des Grieux (distracted):

'Tis false! 'Tis false! Great Great Heaven hath taken pity on my suffering, and at last comes the hour expected! In a moment my Manon shall be free! LESCAUT (sadly):
Since I have told the truth— DES GRIEUX (about to strike him): Away! LESCAUT: Strike if you will. 'Tis soldier's fare. He's by the King ill-paid; and then, whate'er his worth, the good folks shake their head and call him "wretched fellow." DES GRIEUX (violently): Away!

The voices of the soldiers are now heard in the distance singing as they ride. Des Grieux and Lescaut listen attentively, and the former, realizing that they are almost at hand, madly tries to rush forward. Lescaut dissuades him, saying he has a better plan, as he is well acquainted with the officer in command. When the escort arrives, Manon is found to be very ill and is left behind by the officer at Lescaut's suggestion. During a heart-rending scene Manon asks and receives the forgiveness of des Grieux, repents her sins and dies in his arms.

MANON LESCAUT

(Man-on' Les-ko')

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Music by Giacomo Puccini, the libretto (founded on Abbé Prévost's novel) being the work of the composer and a committee of friends. English version by Mowbray Marras. First presented in Milan in 1893. Produced at the Opéra-Comique, Paris, January 19, 1884; in English by the Carl Rosa Company, at Liverpool, January 17, 1885; at Drury Lane, May 7, 1885. In French at Covent Garden, May 19, 1881. First New York production, January 18, 1907.

Characters

MANON LESCAUT
LESCAUT, sergeant of the King's Guards	Baritone
CHEVALIER DES GRIEUX (deh Gree-uay')
GERONTE DE RAVOIR, Treasurer-General	Bass
EDMUND, a student

An Innkeeper, a Singer, a Dancing-master, a Sergeant, a Captain. Singers, Old Beaux and Abbés, Girls, Citizens, Villagers, Students, People, Courtezans, Archers, Sailors.

Scene and Period: Paris and vicinity; second half of the eighteenth century.

THE STORY

This early Puccini opera was performed by a struggling opera company in 1898, but the performance was so wholly bad that we have made no mention of it in our chronicle at the top of the page. The real New York premiere was of course the Metropolitan production in 1907, when Puccini himself was present. An English version of the opera was given in Philadelphia, however, by Gustav Hinrichs during one of his summer seasons,—August 29, 1894.

The Abbé Prévost romance has been treated operatically by several composers, the first being Halévy, who wrote a ballet on the subject in 1830. Other settings followed—by Balfe, 1836: Auber in 1856 and Massenet in 1884.

Puccini's version consists of four detached scenes selected from the novel, and the hearer should possess some knowledge of the story to fully understand the action of the opera.

The first act shows the courtyard of an inn at Amiens. Manon's brother, Lescaut, a dissolute soldier, is escorting his pretty little sister to the convent where she is to complete her education. While Lescaut is carousing with some chance companions, Manon meets a handsome gallant, des Grieux, who chances to be dining at the inn, dressed as a student. The prospect of school not appealing strongly to the young girl, she readily agrees to elope with des Grieux, thereby spoiling the plans of the old noue, Geronte, who had planned to abduct the pretty school girl. Manon soon tires of des Grieux and his poverty, and leaves him for the wealthy Geronte; but even this luxury fails to bring her happiness, and when des Grieux appears again she runs away with him.

FARRAR AS MANON

Geronte is furious and denounces Manon to the police as an abandoned woman. She is condemned to be deported to the French possessions in Louisiana. Des Grieux and Lescaut try to rescue her, but the attempt fails, and in desperation the former begs the commandant to permit him to accompany her to America.

In the final scene the lovers are shown in a desert near New Orleans. (The Abbé Prévost's knowledge of American geography was evidently limited!) Des Grieux leaves Manon to search for water, and returns just in time to see her die in his arms, after a most affecting scene.

ACT I

SCENE-A Street in front of an Inn at Amiens

Des Grieux, dressed as a student, strolling among the crowd, meets Edmund and a party of students, who warmly greet him. He is in a gay mood and addresses some of the girls who are passing, asking them, in this charming air, if there is one among them who will take pity on his lonely condition.

Tra voi belle brune (Now Among You)

By Franco de Gregorio, Tenor (In Italian) *45015 10-inch, $1.00

This gay song is effectively given by one of the Victor's new tenors, of the La Scala forces, and the record is doubled with the Madrigale from Act II.

A diligence now arrives, and Manon and her brother and Geronte, a chance traveling companion, alight. Des Grieux is struck with the beauty of the young girl, and when Lescaut and Geronte have gone into the inn to arrange for quarters, he questions her respectfully. She tells him that she is bound for a convent, but does not wish to go. Lescaut now calls to his sister, and she enters the inn after promising to meet des Grieux later in the evening.

The young man gazes after her, and says to himself that never has he seen so lovely a picture of youth and innocence. He expresses his emotion in a fine air, one of the loveliest of the numbers allotted to des Grieux. (On the reverse side is an air from Tosca.)

Donna non vidi mai (Never Did I Behold)

By Egidio Cunego, Tenor (In Italian) *45016 10-inch, $1.00

The students now gather round, bantering des Grieux on his new conquest, but he is in no mood for joking and goes into the inn. Lescaut now joins a crowd of soldiers who are sambling, and soon becomes absorbed in the game. Geronte, seeing the brother thus engaged, seeks the landlord and plots to abduct Manon. Edmund overhears the scheme and informs des Grieux, who finds Manon and induces her to elope with him. They take the carriage which Geronte had ordered and make their escape, leaving him furious. However, he finds Lescaut and suggests that they go to Paris in search of the runaways. Lescaut, who has been drinking, consents, delicately hinting that if Geronte will admit him into the family group, he will use his influence to induce Manon to desert des Grieux for the older but wealthier suitor.

ACT II

SCENE—An Apartment in Geronte's House in Paris

Since the events of Act I Manon is supposed to have left des Grieux for the wealthier Geronte. She is seen surrounded by the utmost luxury, attended by her hairdresser, dancing master, etc. Lescaut enters, evidently much at home, and congratulates her on her change of fortune, taking to himself all the credit for having advised her so cleverly. She says she is happy and contented, but asks Lescaut if he has heard any news of des Grieux—whether he is grieving or whether he has already forgotten her. Lescaut tells her that the young man is disconsolate, and is gambling in order to get wealth to win her back to him.

Manon gazes pensively at the rich hangings, and in a fine air expresses her longing for the humble cottage she has left.

In quelle trine morbide (In Those Silken Curtains)

By Gina C. Viafora, Soprano (In Italian) 64094 10-inch. $1.00

They are interrupted by the entrance of a company of Madrigal singers who have been sent by Geronte to amuse Manon. They sing a beautiful Madrigal, given here by Signora Lopez-Nunes and La Scala Chorus.

Madrigale—Sulla vetta del monte (Speed O'er Summit)

By Lopez-Nunes, Soprano, and Chorus (In Italian) *45015 10-inch. $1.00

When the singers have departed, the dancing master appears to teach Manon the minuel. She takes her lesson, while Geronte and several friends watch her admiringly. In a gay mood she sings a little song to the air of the minuet.

Minuetto di Manon, "L'ora o Tirsi" (Joyful Hours)
By Frances Alda, Soprano (In Italian) 87079 10-inch, $2.00

Des Grieux now enters and reproaches Manon bitterly. At the sight of him her love returns, and she begs him to take her away from all this luxury. They sing a passionate duet, followed by a lovely solo for des Grieux, who reproaches Manon for her fickleness.

Geronte surprises them, but controls his rage, and sarcastically wishing them a pleasant tele-à-tête, goes out. Lescaut shortly afterward rushes in and announces that Geronte has sent for the police. Des Grieux begs Manon to escape at once, but she insists on collecting her jewels first. This delay is fatal, and she is arrested and taken to prison, charged with being an abandoned woman.

Intermezzo (Between Acts II and III)

By Arthur Pryor's Band

*35003 12-inch. $1.25

Now comes the exquisite intermezzo, which gives a musical picture of the journey to Havre of Des Grieux to secure the release of Manon, and of his resolution to follow and protect her wherever she may be sent—"Even to the end of the world!" cries the unhappy lover.

This number exhibits well the genius of this composer in making the orchestra reflect the incidents and passions of the story instead of using it as a mere accompaniment.

ACT III

SCENE-The Harbor at Harre

Manon has been banished from France, and is now embarking on the ship for the French colony in Louisiana. Des Grieux, unable to secure her release, entreats the officers to permit him to go on board. The captain, touched by the grief of the unhappy lovers, consents, and with a cry of joy Des Grieux embarks just as the ship is sailing.

ACT IV

SCENE—A Desolate Spot in Louisiana

This act is merely a long duet in which the sad, but very human, tragedy is ended. The music portrays the failing strength of Manon, the despair of Des Gneux when he is powerless to aid her, the last farewell of the lovers, and the bitter grief of the unhappy young man when Manon dies. As she expires, unable to bear more, he falls senseless on her body.

OR BOOK OF THE OPERA-THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO

SETTING OF ACT I AT LA SCALA

lozart's Marriage of Figaro, with its merry plot and music, is one of the most delightmusical comedies, and regret must be expressed for the all too infrequent performof this ever-young and lovely opera, in which the complications of the story, the quick es of mood, and the sparkling humor are all so well reflected in the music. In no opera, perhaps, is there such a succession of musical gems as in Figaro. Each is perits way and each seems to enhance the beauty of the others.

his comedy by Beaumarchais, on which the plot is founded, has been utilized by composers. Mozart's version being written in 1785.

hose who have read the story of Barber of Seville will find themselves again making quaintance of Bartolo, Almaoiva and Figure, some time after the marriage of the dashount to Bartolo's ward. The Count has settled down quietly on his estates, while , as a reward for his services as a match-maker, has been appointed major-domo of astle. Figaro is in love with the Countess' maid Susanna, and expects to marry her but unfortunately for his plans, had also promised to wed Marcellina, the ex-housekeeper of Bartolo, on the very same day. Further complications are promised by the fact that the Count, already wearying of his wife, is making love to Susanna himself.

HE GREAT HALL OF BARTOLO'S PALACE-ACT I, SCENE II

ACT I SCENE I-A Room in the Count's Chateau

Overture

By Arthur Pryor's Band *35109 12-inch, $1.25

The overture is a most delightful one, written in true Mozartian style, and Mr. Pryor has given a brilliant reading of it, bringing out all its beauties.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO

At the opening of the opera Susanna tells Figure that the Count is trying to flirt with her. and Figure plans revenge. Marcelling has confided in Dr. Bartolo, and as the portly doctor still harbors a grudge against Figgro for robbing him of his ward, he consents to help her. The Countess, who seems to be the only one in the castle not engaged in intrigue of some kind, thinks only of her husband, and how to bring him back to her side.

ACT II

SCENE 1- Apartment of the Countess

At the beginning of Scene II, the Countess sings her lovely appeal to Cupid.

Porgi amor (Love, Thou Holy Impulse)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano (In Italian) 88275 12-inch. $3.00 By Teresa Arkel, Soprano (Double-faced, see page 211) (Italian) 63419 10-inch.

The Countess is one of Mme. Gadski's most effective impersonations, and she makes an imposing figure in her royal garb, singing the Mozart music with a richness of voice which is always a delight to the ear. The Porgi amor, with its melancholy undertone, never seems to be heard at its best at the opera, as it is introduced under rather trying conditions—at the very beginning of a scene and without preparatory recitative. Certainly Mme. Gadski has never sung this lovely air better than at this time, it being delivered with much purity of tone and genuine sentiment. The record will be pronounced one of the most satisfactory and appealing interpretations in the artist's entire list.

Susanna tells the Countess of her husband's fickleness and they consult Figaro, who plans to make the Count jealous by telling him that the Countess is to meet a lover that evening in the garden. It is planned to send Marcellina in the Countess' place, and Cherubino, dressed as a young girl, to meet the Count in Susanna's place.

Figure departs, and Cherubine enters. Seeing his mistress, he begins to heave deep sighs, but Susanna mocks him and tells the Countess he has written a song about his lady love. The Countess bids him sing it, and he takes his guitar and describes the delights and torments caused by Cupid's arrow.

Voi che sapete (What is This Feeling?)

By Nellie Melba. Soprano (In Italian) 88067 12-inch. $3.00

By Luisa Tetrazzini. Soprano (In Italian) 88300 12-inch, 3.00

The song is in ballad form, to suit the situation, the voice giving out the clear, lovely melody, while the stringed instruments carry on a simple accompaniment pizzicato, to imitate the guitar; and this delicate outline is shaded and animated by solo wind instruments.

It is difficult to say which to admire most—the gracefulness of the melodies, the delicacy of disposition of the parts, the charm of the tonecoloring, or the tenderness of expression—the whole is of entrancing beauty.

GADSKI AND REIGELMAN AS COUNTESS AND CHERUBINO

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—THE MARRIAGE OF FIGARO

CHERUBINO:
What is this feeling makes me so sad? What is this feeling makes me so glad? Pain that delights me,—How can it be? Pleasure that pains me!—From C Pleasure that pains me!— Fetter'd though free! Whence, too, these yearnings, Strange to myself? Tell me their meaning, spirit or elf!

SCENE-ACT III

Why am I burning? Why do I freeze? Restless forever, never at ease. All is so altered, nothing's at rest, Or are these changes but in my breast? Gentler the breezes, day is more bright; Fairer the moonbeams shine on the night; Greener the forest, greener the hill, Soft, too, the music flows from each rill.

The women now dress up the page to represent Susanna, and have no sooner finished when the Count knocks. and Cherubino hides in the closet. The Count observes his wife's confusion, and hearing noises in the closet, bccomes jealous. He demands that she open the closet door. and when she refuses he goes for a crowbar. The moment he is out Cherubino, aided by Susanna, slips out and escapes through the window, and Susanna enters the closet in his place. When the Count returns and opens the door, the maid comes out and the husband is forced to apologize for his suspicions. Marcelling now enters with her lawyer and demands that Figure shall keep his promise to marry her. The Count promises to look into the matter. ACT III

SCENE 1-A Cabinet in the Count's Residence

The third act opens with a scene between Susanna and the Count. He plans to force her to accept his attentions by threatening to make Figure wed the ancient Marcellina, while Susanna endeavors to gain time. This scene is continued in a charming and graceful duet.

THE COUNT IS JEALOUS-ACT II

Crudel perchè finora (Too Long You Have Deceived Me) By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano, and Antonio Scotti, Baritone

(In Italian) 89027 12-inch. $4.00 Susanna pretends to encourage the attentions of the Count, in furtherance of the plot conceived by the Countess; while at the same time she deftly repels his advances. Finally she promises to meet him in the arbor and the Count is in ecstasies.

Too long you have deceived me;
Hope, weary, bids farewell.
SUSANNA:
What passes in her bosom
A maiden dreads to tell.
COUNT:
You'll meet me in the grove, then?
SUSANNA:
When sunset's on the lea.
COUNT:
And do not mean it falsely?
SUSANNA:
Oh, no; rely on me!
COUNT (aside):
What transport now is flying
Thro' this enraptured breast!
SUSANNA (aside):
Oh, may the scheme I'm trying.

Bring all to peace and rest!

COUNT:
Then, by the garden bower?
SUSANNA:
At twilight I will be.
COUNT:
You'll not forget the hour?
SUSANNA:
Oh, no, depend on me.
COUNT:
In the garden?
SUSANNA:
Yes!
COUNT:
You'll not forget?
SUSANNA:
You'll not forget?
SUSANNA:
No! No! No! Oh, no, depend on me!
COUNT (retiring):
I have won her!
SUSANNA (aside):
Well, cunning as you are, sir,
This time you've met your match!

Of the seven duets in which Susanna takes part in the opera, the Crudel perche is the most effective, and Miss Farrar and Mr. Scotti, both accomplished Mozart singers, deliver it delightfully. The accompaniment, so all-important in Mozart's works, is perfectly played under Mr. Rogers' direction.

They separate, each satisfied with the interview,—the Count believing she has yielded, and Susanna convinced that she has him in a trap.

Marcellina, with her lawyer, Bartolo and Figaro now enter, and Figaro is informed that he must wed Marcellina or pay damages; but the discovery of a birthmark proves him to be the long lost son of Marcellina. He embraces his mother just as Susanna comes in, and she, seeing Figaro with his arms around the woman he was lately trying to avoid, decides that he has changed his mind. Matters are explained, however, and preparations for the wedding are begun.

Susanna now seeks the Countess and tells her mistress that the Count wishes to meet her (Susanna) in the garden. The Countess then dictates a letter in which Susanna is to appoint a time and place for the meeting. The writing of this letter is portrayed in the delicate Letter Duet.

Che soave zeffiretto (Letter Duet—Song to the Zephyr) By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano, and Emma Eames, Contralto

(In Italian) 95202 12-inch, $5.00

This number is always greatly enjoyed in representations of the opera, being a fine example of the Mozartian style and full of beauties, not only in the vocal parts, but in the masterly orchestration.

SCENE II-Hall in the Chateau

In this scene Figaro and Susanna are married, and in the course of the festivities Susanna contrives to slip the note to the Count, who is overjoyed.

ACT IV

SCENE-The Garden of the Chateau

The last setting shows the garden where the most delightful of the comedy scenes takes place. Susanna, disguised as the Countess, and the Countess disguised as Susanna, enter. The mistress conceals herself, while Susanna, awaiting the Count, and knowing that Figare is listening, sings her famous soliloquy.

Deh vieni non tardar (Oh, Come, My Heart's Delight)

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano (In Italian) 88020 12-inch, $3.00 She pours out her whole soul in this address to the imaginary lover, in order to increase the jealousy of Figaro, who is hidden near by. This is one of the most exquisite numbers in the opera, and Mme. Sembrich's singing of it always remains long in the memory of those who hear her in Nozze.

JUPORT

LUSSAN AS CHERUBINO

SUSANNA:

Ah, why so long delay? speed, speed thee hither!

While thou'rt away, all nature seems to wither.

Tho' bright the moon, and bright the stars are glowing,
Deeper around the wood its shade is throwing. In ev'ry gentle murmur of the river, In the rustling reeds that near it quiver, A voice to love invites, the bosom filling

In ev'ry gentle murmur of the river,
In the rustling reeds that near it quiver,
A voice to love invites, the bosom filling
With love alone, all other passions stilling;
Come then, my dearest,—the hours are quickly flying!
Let me with roses bind now thy head!

Cherubino, having an appointment with the maid Barbarina, now enters, and seeing the Countess, thinks it is Susanna and kisses her. The Countess struggles, and the little rascal says:

CHERUBINO:
Why to me a kiss deny?
With the Count you are not shy!
Come, come, give o'er, then,
And strive no more, then;
One kiss to your little friend!

The Count arrives just in time to see this, and giving Cherubino a box on the ear, sends him flying. He then makes love to the supposed Susanna, the Countess disguising her voice and encouraging him. Figaro now sees Susanna, whom he urse takes to be the Countess, and tells her that her husband and Susanna are together.

nna reveals herself and Figaro embraces her. The Count sees this embrace and his usy making him forget his new conquest, he seizes Figaro and calls for help. The s now revealed, and the Count, confessing he is conquered, begs the Countess' forgiveness promises to be a model husband. As the curtain falls the three happy couples are ing the house to continue the marriage festivities.

MARTHA

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Libretto by St. George and Friedrich. Music by Friedrich von Flotow. The opera an elaboration of "Lady Henrietta, or the Servant of Greenwich," a ballet-pantomime, wittest by St. George and music by Flotow, Burgmuller and Deldevez, which was suggested an actual incident and presented in Paris in 1844. Martha was first produced at the Cou Opera, Vienna, November 25, 1847. First London production July 1, 1858, at Cover Garden, in Italian. First American production 1852, in German.

Characters of the Drama

LADY HARRIET DURHAM, Maid-of-honor to Queen Anne
SIR TRISTAN MICKLEFORD, Lady Harriet's cousin
PLUNKETT, a wealthy farmer Bass
LIONEL, his foster-brother, afterwards Earl of Derby
THE SHERIFF OF RICHMOND
THREE SERVANTS OF LADY HARRIET, Tenor and Two Basses
THREE MAIDSERVANTS,
Chorus of Ladies, Servants, Farmers, Hunters and Huntresses, Pages, etc.

The scene is laid, at first, in the Castle of Lady Harriet, then in Richmond and environs, during the reign of Queen Anne.

Flotow's melodious opera has always been a most popular one, with its spirited Fair Scen its beautiful duets and quartet, the famous third act finale and the beloved "Last Rose of Summer."

The composer was of noble birth, a son of Baron von Flotow of Mecklenburg, and was born in 1812. His father destined him for a diplomat, but the boy loved music, and went to Paris to study. His first attempt at opera was Pierre et Catharine, followed by Stradella and others.

Many great prima donne have sung the role of Martha—Patti, Nilsson, Kellogg, Gerster, Richings, Parepa Rosa; and in the present day Sembrich, have charmed their audiences with Flotow's beautiful strains

The fine overture, which contains many of the best known melodies, is splendidly played here by the band. On the reverse side of the double-faced (35133) is a 'cello solo by Sorlin.

ACT I

SCENE 1-Boudoir of Lady Harriet

LIONEL AND PLUNKETT-ACT I

Lady Harriet, maid-of-honor to Queen Anne, is weary of the monotony of court life. She is bored by her admirers, and jewels and flowers pall upon her. "Why do you weep says her faithful maid, Nancy. "I do not know," exclaims Harriet. Nancy, beginning the duet, ventures to guess.

Nancy:

Of the knights so brave and charming
Who surround our gracious queen,
And themselves with wit are arming.

Some one has so lucky been Your cold and haughty heart to win! Is there aught in this alarming?

LADY HARRIET:

Vain belief! How can rejoice me Such insipid, idle love? For to please and interest me Flattery is not enough!

Riches heap on you their treasures, Honor high is offered you.

LADY HARRIET:
In the midst of gold and pleasures
Weariness alone I see.

NANCY: This is really too distressing; Her's is called a brilliant lot! If love does not work a wonder, This flower fades and blossoms not! Balls and tournaments are giving, And your colors win the prize, Proudly from the banners waving, While the victor vainly sighs For a smile from your fair eyes, Which his armor penetrated!

ADY HARRIET:

Which his armor penetrated:

LADY HARRIET:
All my glowing ardent wishes
Please me not when they're fulfill'd!
What of happiness I dreamed
Always has disgust instill'd.
The homages they offer,
Praise and honor they bestow,
Leave me joyless, once obtained
Make me not with pride to glow.

NANCY:
Then, from ennui to save you,
Nothing is for you remaining
But to let your heart be conquer'd,
Not a particle retaining!

Tristan, Harriet's cousin, a gay but rather ancient beau, is now announced and proposes a long list of diversions for Harriet's amusement. She declines them all and teases him unmercifully. The song of the servant maids, on their way to the Richmond Fair, now floats in through the window; and hearing these strains of the happy peasants, Harriet conceives a madcap desire to accompany them. Nancy and Tristan protest, but she orders them to go with her. Dresses are procured and they start for the fair, the ladies in the disguise of servant girls, and Tristan garbed as a farmer.

SCENE II-The Fair at Richmond

The scene changes to the Richmond Fair, where a motley crowd of men and maidens are looking for positions. Two young farmers, Plunkett and Lionel, now enter, the latter being an orphan and adopted brother of Plunkett. Lionel's father, on his deathbed, had given Plunkett a ring, which was to be presented to the Queen should the son ever be involved in difficulties.

In this fine duet, one of the gems of Flotow's popular romantic opera, the friends speak of Lionel's father and the incident of the ring.

Lionel tells the story of his adoption by Plunkett's family in the fine aria beginning-

This air is universally popular and has been used for many poems, including several hymns. Plunkett then sings-and tells of the great love he has for his adopted brother.

The duet, which is a very beautiful one, then follows:

We have never learnt his station. Never knew your father's rank: All he left to tell the secret Was the jewel on your hand.
"If your fate should ever darken,"
Quoth he, "Show it to the Queen;
She will save you, she will guard you
When no other help is seen."

Here in peace and sweet contentment Have I passed my life with you; Stronger, daily, grew a friendship That forever lasts, when true. Вотн: Brother, think not wealth and splendor, If perchance they e'er be mine, Can as happy this heart render As the friendship fix'd in thine.

The disguised ladies now appear, accompanied by the unwilling and disgusted Tristan. who considers the whole affair a joke in very bad taste. The two young farmers spy the girls, and being much taken with their looks, offer to hire them. The ladies, carrying further their mad prank, accept the money which is offered them, not knowing that they are legally bound thereby to serve their new masters for a year. Tristan loudly protests, but is hooted off the grounds, and the frightened girls are taken away by the farmers.

THE SPINNING WHEEL QUARTETTE

SCENE—A Farmhouse

As the curtain rises the farmers enter, dragging with them the unwilling and terrified maidens.

When the ladies have recovered their breath and begin to realize that they are in no immediate danger, the temptation to plague their employers is irresistible, and when the young men endeavor to instruct the new servants in their duties the fun commences.

The maidens determine to lead their captors a strenuous life, and when they are ordered to get supper they promptly refuse.

Astonished at such revolutionary conduct from servants, the young men exclaim:

LIONEL AND PLUNKETT: Surpris'd I am and astounded, And I can say no more; Such impudence unbounded Was never seen before!

HARRIET AND NANCY: Surpris'd they are and confounded, And sorely puzzled is their brain; This blow has smartly sounded, May be they'll never try again!

CTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-FLOTOW'S MARTHA

The girls are then requested to show their skill at the spinning wheels. When they sees ignorance of the art the young men offer to teach them:

IONEL AND PLUNKETT (spinning):
When the foot the wheel turns lightly
Let the hand the thread entwine;
Draw and twist it, neatly, tightly,
Then 'twill be both strong and fine.

HARRIET AND NANCY (sitting at the wheels):
What a charming occupation
Thus to make the thread entwine;
Gently guided, drawn and twisted,
It becomes both strong and fine!

Nancy leads Plunkett a merry chase, causing him to lose his temper, while Lionel finds nself falling in love with the beautiful Martha. She laughs at him, but is nevertheless pressed with his good looks and manly bearing; so much so that when he asks her sing she consents, and taking the rose from her bosom she sings the exquisite "Last see of Summer."

BRICH AS MARTHA-ACT I

As is generally known, this air is not by Flotow, but is an old Irish tune, to which Moore fitted his poem. In fact, Martha undoubtedly owes much of its vogue to this ancient Irish air. The melody is a very old one called "The Groves of Blarney." Moore wrote the words about 1813, and they have become the most popular of all his verses.

'Tis the last rose of summer, Left blooming alone; All her lovely companions Are faded and gone; No flower of her kindred, No rosebud is nigh To reflect back her blushes, Or give sigh for sigh!

I'll not leave thee, thou lov'd one,
To pine on the stem;
Since the lovely are sleeping,
Go sleep thou with them.
Thus kindly I scatter
Thy leaves o'er the bed—
Where thy mates of the garden
Lie scentless and dead!

The farmers, somewhat subdued by the knowledge that they have engaged two most spirited and insubordinate damsels, now bid their new-found servants good night in this beautiful number, one of the gems of Flotow's opera.

IONEL (to Martha):

To a future rich and blest!

MARTHA AND NANCY:

We have lived to see before;
Were I but away, I'd never
Play the peasant any more!
ALL:
Good-night!
(Harriet and Nancy retire to their chamber, and Plunkett and Lionel leave by the large door, locking it after them.)

The maidens now peep out from their room and seeing no one, come out, and are exedly discussing their chances of escape, when Tristan's voice is heard outside softly calling them. Overjoyed, they make their escape through the window, and return to their me in the carriage provided by Tristan.

ACT III

SCENE-A Hunting Park in Richmond Forest

Act III represents the Forest of Richmond, where the Queen is hunting with her attendants. The young farmers, who have sought vainly for their late servants, have come hither to witness the hunting and forget the two maidens who have wrought such havoc with their affections.

The act opens with the spirited apostrophe to porter beer, sung by Plunkett.

This most famous of old English beverages is highly praised by the jovial Plunkett, who gives it credit for much of Britain's vigorous life.

PLUNKETT:
I want to ask you, can you not tell me,
What to our land the British strand
Gives life and power? say!
It is old porter, brown and stout,
We may of it be justly proud,
It guides John Bull, where'er he be,
Through fogs and mists, through land and sea!

you not tell me,
itish strand

ay!
Ind stout,
proud,
ere'er he be,
through land and sea!
Yes, hurrah! the hops, and hurrah!
They are life's flavor and life's salt.
And that explaineth where'er it reigneth
Is joy and mirth! At ev'ry hearth
Resounds a joyous song!
Look at its goodly color here!
Where else can find you such good beer?
The pown and stout and healthy, too!
The porter's health I drink to you!

They are life's flavor and life's salt.
Hurrah! Tra, la, la, la, la, la, la, la!

Three records of this number are offered—the first by Plançon, whose Plunkett was a familiar figure to opera-goers a few years ago; while Journet has also made a great success in the part, which suits his robust voice and style admirably. His singing of this "Porter Song" is a fine performance—spirited and magnetic. A lower-priced rendition, and a most excellent one, is furnished by Carlos Francisco.

The farmers disperse, leaving Lionel alone, and he sings his famous "M'appari," the melodious air of the broken-hearted lover, in which he tells of his hopeless passion for the fair Lady Harriet, whom he knows only as Martha.

M'appari (Like a Dream)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor By Evan Williams, Tenor (In Italian) 88001 12-inch, $3.00 (In English) 74128 12-inch, 1.50

Caruso sings this lovely air with a glorious outpouring of voice, giving it all the pathos and tenderness which it requires; while Mr. Williams' rendition (in English) is also a very fine one.

LIONEL:

Like a dream bright and fair,
Chasing ev'ry thought of care,
Those sweet hours pass'd with thee
Made the world all joy for me.
But, alas! thou art gone,
And that dream of bliss is o'er.
Ah! I hear now the tone
Of thy gentle voice no more;

Oh! return happy hours fraught with hope so bright;
Come again, sunny days,
Sunny days of pure delight.
Fleeting vision cloth'd in brightness,
Wherefore thus, so soon depart;
O'er my pathway shed thy lightness
Once again, and cheer my heart.

Lionel suddenly encounters Lady Harriet, and although amazed at seeing her in the dress of a lady, warmly pleads his love.

Lionel:
Yes, 'tis thee!
Once more I do behold thee!
Praised be God; it is no dream!
HARRIET (aside):
My heart!
Lionel:
Lookest down so proudly;
Yet my heart knew thee at once.
HARRIET (with dignity):
Knew me? You're mistaken!
Lionel:
I've hoarded thy fair image
Deep in my breast—No—

This dress does not deceive me—
"Tis thee, thee! Be Heaven blest!

IIARRET:
Madman, you dream!
LIONEL:
Ah! If but a dream,
This, a creation, of my brain,
Then, oh Martha, let me enjoy
This delusion while it lasts!
(He attempts to seize her hand.)

HARRIET:
Hold! presumptuous man!
No further! thou hast ray'd too long uncheck'd!

Lady Harriet is forced to call the hunters, to whom she declares that Lionel must be mad. He is distracted, while Plunkett endeavors to console him. The great finale, a part of which closes the Opera Medley (see below), then occurs. It is a magnificent piece of concerted music.

ACT IV

SCENE 1-Plunkett's Farm House

Plunkett is discovered alone, musing on the unhappy plight of his foster brother, who, since his rejection by Harriet, is inconsolable. He sings his great air, which is often omitted in American presentations of the opera.

Il mio Lionel (My Unhappy Lionel)

By Mattia Battistini, Baritone

(In Italian) 92005 12-inch, $3.00

It is a fine number, superbly sung by Battistini, whose great success in this rôle at Covent Garden is well remembered.

CARUSO AS LIONEL

Poor Lionel! he sighs, he laments,
He flies from his friend;
He is beside himself with love
Accursed be the hour
When first we saw that girl,
When first we brought her beneath our roof!
Soon will my Lionel die,

If no aid come from on high; Fatal the hour, When first his heart felt love's pow'r; Weeping, he wanders in grief, Nought to his pain brings relief; Merciful God, hear my cry, Else must my Lionel die!

Nancy now enters, and she and Plunkett soon come to an understanding. They decide to present Lionel's ring to the Queen, hoping thus to clear up the mystery of his birth.

SCENE II—A Representation of the Richmond Fair

Lionel's ring has been shown to the Queen, who discovers that the young man is really the son of the banished Earl of Derby. However, he refuses to accept his rightful rank and continues to brood over the insult offered him in the forest. As a last resort a complete reproduction of the Fair Scene of Act II is arranged, with booths and the crowd of servants all represented. Harriet, Nancy and Plunkett are dressed in the costumes worn at their first meeting.

Lionel is led in by Plunkett, and when he sees Harriet in the dress of a servant, the cloud seems to pass from his mind and he embraces her tenderly. The two couples pledge their troth and all ends happily.

BALLO IN MASCHERA

BAL MASQUE

MASKED BALL

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by M. Somma, music by Verdi. First produced in Rome at the Teatro Apollo February 17, 1859; at Paris, Théâtre des Italiens, January 13, 1861. First London production June 15, 1861. First New York production February 11, 1861.

REINHART, his secretary	. Baritone
AMELIA, wife of Reinhart	. Soprano
ULRICA, a negress astrologer	. Contralto
OSCAR, a page
SAMUEL SAMUEL	Bass
SAMUEL enemies of the Count	····\Bass

Scene and Period: In and near Boston, end of the Seventeenth Century.

The opera was composed for the San Carlo, Naples, and first called Gustavo III (after an assassinated Italian monarch), but after the announcement had almost created a riot in Naples. Verdi was forced to change the scene from Stockholm to Boston, and the name to Masked Ball. Finally it was thought best to abandon the Naples première altogether, and the opera was taken to Rome.

There are many, of course, who consider this work old-fashioned—and so it is, not pretending at all to be a great music drama; but there are many far more ambitious works with certainly less real music. The familiar Eri tu and Saper vorreste and the fine concerted numbers in Acts II and III are well worth hearing. The Victor has assembled a very fine collection of the best music in the opera, and presents it with the belief that this revival is the best heard in recent years.

Richard, Count of Warwick and Governor of Boston, falls in love with Amelia, the wife of Reinhart, his secretary and intimate friend. This love is returned, but the wife's conscience troubles her, and she consults Ulrica, a black sorceress, hoping to secure a drug that will cause her to forget Richard. Ulrica sends her to gather a certain herb which will prove effective. Richard, who had also gone to consult the astrologer, overhears the conversation, and follows Amelia to the magic spot. Amelia's husband, who has come in search of Richard to warn him of a conspiracy to assassinate him, now appears, and Richard makes his escape, after requesting Reinhart to escort the veiled lady to her home without attempting to learn her identity. On the way, however, they are surrounded by the conspirators and Amelia is revealed. Reinhart swears vengeance on his false friend and joins the plotters.

At the Masked Ball, Richard is stabbed by Reinhart, but the dying man declares the innocence of Amelia and forgives his murderer.

SCENE I—A Hall in the Governor's House

The hall is filled with people—officers, deputies, gentlemen, etc.—waiting for the appearance of the Governor. He calls his courtiers around him, and uggests that for a lark they go disguised to the hut of the sorceress and consult her. The riends agree, and the plotters, headed by Samuel and Tom, see a chance to further their lans.

And enter my abode.
Three times has been heard screeching,

The ominous lapwing.
Three times, too, has been hissing
The venomous red dragon,
And three times have been groaning
The spirits from the graves!

The Governor now arrives, dressed as a sailor, and accompanied by his companions. hey are conversing with the witch when a knock is heard, and all leave the hut by Ulrica's rders except Richard, who conceals himself in a corner.

Amelia enters and asks the sorceress to give her peace of mind by banishing a love which she cannot control. The witch promises speedy relief if Amelia will gather a certain terb from which can be brewed a magic liquor.

Amelia asks for directions, and the witch proceeds:

Then pause and listen.
Go from the city eastward,
To where by gloom engirted
Fall the pale moonbeams on the field,

Accurs'd, abhor'd, deserted, And cull the flowers lowly From those black rocks unholy, Where crimes have dark atonement made With life's departing sigh!

The frightened girl consents to go that very night, and takes her departure. Ulrica now admits the people again, and Richard, in the character of the sailor, asks her to tell his fortune. His inquiry of the prophetess takes the form of a barcarolle—the favorite measure of a sea-song—and the ballad, vigorous and tuneful, has all the swing of a rollicking song of the sea.

This attractive ballad is full of humor, the staccato passages towards the close exhibiting the Governor's impatience to learn the future. In a gay mood he banters the woman, asking her to tell him if he will meet with storms on his next younge.

This famous Barcarolle has been a favorite with many great tenors, but no one has ever sung it as Caruso has given it here.

Ulrica rebukes him, and examining his palm, tells him he is soon to die by the sword of that friend who shall next shake his hand. The conspirators, Samuel and Tom, are uneasy, thinking themselves suspected, but the Governor laughs and asks who will grasp his hand to prove the prophecy false. No one dares to grant his request.

Reinhart, who has become anxious about his chief and has come in search of him, now enters, and seeing the Governor, shakes him by the hand, calling him by name, to the astonishment of all those not in the secret. Sir Richard tells the witch she is a false prophet as this is his most faithful friend.

RICHARD: Amelia! thou lov'st me! AMELIA: I love thee, But thy noble heart will protect me from mine own!

They are interrupted by the appearance of Reinhart, who comes to warn Richard that his enemies are lying in wait to murder him. Richard, unwilling to leave Amelia, is forced to ask Reinhart to escort the veiled lady to the city without seeking to discover her identity. Reinhart swears to obey, and Richard makes his escape. The couple start for Boston, but are surrounded by the conspirators, who take Reinhart to be the Governor. Disappointed in their prey, they tear the veil from the unknown lady and Reinhart is astounded to see that it is his wife. The great finale to Act II now occurs.

I shall fulfill my promise
To take thee to the city!

AMELIA (aside):

ACT III

SCENE 1-A Room in Reinhart's House

Reinhart is denouncing Amelia for her supposed crime, and finally decides to kill her. She begs to be allowed to embrace her child once more, and her husband consenting, she goes out. Left alone, the unhappy man repents his resolution, and resolves to spare the guilty woman's life. In the greatest of the airs allotted to Reinhart he swears to avenge his wrongs.

both parts of Goethe's "Faust," with additional episodes taken from the treatment of the legend by other authorities. The first production at La Scala, Milan, 1868, was a failure. Rewritten and given in 1875 with success. First London production July 6, 1880. First American production at the Academy of Music, November 24, 1880, with Campanini, Cary and Novara. Other productions were in 1896, with Calvé, and in 1901 with McIntyre, Homer and Plançon. Some recent notable revivals: At the Metropolitan, when the opera was brought out for Chaliapine, the cast including Farrar and Martin, and the Boston Opera production of 1910, both noteworthy for their splendid settings.

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA—BOÏTO'S MEFISTOFELE

Arrigo Botto well deserves a conspicuous place among the great modern composers. His Mefistofele ranks with the masterpieces of modern Italy, and contains scenes of great beauty, notably the Garden Scene, with its lovely music, and the Prison Scene, in which the pathos of the demented Margaret's wanderings, the beautiful duet and the frenzy of the finals are pictured by a master hand.

Botto is not only a composer, but a poet of ability and a clever librettist. Notable among his writings are the librettos of Verdi's Otello and Falstaff, which should rather be called dramas set to music, for it is unfair to class them with the old-fashioned Italian librettos.

The story of Botto's opera is directly drawn from Goethe's Faust, but the composer has chosen episodes from the whole of Coethe's story, not confining himself to the tale of Gretchen, but including the episode of Helen of Tray. In his Metislofele Botto has followed the great poet's work more closely than did Gounod's librettist, and the work is a deeper one in many respects.

PROLOGUE

SCENE-The Regions of Space

The prologue to Botto's opera is a most impressive scene, which takes place in the indefinite regions of space. Invisible angels and cherubim, supported by the celestial trumpets, sing in praise of the Ruler of the Universe.

Mefistofele is represented hovering between Hell and Earth, denying the power of God. He addresses the Almighty in his Hail, Good Lord!

This is sometimes called Ballata del fischio, or Whistling Ballad, because of the peculiar whistles Botto has introduced in the number. Journet delivers this splendid number with admirable declamatory power, bringing out the strange symbolism of the climax in a thrilling manner.

Mefistofele offers to be Faust's servant if he will accompany him. "What is the price?" asks the philosopher. "Up here I will obey thee," says Mefistofele, "but below our places will be reversed." Faust says he cares nothing for the future, and if Mefistofele can give him but one hour of happiness, for that one hour he would sell his soul. The bargain is made and they set forth.

This departure from the laboratory of Faust is strikingly pictured in the great painting Kreling, a reproduction of which is given on page 224.

Faust pleads for a meeting alone with the main land the main land to the main land to the main land to the main land to the land to but she dares not consent because her mother sleeps lightly. He gives her a sleep draught, assuring her that it will not harm her mother, but merely cause her to sleep sound The four then sing a fine quartet, and the scene suddenly changes to the Brocken.

THE VISION OF MARGARET

FARRAR AND MARTIN IN ACT II

Arriving at the summit, Mefistofele summons the infernal host-demons, witches, wizards, goblins, imps-and presides over the satanic orgies as King. All pay him homage and dance in wildest joy as he breaks into fragments a glass globe, typifying the earth, crying: 'On its surface vile races dwell, degraded, toilsome, quarreling among themselves. They laugh at me, but I can laugh also!"

Faust now sees a vision of Margaret. on her way to prison for the murder of her mother and her babe. A red stain on her neck horrifies him, but Mefistofele laughs and says, "Turn away your eyes." The act closes in a riotous orgy, the demons whirling and dancing in a mad revelry. This wild scene is graphically pictured in the painting by Kreling.

The return of Mefistofele drives Margaret into a frenzy, and she refuses to leave the prison, finally falling into Faust's arms in her death agony. Her senses returning for a brief period, she forgives him and dies, while a chorus of celestial beings announce that her soul is saved. DIE MEISTERSINGER

THE MASTERSINGERS

(Dee Mu'-ster-singer)

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Both text and music of Die Meistersinger von Nürnberg are by Wagner. The idea of the opera was suggested to the composer in boyhood, as was Tannhäuser, by the reading of one of Hoffmann's novels, and was planned as a kind of burlesque of the Minnesinger contest in Tannhauser. First production in Munich, June 21, 1868.

The first performance in England took place under Richter, at Drury Lane, May 30, 1882; an Italian version was given at Covent Garden, July 13, 1889, and an English production by the Carl Rosa Company at Manchester. April 16, 1896.

In 1888 it was given for the first time at Bayreuth; and the first American production took place in New York, January 4, 1886.

Scene: Nüremberg in the middle of the sixteenth century.

To the opera-going public in general Meistersinger is the most entertaining of all the Wagner operas. Its gaiety and tunefulness are charming, and its story easily understood by an audience, which cannot be said of most of the works by the master.

The humor is essentially German,—an intermingling of playfulness, satire, practical jokes, and underneath all something of seriousness and even sadness, while the romantic element, provided by the lovers, Eva and Walter, is not lacking.

The opera is a satire on the musical methods of the days of the Reformation, the mediæval burgher's life in Nuremberg being pictured with a master hand. The loves of Walter and Eva; the noble philosophy of Sachs, the cobbler-poet; the envy of the ridiculous Beckmesser; and the youthful frolics of David—all are surrounded by some of the most glorious music imaginable.

The first act opens in St. Catherine's Church at Nuremberg, where Eva, daughter of the wealthy goldsmith Pogner, and Walter, a ig knight, meet and fall in love. When Walter learns that Eoa's hand has been promised her father to the winner of the song contest, he resolves to compete, and remains for the examination before the meeting of Mastersingers. Beckmesser, who also wishes to marry Eva, is chosen marker, and under the rigid rules of the order gives Walter so many bad marks that he is rejected in spite of the influence of Hans Sachs in his favor.

OTTO GORITZ

Act II shows a street, with the houses of Hans Sachs and Pogner on opposite sides. The apprentices, who are putting up the shutters, plague David on his affection for Magdalena, Eva's nurse. Sachs drives them away and sends David to bed, then sits down in his door-way and soliloquizes.

'as duftet doch der Flieder (The Scent of Elder Flowers)

He cannot forget the song which Walter delivered before the Mastersingers,—its beauty nts him.

SACHS: The elder's scent is waxing So mild, so full and strong! Its charm my limbs relaxing: Words unto my lips would throng. What boot such thoughts as I can span I'm but a poor, plain-minded man! When work's despised altogether, Thou, my friend, settest me free; But I'd better stick to my leather And let all this poetry be! (He tries again to work. Lea Leaves off and reflects.) And yet—it haunts me still.

I feel, but comprehend ill;

Cannot forget it,—and yet cannot grasp it; measure it not, e'en when I clasp it. It seemed so old, yet new in its chime.— Like songs of birds in sweet May-time:— Spring's command And gentle hand His soul with this did entrust: He sang because he must! His power rose as needed; That virtue well I heeded. The bird who sang to-day Has got a throat that rightly waxes; Masters may feel dismay, But well content with him Hans Sachs is!

DAVID AND HANS SACHS

Eva learns of Walter's rejection, and is so indignant that she promises to elope with him. lovers are interrupted and forced to hide by Beckmesser, who comes beneath Eva's dow for the double purpose of serenading her and rehearsing the song he is to sing for prize on the morrow. Hans Sachs, hearing the tinkling of the lute, peeps out, and just Beckmesser begins to sing Sachs breaks out into a jolly folk song.

Tooral looral!
Tiddy fol de rol!
Oho! Tralala! Oho!

When mother Eve from Paradise Was by the Almighty driven, Her naked feet so small and nice, By stones were sorely riven!

Beckmesser is greatly annoyed and says Sachs must be drunk. After a long altercation with the cobbler, Beckmesser finally starts his song, but as Sachs continues to hammer on his shoe at each mistake or wrong accent, Beckmesser gets badly mixed, and delivers himself of this doggerel:

it. Sachs makes him believe it is his own and offers to give it to him, having conceived a

BECKMESSER:

I see the dawning daylight,
With great pleasure I do;
For now my heart takes a right
Courage both fresh and new.
I do not think of dying,
Rather of trying
A young maiden to win.
Oh, wherefore doth the weather
Then to-day so excel?
I to all say together
'Tis because a damsel
By her loved father,
At his wish rather,
To be wed doth go in.
The bold man who
Would come and view,
May see the maiden there so true,
On whom my hopes I firmly glue,
Therefore is the sky so bright blue,
As I said to begin.

The neighbors now begin to put their heads out the windows and inquire who is bawling there so late. Magdalena opens Eva's window and signals to Beckmesser to go away; but David, thinking she is waving her hand at the marker, becomes jealous and attacks Beckmesser. The noise brings everyone into the street, and the curtain falls on something resembling a riot.

Act III opens in Sachs' workshop. Walter, who had spent the night with Sachs, comes in and tells the cobbler of a wonderful melody which had come to him in a dream. They write it down and leave it on the table. Walter goes out and Beckmesser enters, sees the song, and questions Sachs about plan to force the Mastersingers to consent to the appearance of Walter. Beckmesser is overjoyed and runs out to learn the song. Eva enters to get a shoe fitted, and then occurs the great scene in which the famous quintet, one of the finest numbers in the opera, is sung.

Quintette—Selig wie die Sonne (Brightly as the Sun)

By Johanna Gadski, Soprano; Marie Mattfeld. Soprano; Ellison Van Hoose, Tenor; Marcel Journet, Bass; Albert Reiss, Baritone

(In German) 95201 12-inch, $5.00

The young girl, who has just had fully revealed to her the noble character of Hans Sachs, turns to the good showmaker, and with a grateful heart sings—

Eva:
Through thee life's treasure
I control,
Through thee I measure
First my soul.
And were my choice but free,
'Tis you would please my eyes;
My husband you should be,
None else should win the prize!

Sachs then alludes to the fate of King Mark in Tristan, who married Isolde only to find too late that she loved another, and says:

Sachs:
To find the man before too late
I sought, or else that had been my fate!

RENAUD AS BECKMESSER

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-THE MASTERSINGERS

He calls in Magdalena and David, who are dressed for the festival, and tells them he wishes them for witnesses for a christening. All look amazed, and Sachs explains that he wishes to christen Sir Walter's Master Song. Prises David by creating him a journeyman. Eva then commences the Quintette of Baptism with a short solo, beginning:

In the rapture of her new-found love she sings of the Prize Song:

COPY'T DUPONT GADSKI AS EVA

Eva:
In this sweet and holy strain
Lies a secret hidden;
Stilling all the welcome pain
That fills my heart unbidden;
MAGDALENA AND DAVID (bewildered):
Am I awake or dreaming still?
WALTER (tenderly to Eva):
Is it still the morning dream?
Dare I try to rede its theme?
But this strain, tho' whispered here,
Will greet thine ear loud and clear,
'Mid the Master's guild shall rise,
There to win the highest prize!
HANS SACHS (with deep emotion):
To the maid I fain would sing
Of my secret hidden;
But to tell my heart's sweet pain,
Now it is forbidden!

Mme. Gadski's Eva is quite familiar to opera-goers and is one of the most delightful of her impersonations. Mr. Van Hoose's delivery of Sir Walter's music is a most artistic one, while the part of Sachs is splendidly sung by Journet. Miss Mattfeld, who always makes a pretty, coquettish Magdalena, and Herr Reiss, whose clever and amusing David is perhaps the best of his impersonations, sing the music of these characters most effectively.

During the Quintette, the beautiful theme of the Preislied frequently appears.

SCENE 11—A Field on the Shores of the River Pegnitz

The scene suddenly changes to an open meadow on the banks of the Pegnitz, where the contest is to be held. The spectacle is a brilliant one, with gaily decorated boats discharging the various Guilds, with the wives and families of the members. It is in this scene that the famous March of the Guilds is played. A fine rendition of this number has been given by Sousa's Band.

The Mastersingers now arrange their procession and march to take their places on the platform.

When all are assembled, Sachs rises, and in a noble address states the terms of the contest.

SACHS:

A Master, noble, rich and wise, Will prove you this with pleasure: His only child, the highest prize With all his wealth and treasure, He offers as inducement strong To him who in the art of song Before the people here As victor shall appear. Ye Masters who compete to-day, To you before all here I say: Bethink you what a prize this is! Let each if he would win it. Be sure a guileless heart is his; Pure love and music in it. This crown's of worth infinite, And ne'er in recent days or olden, And ne er in recent days or olden, By any hand so highly holden, As by this maiden tender: Good fortune may it lend her! Thus Nuremberg gives honor due To Art and all her Masters too. (Great stir among all present. Sachs goes up to Pogner, who presses his hand, deeply moved.)

Beckmesser, who is in an awful state with his efforts to commit Walter's song to memory, wipes his heated brow and begins. He confuses his old melody with the new one, loses his place, mixes his lines, and is forced by the laughter of the people to stop GORITZ AS BECKMESSER

In a towering rage he accuses Sachs of plotting his defeat, then flings down the song and rushes off. Sachs calmly picks up the scroll and remarks that the song is a very fine one. but that it must be rendered properly. The Mastersingers accuse him of joking, but he declares:

SACHS: I tell you, sirs, the work is fine;

But it is easy to divine
That Beckmesser has sung it wrong.
I swear, though you will like the song
When someone rehearses

The rightful tune and verses.

And he who does will thus make known

That he composed them, clearly; A Master's name, too, he should own Were he but judged sincerely

I am accused and must defend: A witness let me bid attend!

Is there one here who knows I'm right, Let him appear before our sight. (Walter advances amid a general stir.)

THE MASTERS: Ah, Sachs! You're very sly indeed!-But you may for this once proceed.

SACHS: It shows our rules are of excellence rare If now and then exceptions they'll bear.

PEOPLE: A noble witness, proud and bold!

Methinks he should some good unfold.

SACHS: Masters and people all agree

To give my witness liberty.
Sir Walter von Stolzing, sing the song!
You, Masters, see if he goes wrong.

The Mastersingers agree that Walter may attempt the air, and he mounts the platform and sings the noble Prize Song.

WINKLEMANN AS WALTER

Where a fountain
Enslaved me with its sound;
And there beneath a laurel tree,
With starlight glinting under,
In waking vision greeted me
A sweet and solemn wonder;
She dropped on me the fountain's dews,
That woman fair—
Parnassus's glorious Muse.
(With great exaltation):
Thrice happy day,
To which my poet's trance gave place!
That Paradise of which I dreamed,
In radiance before my face
Glorified lay.
To point the path the brooklet streamed:

WALTER (who has ascended to the platform with firm and proud steps):
Morning was gleaming with roseate light,
The air was filled
With scent distilled
Where, beauty-beaming,
Past all dreaming,
A garden did invite.
(The Masters here, absorbed, let fall the scroll they are watching to prove that Walter knows the song; he notices it without seeming to do so, and now proceeds in a freer style.)
Wherein, beneath a wondrous tree
With fruit superbly laden,
In blissful love-dream I could see
The rare and tender maiden,
Whose charms beyond all price,
Entranced my heart—
Eva, in Paradise!
THE PEOPLE (softly to one another):
That is quite different! Who would surmise
That so much in performance lies?
WALTER:
Evening fell and night closed around;
By rugged way
My feet did stray
Towards a mountain.

She stood beside me,
Who shall my bride be,
The fairest sight earth ever gave,
My Muse, to whom I bow,
So angel—sweet and grave.
I woo her boldly now,
Before the world remaining,
By might of music gaining Parnassus and Paradise.
PEOPLE (accompanying the close, very softly):
I feel as in a lovely dream,
Hearing but grasping not the theme!
Give him the prize!
MASTERS:
Yes, glorious singer! Victor, rise!
Your song has won the Master-prize!

Several vocal and instrumental renditions of this lovely song are given. Mr. Williams sings it beautifully in the purest of English, while the instrumental performances by Sousa and Sorlin are most pleasing. Elman gives the arrangement by Wilhelmj of the Preisited, which has often been played in America—in fact, as one critic has said, "it has been sawed and scratched almost to annihilation." But Elman recreates it, and plays it with a marvelous softness and purity of tone which will delight every listener.

Eva, who has listened with rapt attention, now advances to the edge of the platform and places on the head of Walter, who kneels on the steps, a wreath of myrtle and laurel, then leads him to her father, before whom they both kneel. Pogner extends his hands in benediction over them.

Walter and Eva lean against Sachs, one on each side, while Pogner sinks on his knee before him as if in homage. The Mastersingers point to Sachs, with outstretched hands, as to their chief, while the 'prentices clap hands and shout and the people wave hats and kerchiefs in enthusiasm.

ALL: Hail Sachs! Hans Sachs! Hail Nuremberg's darling Sachs!

The overture is full of the grace and delicacy for which Thomas' music is celebrated, and contains the principal themes, notably Filina's dashing "Polonaise." The Pryor record is a fine example of the perfection attained in the playing of this organization. Every detail of the wonderful instrumentation which Thomas has written, and especially the passages for the wood-wind, is clearly brought out. A fine orchestral rendition by the La Scala players, in two parts, is also offered.

SCENE-Courtuard of a German Inn

Mignon, a daughter of noble parents, was stolen when a child by gypsies, and as the act opens is a girl of seventeen, forced to dance in the public streets by the brutal Giarno, chief of the gypsy band.

The first scene shows the courtyard of a German inn, where townspeople and travelers are drinking. After the vigorous opening chorus, sung here by the La Scala forces, Lothario, a wandering minstrel, enters and sings, accompanying himself on his harp.

Six records of this beautiful air, in French, German and Italian, by six famous singers, using in price from $1.00 to $3.00, are listed here for a choice.

This air is one of the happinst inspirations of the composer. It is said that much of its irm comes from Thomas intimate study of Scheffer's painting, "Mignon." At any rate he has es us an idea of the melody, one of the most beautiful in the entire range of opera. The pas-nate longing the orphan ild for her Idhood home effectively exssed in this erb climax:

which Mignon seems to pour forth her whole heart in a id of emotion. The words are most beautiful ones.

Knowest Thou the Land?

Knowest thou yonder land where the orange grows. Where the fruit is of gold, and so fair the rose? Where the breeze gently wafts the song of birds, Where the season round is mild as lover's words? Where so calm and so soft, like Heaven's blessing true, Spring eternally reigns, with the skies ever blue? Alas, why afar am I straying, why ever linger here? Tis with thee I would fly! Tis there! Tis there! my heart's love obeying, 'Twere bliss to live and die! 'Tis there my heart's love obeying, I'd live, I would die!

Wilhelm, full of pity for the helpless girl, offers Giamo um of money to release her, and goes into the inn to nplete the bargain. Lothario comes to Mignon to bid her ewell, saying he must go south, following the swallows.

Then occurs the beautiful "Swallow Duet," one of the ms of the opera.

MIGNON

Ye blithe and gentle swallows, Unfold your nimble wings; Onion your ninoue wings; Quick, hasten to the land Where winter never reigns. Thrice happy bird, thrice happy bird, Who first the wished-for good Right joyously shall reach

The effectiveness of Thomas' exquisite score depends very much on the perfection of its rendering; and this is especially true of the first act music-the Connais-tu, Lothario's song, and this serene and beautiful duet, given so charmingly here.

Very little need be said about Miss Farrar's familiar impersonation of Mignon. It is always delightful, both to eye and ear. Journet sings the must of Lothario with dignity and beauty of voice; while Farrar's every note is exquisite in its loveliness.

Wilhelm is now invited to go to the Castle of Prince Tieffenbach with the troupe of players, headed by the lovely Filing, who has observed the handsome student with an appreciative eye. He hesitates, thinking of Mignon, but she begs to be allowed to accompany him disguised as a servant.

MICNON .

Stranger! thou didst purchase me— Dispose of me, henceforth, e'en as thou wilt.

WILHELM: In this very town, to which Fate hath brought thee, There lives an aged relative of mine,

Who, to her home, will gladly welcome thee. MIGNON:

Must I then part from thee?

WILHELM:

My child, thou can'st not dwell with me; Ill could I the part perform, Of father!

Mignon: Could I not disguise myself,

And as thy servant, travel with thee?

WILHELM (taking her hands):

And what couldst thou do then?

MIGNON:

With love and gratitude,

My heart is filled.
To follow thee, O master mine,

Indeed were happiness to me!

WILHELM:

Would'st thou anew thy liberty renounce, And be a slave once more?

Mignon (sadly):
Well since my prayers thou wilt not hear, (pointing to Lothario, who approaches)
I'll e'en depart with him!

LOTHARIO (rushing to Mignon, and encircling the with his arms):
Come! my footsteps follow;
Through by-paths lone and wild!
(Attempts to draw Mignon with him.)

Wilhelm finally yields a reluctant consent, not knowing what else to do, and the act ends with the departure of the players.

FARRAR AS MIGNON-ACT II

ACT II

SCENE I-A Boudoir in Tieffenbach Castle

Act Il represents a room in the Prince's castle. Filina is seated in front of her toilet able, musing on the handsome Wilhelm, who has made a deep impression on her somewhat volatile affections. Wilhelm enters with Mignon, who meets with a cool reception room the gay actress. Wilhelm makes love to Filina while Mignon watches them with a ad heart, as she has learned to love her new master. When left alone, she tries by he aid of Filina's rouge to make her complexion as beautiful as that of the actress who has dazzled her master, and, noting the effect in the glass, sings a gay song with n odd refrain, called by the composer "Styrienne."

Styrienne, "Je connais" (I Know a Poor Maiden)

By Geraldine Farrar, Soprano

(In French) 88152 12-inch. $3.00

Miss Farrar has given us a charming rendition of this Mignon air, which (next to the he well-known Connais-tu) is the favorite one in the opera.

MIGNON:

Well I know a poor young child,
A sad young child of Bohemia,
On whose pale sunken cheeks joy ne'er rested,
Ah! ah! ah! what a dull story!
I cannot leave the glass,
So much improved I'm seeming,
Am I the same, or dreaming?
Ah! la la.
(Looking in the glass):
Am I still Mignon?
Can it be Mignon that I see?
One fine day, the child in play,
A stratagem boldly trying,
To the master's good pleasure applying,
Ah! ah! ah! what a foolish story!

I fain would turn away,
But so improved am seeming,
Am I the same, or dreaming?
Ah! Ah! la la
Am I still Mignon?
No! no! 'tis I no longer!
But then! 'tis not she either!
Some other secrets she must have her charms to heighten.
(Opens the door of the dressing room):
Is it not there she keeps her gayest dresses?
Yes! alas! were I Filina, would he love me as well?
What idle folly!
(From the Ditson score.
'Tis a demon now tempts me: Copy't1880.)

Miss Farrar sings this quaint and fascinating "Styrienne" with the child-like gaiety and charm which belong to it; and her voice is as pure and true as a flute when she reaches the high D at the end of the air.

Mignon now goes into the closet, and after Wilhelm has returned makes her appearance in one of Filina's dresses. He tells her in a beautiful air that he must leave her.

Addio, Mignon (Farewell, Mignon)

By M. Régis, Tenor By Emilio Perea, Tenor (Piano acc.) (In French) *45023 10-inch, $1.00 (In Italian) *63420 10-inch, .75

Mignon utters a cry of grief and begins to weep, while Wilhelm tenderly says:

WILHELM:
Farewell, Mignon, take heart!
Thy tears restrain!
In the bright years of youth no grief doth linger long.
Weep not, Mignon!
O'er thee just Heaven will watch with fost'ring care.
Oh, may'st thou thy dear native land once more regain!
May fortune on thy fate henceforth benignly smile!
It pains me much to leave thee: my stricken heart
With thy lone destiny will ever sympathize!
Farewell, Mignon, take heart!
Then dry thy tears.

Mignon refuses money which he offers her, and is about to bid him farewell when Filina enters, and seeing Mignon in one of her own dresses, eyes her with sarcastic amusement, which puts Mignon into a jealous rage and she rushes into the cabinet, tears off the borrowed finery and puts on her gypsy garments.

SCENE 11—The Gardens of the Castle

The scene changes to the park of the castle. Mignon, in despair, attempts to throw herself into the lake, but is prevented by Lothario, who consoles her. In a fit of jealousy she wishes that fire would consume the castle in which Filina had won her master's affections.

Lothario is puzzled by this and goes off muttering to himself.

CHORUS:

The actors and guests now issue from the castle proclaiming the beauty and talent of Filina. In the flush of her triumph she sings the brilliant Polonese or polacca (French Polonaise), one of the most difficult and showy of all soprano airs.

The Victor is able to offer three fine renditions of this popular number, headed by the superb Tetrazzini record, one of the most perfect in her list. Mlle. Korsoff, of the Opéra Comique, sings the air in French with much brilliancy, while an Italian record is furnished by that gifted Spanish prima donna, Mme. Huguet.

Io son Titania (Behold Titania!)

CHORUS:
She is truly divine, Filina!
At her feet we lay our hearts and our flowers!
What charms, what beauties are hers!
Ah! what success! Bravo! Honor to Titania!
Filina:
Yes; for to-night I am queen of the fairies!
Observe ye here, my sceptre bright, (Raising the wand which she holds in her hand.)
And hehold my num'rous trophies!
(Pointing to the wreath which has been presented to her.)
I'm fair Titania, glad and gay,
Thro' the world unfetter'd I blithely stray.
With jocund heart and happy mien,
I cheerily dance the hours away,
Like the bird that freely wings its flight.
Fairies dance around me,

Like the bird that freely wings its flight. Fairies dance around me, Elfin sprites on nimble toe around me gaily dance. For I'm fair Titania!

dance.
For I'm fair Titania!
Both night and day. My attendants ever sing,
The achievements of the god of Love!
On the wave's white foam,
'Mid the twilight grey, 'mid hedges, 'mid flowers, I blithely do dance! Behold Titania, glad and gay!

Wilhelm now sees Mignon and is about to speak to her when Filina interposes and asks her to go to the castle on some errand. The young girl, glad to escape meeting Wilhelm, obeys, but has no sooner gone than the castle is discovered to be in flames, the half-witted Lothario having set fire to it after having heard Mignon's jealous wish.

Wilhelm rushes into the burning castle and soon reappears with the unconscious form of Mignon, while the curtain falls on a magnificent tableau.

ACT III

SCENE—Count Lothario's Castle in Italy

This act takes place in the castle of Lothario, to which the old man has instinctively returned with Mignon, followed by Wilhelm, who now realizes that he loves his youthful ward. The young girl is recovering from a dangerous illness, and as Lothario watches outside her sick room, he sings a beautiful lullaby or berceuse, WILHELM: In soothing you poor, hapless maiden At last I have discovered her secret; From her sweet lips my name escaped! Ah! little thought the maid,

In innocence arrayed,
What she in her breast had nurtured. Would ardent love become,

And thus pervert the peaceful current Of her peaceful life. Oh balmy April, Who to the wither'd flowers restoreth their colors,
Kiss her fair cheek,
And a grateful sigh of love cause to escape!

Mignon now comes with feeble step on the balcony, and seeing Wilhelm, is much agitated. He endeavors to soothe her, but she insists that only Lothario loves her. Lothario now enters, and announces that he is the Count Lothario, having been restored to his right mind by the familiar scenes of his ancestral home. He shows them the jewels and prayer book of his lost daughter, and tells them her name was Sperata. Mignon starts at the name and murmurs:

> Ah, that sweet name to my ear is familiar, A memory of my childhood It may be, that's gone forever!

She then begins to read from the book a little prayer, but soon drops the book and continues from memory, her hands clasped and her eyes raised to Heaven. Lothario is much agitated and when she has finished, recognizes her as his lost daughter. Father and daughter are reunited, while a blessing is bestowed on the young people by the happy Lothario.

Scene and Period: The scene is laid in Gaul, shortly after the Roman conquest

Norma, although an opera of the old school and seldom performed nowadays, contains some of the loveliest of the writings of Bellini. Its beauties are of the old-fashioned kind which our forefathers delighted in, and which are an occasional welcome relief from the abundance of "music dramas" with which we are surrounded of late. Especially charming is the spirited overture, always a favorite on band programs.

The briskness and sparkle of this fine overture and its inspiring climax are well preserved in Mr. Pryor's vigorous rendering, and in the splendidly played Victor Band record, made under Mr. Rogers' direction.

The scene is laid among the Druids at the time of the Roman invasion. Norma, the High Priestess, though sworn to bring about the expulsion of Rome, is secretly married to a Roman proconsul, Pollione, by whom she has two children. She rebukes the Druids for wishing to declare war, and after the ceremony of cutting the mistletoe, she invokes peace from the moon in the exquisite prayer, Casta Diva.

Pollione still refuses, and Norma strikes the sacred shield to summon the Druids. She declares war on Rome and denounces Pollione, but offers to save his life if he will leave the country. He refuses, and she is about to put him to death, when love overcomes justice and the Priestess denounces herself to save Pollione. Norma's noble sacrifice causes his love to return and they ascend the funeral pyre together. As the flames mount about them they are declared purified of all sin.

grace, while the story is an interesting and affecting one. Orpheus may be called the grandfather of grand opera, it being the oldest work of its kind to hold its place on the stage, the first representation occurring one hundred and fifty years ago.

The opera has had only one adequate American production previous to the Metropolitan revival, and that was during the American Opera Company season of 1886—the Abbey revival of 1892 meeting with but indifferent success. Such has been the interest aroused by the recent performances, that it is likely to be heard quite frequently in the future.

The story concerns the Greek poet Orpheus, who grieves deeply over the death of his wife Euridice, and finally declares he will enter the realms of Pluto and search for her among the spirits of the departed. The goddess Love appears and promises to aid him, on condition that when he has found Euridice he will return to earth without once looking back.

Orpheus journeys to the Gates of Erebus, and so softens the hearts of the Demon guards by his grief and his exquisite playing of his lyre, that he is permitted to enter. He finds Euridice, and without looking at her, takes her by the hand and

Text by Arrigo Boito after the drama of Shakespeare. Music by Giuseppe Verdi. First production February 5, 1887, at La Scala, Milan. First London production May 18, 1889. First American production April 16, 1888, with Campanini as Otello. Some notable revivals occurred in 1894, with Tamagno and Maurel; in 1902, with Eames, Alvarez and Scotti; and in 1908 at the Manhattan, with Melba, Zenatello and Sammarco.

Characters

Soldiers and Sailors of the Republic; Venetian Ladies and Gentlemen; Cypriot Men, Women and Children; Greek, Dalmatian and Albanian Soldiers; an Innkeeper.

Scene and Period: End of the fifteenth century; a seaport in Cyprus.

VERDI AND MAUREL AT FIRST PERFORMANCE OF OTELLO After having given the world his splendid Aida, Verdi rested on his laurels and was silent for sixteen years; then, at the age of seventy-four, he suddenly astonished the world with his magnificent Otello, a masterly music-drama which alone would suffice to make him famous.

The change from the Verdi of 1853 and Il Trovatore, to the Verdi of 1887 and Otello, is amazing. Each opera produced by him shows a steady advance, until something approximating perfection is reached in Otello, the writing of which was an astonishing feat for a man of nearly eighty years of age.

The text, by that accomplished scholar and master librettist, Boito, follows closely the tragedy of Shakespeare.

ACT I

SCENE—Otello's Castle in Cyprus. A Storm is Raging and the Angry Sea is visible in the Background

Venetians, soldiers, including lago, Roderigo and Cassio, are awaiting the return of Otello. His vessel arrives safely, and amid much rejoicing the Moor announces that the war is over, the enemy's ships having all been sunk. He goes into the castle, and Iago and Roderigo plan the conspiracy against Cassio and Otello, by which Roderigo hopes to secure Desdemong for himself and Iago to be revenged on Otello.

They join the soldiers and try to induce Cassio to drink. He refuses, but when lago toasts Desdemona, he is compelled to join. lago sings the rousing Brindis:

during which he continues to fill Cassio's glass. When the latter is quite drunk they pick a quarrel with him, and he draws his sword, wounding Montano, while lago and Cassio rouse a cry of "riot," which brings Otello from the castle. He disgraces Cassio and orders all to disperse, remaining alone with Desdemona for a long love scene. Part of this scene has been recorded here by Mme. Lotti and M. Conti, of Milan. This is a free adaptation of lago's last speech with Cassio Shakespeare, Act II. In his setting Verdi has expressed lly the character of the perfidious lago: cynical, vain, eak and subtle. He declares that he was fashioned by a sel God who intended him for evil, and that he cares ught for the consequences, as after death there is nothing.

Scotti's singing of this number is a most impressive one; nile the wonderful rendition by Amato will be pronounced e of the most striking in his list.

lago sees Desdemona approach and Cassio greet her, and soon as the young officer is earnestly pleading with her intercede for him, lago runs in search of Otello, and sows e first seeds of jealousy in the heart of the Moor, bidding m watch his wife well. Otello, much troubled, seeks sdemona and questions her. She begins to intercede for issio, but the Moor repulses her, and when she would wipe a perspiring brow, roughly throws down the handkerief, which is picked up by lago.

Left alone with lago, Otello gives way to despair, and presses his feelings in the bitter Ora e per sempre.

lago further says that he has seen Desdemona's handkerchief in Cassio's room, at which news Otello is beside himself with rage. The act closes with the great scene in which lago offers to help Otello secure his revenge, and they swear an awful oath never to pause until the guilty shall be punished.

ACT III
SCENE—The Great Hall of the Castle

Otello now seeks Desdemona and contrives an excuse to borrow her handkerchief. She offers it, but he says it is not the one, and asks for the one he had given her, with a peculiar pattern. "Had Heaven seen fit to send me sorrow, shame, poverty," he says, "I could have endured it with patience, but this blow is too much to bear."

lago now tells Otello how he had slept in Cassio's room lately and had heard Cassio talking in his sleep, bemoaning the fate which had robbed him of Desdemona and given her to the Moor. This dream is related in a highly dramatic air:

Cassio enters, and Iago, bidding Otello watch behind a pillar, goes to the young officer, and with fiendish ingenuity induces him to talk of his sweetheart Bianca. Otello, listening, thinks that it is of Desdemona that Cassio speaks. Cassio produces the fatal handkerchief, telling Iago he had found it in his room, and wondering to whom it can belong. Otello, seeing the handkerchief and not hearing the conversation, has no further doubt of Desdemona's guilt, and when Cassio departs he asks Iago how best can he murder them both. The villar suggests that Desdemona be strangled in her bed, and says he will himself kill Cassio. In a highly dramatic duet, given here by Barrera and Badini, they swear a solemn oath of vengeance.

As she is being led away by her maids he falls in a fit. The people, considering the summons to Venice an additional honor for the Moor, rush in, shouting "Hail to Otello," when lago, pointing with fiendish triumph to the prostrate body, cries, "Behold your Lion of Venice!"

Drama in Two Acts. Words and Music by R. Leoncavallo

The English version quoted from is by Henry Grafton Chapman

Quotations from text and music (except the Prologue) by kind permission of G. Schirmer. (Copy't 1906)

LEONCAVALLO

Ruggiero Leoncavallo was born at Naples, March 8, 1858, and was the son of a magistrate, the Chevalier Vincont, president of the tribunal of Potenza. His mother was a daughter of the celebrated artist. Raffaele d'Auria, famous for his decorations in the royal palace at Nanles He took up the pianoforte at an early age with Simonetti, a well-known teacher of Naples. and entered the Neapolitan Conservatoire, where he studied under Cesi, Ruta and Rossi. At sixteen he made a concert tour as a pianist with some success. Leaving the Conservatoire at eighteen he promptly showed his leaning toward operation composition by beginning to write an opera the libretto based on de Vigny's well-known drama. Chatterton. Finding an impressario, the production of this opera was promised, but at the last moment he was deserted by his manager and the young composer was reduced to poverty. He did not despair, however, and abandoning for a time his operatic pretensions, set to work at anything which would give him a living. He gave lessons and played accompaniments at cafe concerts, finally becoming a concert pianist, the latter occupation taking him to many countries—England, France. Holland, Germany and Egypt, Returning to Italy after several years of these wanderings, he proved that he had not been idle by submitting to the house of Ricordi the first part of a tremendous trilogy based on the subject of the Renaissance in Italy.

This monumental work he entitled Crepusculum (Twilight), and the three parts were called: I—Medici; II—Girolamo Savonarola, III—Cezare Borgia. This Ricordi accepted, agreeing to produce the first part, and Leoncavallo spent a year in its completion. Three years passed by and the production was not made. In despair he went to the rival firm of Sonzogno, which encouraged him to write the opera which was to make him famous. The young composer went to work and in the space of five months completed his opera, basing the plot on an actual occurrence in the court where his father was presiding as judge.

The production of Pagliacci was made on May 21, 1892, at the Teatro dal Verme, Milan. Its success was overwhelming, and the name of Leoncavallo was heard throughout the world. His fame led to the production, in 1893, of the first section of the great trilogy, Medici; but it was not well received. Other operas by Leoncavallo which have been produced with more or less success are: Chatterton (produced 1896); Bohême (1897); Zaza (1900); and finally Roland, written at the request of the German Emperor (1904). He has written also a symphonic poem, Serafita; a ballet (La Vita d'una Marionetta) and several comic operas.

But it is Pagliacci which will keep the name of Leoncavallo remembered. Its master-fully constructed libretto; its compelling and moving story; the orchestration, written with extraordinary skill; and finally, its moving and intensely dramatic plot, which always holds an audience in rapt attention.

It is indeed a matter for congratulation that the Victor is able to offer such a fine production of this master work.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Victor Company takes pleasure in announcing Leoncavallo's famous two-act musical drama, recorded especially for the Victor under the personal direction of the composer. The records in the series were made in the presence of Signor Leoncavallo, and the music conducted by him, a feature which should make this collection ever valuable and unique. Any question arising in future concerning the composer's intentions in regard to the opera may be decided by reference to this performance as he himself conducted it. This advantage would have been priceless with regard to many well-known operas of the past, as it would have settled many controversies. But now, by means of the Victor, the composer's ideas may be imperishably seconded.

The artists selected by Signor Leoncavallo to interpret his great work are well known and most competent ones. Mme. Huguet, one of Italy's most beloved prima donne, has a voice of ample range and power, and sings the music of Nedda most beautifully. Cigada's Tonio is a remarkable performance, the richness and beauty of his voice being especially noticeable in the Prologue and the duet with Nedda. As Canio a choice of tenors is offered, the more delicate voice of Barbaini being contrasted with the splendid fire and intensity of Paoli's singing. Badini as Silvio is fully adequate, while the smaller parts are well filled. Nothing need be said about the orchestra and chorus of La Scala, as their reputation is world wide.

Leoncavallo's beautiful opera is admirably suited for reproduction on the Victor, and while listening to the singing of the artists who have rendered these dramatic scenes, no great imagination is required to picture the various situations.

In addition to the La Scala series, which was made under the composer's direction, many other Pagliacci records are listed in their proper places.

THE ARGUMENT

During the orchestral introduction Tonio, in his clown costume, suddenly appears in front of the curtain and begs permission to revive the ancient Greek prologue. He then comes forward as Prologue and explains that the subject of the play is taken from real life; reminds the audience that actors are but men, with passions like their own, and that the author has endeavored to express the real feelings and sentiments of the characters he will introduce. He then orders up the curtain.

The first act shows the entrance to an Italian village. Canio and his troupe of strolling players, or pagliacci, having paraded through the village, return to their traveling theatre, followed by a noisy crowd of villagers. Canio announces a performance for that evening at seven, then goes with Peppe into the tavern. Tonio, the clown, remains behind ostensibly to care for the donkey, but takes advantage of his master's absence to make love to Nedda, Canio's wife. She repulses him scornfully, striking him with her whip, and he swears to be revenged. Silvio, a rich young villager, in love with Nedda, now joins her and begs her to fly with him. She refuses, but admits that she loves him, her confession being overheard by Tonio, who hurries in search of his master. Canio returns too late to see Silvio, but hears Nedda's parting words, "Forever I am thine!" Mad with jealousy, he demands the lover's name, and when Nedda refuses, tries to kill her, but is restrained by the others. Nedda goes to dress and Canio is in despair at the thought of being obliged to play while his heart is breaking.

Act II: The curtain rises on the same scene and the play is about to begin. This proves to be the usual farce in which the Clown makes love to Columbine during the absence of her husband, Punchinello, but is laughed at and resigns his pretensions, finally consenting to act as a lookout while Columbine and her accepted lover, Harlequin, dine together.

Strangely enough, this conventional farce is very like the situation in the real lives of the players, and when Punchinello (Canio) arrives and surprises the lovers, as the play demands, he loses his head when he hears Columbine repeat in the farce the very words he overheard her say to her real lover earlier in the day. Mad with rage, he again demands her lover's name. Nedda tries to save the situation by continuing the play, while the audience is delighted by such realistic acting until the intensity of Canio's passion begins to terrify them. The other players endeavor to silence him, but in vain. Finally, stung by his taunts, Nedda defies him and is stabbed, Canio hoping that in her death agony she will reveal the name of her lover. She falls, calling upon Silvio, who rushes from the crowd only to receive in turn the dagger of the outraged husband. As Canio is disarmed by the peasants he cries as if in a dream, "La commedia e finita"—(The comedy is ended).

The scene is laid in Calabria, near Montalto, on the Feast of the Assumption. Period, between 1865 and 1870.

THE PROLOGUE

Leoncavallo chose a novel way to introduce his characters, and wrote this number in the nidst of the orchestral prelude, when Tonio comes forward, like the prologue of ancient reck tragedy, and explains that the subject of the play is taken from real life, and that the omposer has devoted himself to expressing the sentiment, good or bad, but always human. of the characters he introduces.

The first part of the Prologue is in itself a miniature overture, containing the three repreentative themes associated with the main events of the drama to be unfolded.

The first is the motive which always accompanies the appearance of the players or pagliacci: The second theme represents Canio's jealousy and is a sombre strain suggestive of revenge:

The third represents the guilty love of Nedda and Silvio: and appears frequently throughout the opera, not only in the love duet, but in the last act. when Nedda efuses to betray her lover even with death awaiting her.

The presentation of these themes is followed by the appearance of Tonio, the clown. who peeps through the curtain and says:

Ladies and gentlemen! Pardon me if alone I appear. I am the Prologue!

He then comes in front of the curtain and explains the author's purpose, which is to present a drama from real life, showing that the actors have genuine tragedies as well as mimic ones.

Our author loves the custom of a prologue to his story, And as he would revive for you the ancient glory, He sends me to speak before ye! But not to prate, as once of old, That the tears of the actor are false, unreal,

That his sighs and the pain that is told, He has no heart to feel! No! our author to-night a chapter will borrow From life with its laughter and sorrow! Is not the actor a man with a heart like you? So 'tis for men that our author has written, And the story he tells you is true!

He then goes on to speak of the author's inspiration, and says:

A song of tender mem'ries Deep in his list'ning heart one day was ringing; And then with a trembling hand he wrote it, And he marked the time with sighs and tears. Come, then; Here on the stage you shall behold us in human fashion, And see the sad fruits of love and passion. Hearts that weep and languish, cries of rage and anguish, And bitter laughter!

^{*} Double-Faced Record—For title of opposite side see DOUBLE-FACED PAGLIACCI RECORDS, page 265.

The beautiful andante which follows is the most admired portion of the aria, and is indeed a noble strain.

> Ah, think then, sweet people, when ye look on us, Clad in our motley and tinsel, For ours are human hearts, beating with passion, We are but men like you, for gladness or sorrow, 'Tis the same broad Heaven above us, The same wide, lonely world before us! Will ye hear, then, the story,
> As it unfolds itself surely and certain!
> Come, then! Ring up the curtain!

The curtain now rises, as the pagliacci motive reappears in the orchestra.

Opening Chorus—"Son qua!" (They're Here!)

By La Scala Chorus (Double-faced—See page 265) (In Italian) 16814 10-inch, $0.75

The first scene, representing the edge of a small village

SAMMARCO AS TONIO

in Calabria, is now revealed to the audience. The people are engaged in celebrating the Feast of the Assumption. and among the attractions offered to the crowds who have flocked to the village is the troupe of strolling players headed by Canio. These wandering mountebanks are common in the rural districts of Italy and are known as pagliacci. They take with them a small tent (usually carried in a cart drawn by a donkey), which they set up in the market places of the small villages, or anywhere that they

of a modest living.

announce their arrival, as is the custom. As the curtain rises, the sound of a drum and trumpet is heard from a distance, and the villagers are full of joy at the prospect of a comedy performance. They express their excitement in a vigorous opening chorus. This is a clever bit of writing, but so difficult that it is seldom well given. The famous chorus of La Scala, however, under the leadership of Maestro Sabaino, have given this stirring Ev - vi - valilprin - ci - pe se' dei pa-glas - s! Long life to him, the prince . . of all pa-glise - sim number in splendid style. This oft-recurring phrase: which is presented with many odd modulations, produces a peculiar and novel effect.

Boys: Hi! They're here! They're coming back! Pagliaccio's there The grown-up folks and boys All follow after! Their jokes and laughter They all applaud.

WOMEN: See, there's the wagon! My, what a fiendish din! The Lord have mercy on us! ALL: Welcome Pagliaccio; Long life to him, The prince of all pagliaccios. You drive our cares away With fun and laughter!

The little troupe has now come into view and the noise is redoubled. Canio appears the head of his company, his wife, Nedda, riding in the cart drawn by a donkey, while Tonio and Peppe make hideous noises on the bass drum and cracked trumpet, which constitute the orchestra of the players. Canio is dressed in the traditional garb of the clown his face smeared with flour and his cheeks adorned with patches of red. He tries address the crowd, but the noise is tremendous. Tonio beats the drum furiously to silence the voices, but it is not until Canto has raised his hand to command attention that he is allowed to speak.

Un grande spettacolo! (A Wond'rous Performance!)

By Antonio Paoli, Tenor; Francesco Cigada, Baritone; Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor; and Sig. Rosci, Baritone

(In Italian) 92009 12-inch, $3.00

He begins to address the peasants in this fashion:

CANIO:

A wondrous performance
I say will be given,
By your humble servants
This evening at seven.
The wrath of Pagliaccio
Will there be presented—
What vengeance he took,
And the trap he invented!
You'll witness the carcass of Tonio tremble,
And see him dissemble and pile up the plot!
So honor us by coming this even;
Come all, then, at seven!

The crowd boisterously express their joy at the prospect of an evening's entertainment. Canio now turns to assist Nedda to alight from the cart, but finds Tonio, the Fool, there before him. Giving him a cuff on the ear, he bids him be off, and Tonio slinks away muttering. The boys in the crowd jeer him, saying:

ARRIVAL OF THE PLAYERS

Does that suit you, Mr. Lover?

Tonio threatens the boys, who run away. He goes grumbling into the theatre, saying, aside:

He'll pay for this ere it's over!

One of the peasants invites the players to the wine shop for a friendly glass. They accept, and Canio calls to Tonio to join them, but he replies from within: "I'm rubbing down the donkey," which causes a villager to remark, jestingly:

A PEASANT: Careful, Pagliaccio!
He only stays behind there
For making love to Nedda!

Canio smiles, but knits his brow and is evidently impressed by the thought.

Canio: Eh! What? You think so?

(He becomes serious, and signing to the peasants to come round him, he begins to address them.)

HARLEQUIN

Un tal gioco (Such a Game!)

By Antonio Paoli and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) 92010 12-inch, $3.00 By Nicola Zerola, Tenor (In Italian) 64206 10-inch, 1.00

The first trace of Canio's jealous nature is now shown, as he takes with apparent riousness the idle joke of the peasant, and begins to warn the spectators as follows:

CANIO: Such a game, I'd have you know,
'Twere better not to play, my neighbors!
To Tonio, aye, to you all I say it!

For the stage there and life, they are different altogether!

If up there, (pointing to the theatre) Pagliaccio his lady should discover With some fine fellow in her room,

He'd give the two a rating . . . or resign himself, And take a jolly beating!

(With a sudden change of tone)

But if Nedda I really should surprise so, What came after were a far different story!

Nedda, who is listening, is surprised and says aside: "What does he mean?" The villagers, rather puzzled at his earnestness, ask him if he is serious. With an effort he rouses himself from his gloomy mood and says lightly:

Not I-I love my wife most dearly!

FARRAR AS NEDDA

(He approaches Nedda and kisses her on the forehead.)
The sound of bagpipes (oboe) is heard in the distance, telling of the merrymaking in the village, and the church bells begin to toll the call to vespers. The people commence to disperse, and Canio again repeats his melodious strain of invitation:

(He goes with several peasants into the inn.)

This is the famous Bell Chorus, or "Ding Dong" Chorus, one of the most remarkable numbers in the opera. It is sung with spirit, and the chiming bells are introduced in a most effective manner. The people go off singing and the measures die away in the distance.

By Alma Gluck, Soprano By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano

Nedda, left alone, is troubled by her remembrance of Canio's manner and wonders if he suspects her. She speaks of the fierce look he had given her, and says:

I dropt my eyes, fearful lest he should have read there What I was secretly thinking.

But shaking off her depression, she becomes once more alive to the brightness of the day, which fills her with a strange delight. A gay tremolo in the strings announces the theme of the birds, and Nedda speaks of her mother, whom she said could understand their language. Neppa: Ah. ve birds without number!

NEDDA: Ah, ye birds without number!
What countless voices!
What ask ye? Who knows?
My mother, she that was skillful at telling one's fortune,
Understood what they're singing,
And in my childhood, thus would she sing me.

Then follows the brilliant Balatella or Bird Song, beginning:

It is a most beautiful number with an exquisite accompaniment, mainly of strings. Mme. Gluck gives it here in delightful fashion, singing with dazzling brilliancy, while a very fine rendition by Mme. Huguet is offered as part of a double-faced record.

So ben che deforme (I Know That You Hate Me)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano, and Francesco Cigada, Baritone

(In Italian) *35173 12-inch, $1.25

At the close of her song Nedda finds that the hideous Tonio has been listening, and now seeing the handsome Columbine alone, begins to make love to her; but she scornfully orders him away. He persists, but his protestations are greeted with mocking laughter, and Nedda says insolently:

Nepda:
There's time, if you like,
Once more to tell me this evening
When you will be acting the fool!

Just now, it is painful.

In a furious rage, Tonio swears she must listen to him and cries:

TONIO:
You mock me? Wretched creature!
By the cross of the Savior
You shall pay for this, and dearly!

NEDDA:
A threat, eh? Come, or I'll be calling Canio!
TONIO:
But not until I've kissed you!
(Rushing toward her.)

SILVIO

Nulla scordai! (Naught I Forget!)

By Giuseppina Huguet, Francesco Cigada, and Ernesto Badini
(Doubled with above duet) (In Italian) *35173 12-inch, $1.25

Tonio, driven almost to madness by Nedda's scorn and ridicule, seizes and tries to kiss her. She strikes him across the face with her whip, crying:

Oh, you would, you cur!

Tonio (screaming): By the Blessed Virgin of Assumption, Nedda. I swear it.

You shall pay me for it! (Rushes off.)

NEDDA (watching him): Scorpion! at last you've shown your nature!

Tonio, the clown, The heart of you is just as crooked as your body!

The young villager, Silvio, whom Nedda has secretly met on previous visits to the town, now jumps over the wall. Nedda, alarmed, cries:

NEDDA: Silvio! In the daytime? What folly!
Silvio (smiling): I fancy it's no great risk I'm taking!
Canio I spied from afar with Peppe yonder.
Ay! at the tavern I saw them!

She tells him of Tonio's behavior and bids him beware, as the clown is to be feared. Her lover cheers her and laughs at her fears, and they sing the beautiful love duet, in which Siloio urges her to fly with him; but she is afraid and begs him not to tempt her. He persists, and reproaches her for her coldness, until finally in a passion of abandonment she yields, singing the beautiful passage which begins the record:

Then together they sing the lovely duet:

BOTH: All, all forgot!
NEDDA: Look into my eyes, love,
All is forgotten!
Then kiss me. dear!

SILVIO: Thou'lt come?
NEDDA (passionately):
Aye! kiss me once more!
Both: I love thee!

The lovers, who have cast aside all prudence and see only each other, fail to observe Canio, who has been warned by Tonio and has hurried from the tavern.

TONIO (holding Canio back): Now just step softly,
And you will catch them now!

SILVIO (disappearing over the wall):

To-night at midnight, NEDDA: 'Till to-night then,
And forever I'll be thine!

(She sees Canio and gives a cru of fear.) Ah!

Aitalo Signor! (May Heaven Protect Him!)

By Antonio Paoli Tenor: Giuseppina Huguet. Soprano: Francesco Cigada, Baritone: Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor (In Italian) 92011 12-inch. $3.00

Canio, who has not seen Silvio, but has heard Nedda's parting words, now rushes toward the wall. Nedda bars his way. The record begins with the melodramic music written by Leoncavallo for this exciting struggle, during which Canio pushes her aside and runs in pursuit of Silvio.

SILVIO AND NEDDA

NEDDA (listening anxiously): May Heaven protect him now!

Canto (from behind): Scoundrel! Where hidest thou?

Tonto (laughing cynically): Ha! Ha! Ha!

NEDDA (turning to Tonio with loathing): Bravo! Well done, Tonio!

Tonio (with fiendish satisfaction): All that I could do!

But I hope in the future to do better!

Canio re-enters, out of breath and completely exhausted. As he turns to Nedda with suppressed rage we hear again in the accompaniment that dismal theme of revenge:

Large anni (J = 44)

which throughout the opera always accompanies the scenes of Canio's jealousy and passion

CARUSO SINGING "VESTI LA GIUBBA"

CANIO: No one! That shows how well he knows that path. But no matter! Because right now you'll tell me his name!
NEDDA (indifferently): Me?

CANIO (in frenzy):
You! By God in Heaven!
And if up to this moment I have not cut your throat,

'Tis because I'd have you name him! Speak now!

Nedda proudly refuses. Filled with joy because of Silvio's escape, she cares not what may be her own fate. Canio, beside himself, rushes on her with the knife, but Peppe holds him back and takes away his weapon. Tonio comes to Peppe's assistance, saving:

> Restrain yourself, good master, 'Tis best to sham awhile. The fellow will come back, You take my word for it!

They finally persuade him to restrain himself, and beg him to make ready for the play, as the audience is already assembling. Nedda goes into the theatre and Canio remains alone, his head bowed with shame and baffled revenge in his soul.

Vesti la giubba (On With the Play)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor By Carlo Albani, Tenor By Nicola Zerola, Tenor

We now come to the most famous of the numbers in Leoncavallo's opera, the great Lament of Pagliaccio. Its heartbreaking pathos never fails to touch the listener, when sung by such artists as the Victor offers.

The unhappy Canio, left alone after the exciting scene with Nedda, wrings his hands and cries:

Canio:
To play! When my head's whirling with madness,
Not knowing what I'm saying or what I'm doing!

Yet I must force myself! I am not a man, I'm but a Pagliaccio!

The great aria now follows, in which the unfortunate Pagliaccio describes how he must paint his face and make merry for the public while his heart is torn with jealousy.

(Sobbing):

Laugh for the pain that is gnawing your heart!

(He moves slowly toward the theatre, weeping; he stops at the entrance and hesitates. Seized by a new fit of sobbing, he buries his face in his hands; then as the curtain slowly falls, rushes into the tent.)

Caruso's Canio is still the great feature of Pagliacci, and his magnificent singing of this famous lament cannot be described—it must be heard. In all that this artist has done there is no piece of dramatic singing to equal in emotional force his delivery of the reproaches of the clown, which he pours out not only on his faithless wife, but on himself and the occupation that bids him be merry when his heart is breaking. Sometimes Caruso's voice merely delights the ear—here he searches the heart; and is not merely the greatest of tenors, but is the clown himself, full of the most tragic emotion.

ACT II

SCENE-Same as Act I

By Giuseppina Huguet and Gaetano Pini-Corsi,

Passing over the preparations for the play and the quarreling chorus of the peasants as they fight for the best seats, which is not interesting without the action, we come to the commencement of the comedy. The curtain is drawn aside, disclosing a small room with two side doors and a window at the back. Nedda as Columbine is action of the comedy now begins.

ooks out of the window, saving:

CANIO

Columbine rises and looks out of the window, saying:
Pagliaccio, my husband, till late this evening
Will not be at home.

The sound of a guitar, cleverly imitated by the violins, pizzicato, causes Columbine to utter a cry of joy, and the voice of Harlequin is heard outside in the Serenade, be-

By Giuseppina Huguet, Soprano: Francesco Cigada, Baritone: and Gaetano Pini-Corsi, Tenor (In Italian) *35174 12-inch, $1.25

Tonio as Taddeo, with his basket, now peeps through the door and says exaggeratedly, with a comical cadenza:

Deficiency in the part of the bask are the basket upwards)

(In thing the bask are the basket upwards)

(In thing the bask are the basket upwards)

(In thing the bask are the basket upwards)

The audience laughs in delight as Tonio tries to express his love by a long exaggerated sigh. Columbine tries to suppress him by inquiring about the chicken he had been sent for, but Tonio kneels, and holding up the fowl says:

See, we are both before thee kneeling!

His pretensions are cut short by Harlequin, who enters and leads him out by the ear. As he goes he gives the lovers a mock benediction, singing:

Then I my claim surrender. Bless you, my children!

This scene is most cleverly done and the three records depicting the little farce are among the most enjoyable of the series.

The lovers now partake of their feast and make merry together. Harlequin takes from his pocket a little vial, which he gives to Columbine, saying:

HARLEQUIN:
Take this little sleeping draught,
'Tis for Pagliaccio!
Give it him at bedtime,
And then away we'll fly.

Columbine (eagerly):
Yes, give me!
Yes, give me!

Upon the scene suddenly bursts Tonio, in mock alarm crying:

Tonio (bawling loudly):

Be careful! Pagliaccio is here!

Trembling all over, he seeks for weapons!

He has caught you, and I shall fly to cover!

The lovers simulate the greatest alarm, at which the excited audience is highly pleased, and applaud lustily. Harlequin leaps from the window, and Nedda continues the scene by repeating Columbine's next lines, which by a strange chance are the very words she Canio, dressed as Punchinello, now enters from the door on the right.

CANIO (with suppressed rage):
Hell and damnation!
And the very same words, too!
(Recovering himself):
But, courage!
(Taking up his part):
You had a man with you!
COLUMBINE (lightly):
What nonsense! You are tipsy!

PAGLIACCIO (restraining himself with difficulty):
Ah, if thou wast alone here
Why these places for two?
COLUMBINE:
Taddeo was supping with me.
He's there—you scared him into hiding!
TADDEO (from within):
Believe her, sir! She is faithful!
(Sneering):
Ah, they could never lie, those lips so truthful!

The audience laughs loudly, which enrages the unhappy man, and forgetting his part e turns to Nedda and fiercely demands the name of her lover:

CANIO: Woman, 'tis thy lover's name I want,
The wretched scoundrel from whose arms thou comest!
Oh, shameless woman!

Throwing off entirely the mask f the player, Canio becomes again ne jealous husband, and sings this reat aria, which is second only to ne Vesti la giubba in dramatic power.

CANIO:

No, Pagliaccio, I'm not! If my face be white, 'Tis shame that pales it And vengeance twists my features! I am that foolish man Who in poverty found and tried to save thee! He gave a name to thee, A burning love that was madness! (Falls in a chair, overwhelmed.)

The people, while a little puzed by such intensity, loudly aplaud what they think is a piece of FROM "THE GREAT OPERAS" BY J. CUTHBERT HADDER sperb acting.

COLUMBINE AND HARLEQUIN AT SUPPER

Canio (recovering himself): All my life to thee I sacrificed with gladness! Full of hope and believing far less in God than thee! Go! Thou'rt not worth my grief,

O thou abandoned creature! And now, with my contempt, I'll crush thee under heel!

Caruso's rendering of this great scene is a magnificent one. The opening passage is elivered with tremendous power, as Canto pleads his defense, saying that he is no nger a player, but a man, and protests as a man against the wrong inflicted upon him. is passion gives place to a softer strain as he speaks of his love for Nedda, his faithilness and his sacrifices for her. At the close is the intense climax, with its splenid high B flat. Other fine renditions of the air are by Paoli, Zerola and Barbaini.

THE PLAY-ACT II

The close of Canio's great air. "No. Pagliaccio No More!" is greeted with loud cries of "bravo" from the excited audience.

Nedda is now thoroughly alarmed, but courageously faces her husband with outward calm

NEDDA (coldly but seriously): 'Tis well!
If thou think'st me vile. Send me off, then, Before this moment's over!

Canio (laughing loudly):
Ha! Ha!
Oh, nothing better would'st thou ask,

Than to be let run to meet thy lover! No! by Heaven, for here thou paramour's vile Until thy name thou sayest! Nedda, in desperation, tries to continue the play, and as the little gavotte movement is resumed in the accompaniment, she sings:

NEDDA: Oh dear, I never knew that you Were such a fearful man, sir! There's nothing tragic for you here. Come now, Taddeo, answer!

The crowd begins to laugh, but is checked by Canio's appearance, which is alarming. Canio (violently): Ah, you defy me!

You'll name him, or else I'll kill you!

(Shouting): Who was it? NEDDA (throwing off her mask defiantly):

No, by my mother, I'm faithless, or whatever you choose to call me; (Proudly): But cowardly, no, never!

> I will not speak! No, not even if you kill me.

As she sings we hear triumphantly appearing above her voice the love motive:

telling of her passion for Silvio, which is to endure even unto death. Canio now rushes toward her, but is restrained by Tonio and Peppe. Nedda tries to escape, but Canio breaks away and stabs her, crying:

CANIO: Take that! Perhaps in death's last agony, You will speak!

Nedda falls, and with a last faint effort calls:

"Oh, help me, Silvio." Silvio, who has drawn his dagger, rushes to her, when Canio cries: Ah, 'twas you! 'Tis well! (Stabs him.)

Canio (as if stupefied, letting fall his knife):
The comedy is ended!

Then once more is heard the tragic motive of jealousy and death, now thundered out by the orchestra as if rejoicing at its final triumph.

Scene and Period: Ceulon: barbaric period.

Les Pécheurs de Perles, one of Bizet's earlier operas and the first one to achieve success, is a work dealing with an Oriental subject, and contains much music of charm and original ity, showing traces of that dramatic force which reached its full development in Carmen. The character of the music, less passionate and highly colored than Carmen, is yet equally original and of even more striking beauty.

The story tells of the love of two Cingalese pearl fishers for the priestess Leila, and of the generosity of the unsuccessful rival, who helps the lovers to escape at the cost of his own life.

THE PRELUDE

The prelude is a most beautiful number, and considered one of the finest of Bizet's instrumental writings.

ACT I

SCENE—The Coast of Ceylon The rise of the curtain discloses a company of Cingalese pearl fishers, who, after choosing one of their number, Zurga, to be their chief, are enjoying themselves with game and dances. Nadir appears and Zurga recognizes him as a friend of his youth. They greet each other and speak of the days when they were rivals for the hand of a beautiful woman. Nadir, beginning the duet, recalls the moment when the friends first beheld the lovely Leila.

They speak of their sudden realization of the fact that they had both fallen in love at ight with the priestess, and fearing their friendship was in danger, they swore never to see her again. The comrades, now pronouncing themselves entirely cured of their infatuation, bledge anew their friendship and swear to be brothers to the end.

A fisherman now enters and announces the arrival of the mysterious veiled lady who comes once a year to pray for the success of the fisheries, and whom the Ceylonese have adopted as their guardian saint. She enters and begins her prayer. Nadir recognizes her voice and realizes that it is the priestess Leila. The pearl fishers sing a chorus of appeal to Brahma for a blessing, in which Leila joins.

Leila reappears and the act closes with her prayer to Brahma for the good fortune of the fishermen. Just as the curtain falls she recognizes Nadir, and contrives to let him know that she loves him.

ACT II

SCENE-A Ruined Temple

As the curtain rises Leila and Nourabad, the high priest, are seen, they having sought shelter in the ruins of an ancient temple. The high priest, in a fine air, reminds Leila of her oath to renounce love and marriage and devote herself to the welfare of the people. She says that she will keep her promise and tells him of a vow she made when a child to a fugitive who implored her to save his life. Although his pursuers held a dagger to her breast she refused to betray him and he escaped to safety.

The high priest sternly recites the punishment which will overtake her should she prove false to her vow. "Shame and death be thy portion!" cries the stern priest. Left done, the miserable woman broods over her unhappy plight. Bound by an oath which she Now regrets, and conscious of her love for Nadir, which may mean death for them both, she inks down in an agony of despair. Nadir enters and asks her to fly with him, defying stahma and the priests. She at first repulses him, but love is finally triumphant and the Overs rapturously embrace, while a fearful storm rages, unheeded, without the ruins.

This scene is expressed by a splendid duet, two records of which are given here for

SCENE 1-The Camp of Zurga

Zurga is discovered alone, brooding over the impending death of his friend and the woman he loves. His mood of despair is interrupted by Leila, who appears at the entrance to his tent and asks him to dismiss the guards and speak with her alone. She asks mercy for Nadir in a dramatic aria.

She proudly refuses to plead for her own life, but begs that he spare the friend whom he loves. Zurga refuses and summons the guards to conduct her to execution.

SCENE 11-The Place of Execution

The scene shows the wild spot where the funeral pile has been erected. Leila and Nadir are led in, and are about to mount the pyre when a red glow is seen in the sky, and Zurga enters crying that the camp is on fire, and bids the people fly to save their children and effects. All run out except Leila, Nadir and Zurga, and the high priest, who, suspecting a plot, hides to hear what Zurga will say. The latter confesses that he kindled the fire in order to save the lovers. Unfastening their chains, he bids them escape, while Nourabad runs to warn the Indians, and Leila and Nadir, beginning the great trio, voice their gratitude.

The lovers praise the generosity and greatness of Zurga, who for the sake of friendship has committed an act which may cost him his own life. He bids them fly at once, and they go as the voices of the enraged Indians are heard returning for vengeance. Nourabad denounces Zurga for the escape of the victims and for the destruction of the camp, and he is forced to mount the funeral pyre. As the flames mount about him he cries:

ZURGA:
Farewell, my friend!
Farewell, my Leila!
For thee I give my life!

As Zurga dies a fiery glow reveals that the forest is ablaze, and all prostrate themselves, fearing the displeasure of Brahma. The curtain falls as the flames envelop the stage.

ALVAREZ AS THE PROPHET

Meyerbeer's great work is certainly entitled to be called a grand opera, for it is grand to the utmost in theme, character and scenes; and with its brilliant and impressive music, at the time of its production sixty years ago was a model of its kind, as opera-goers demanded melodramatic action, tuneful music and opportunity for ballet; and all these requirements are fully met with in Le Prophète.

The plot is based on the Anabaptist fanaticism of the sixteenth century, which agitated a large part of Germany and Holland, and the leader of which was one Bockelson, commonly called John of Leyden.

ACT I

SCENE-A Suburb of Dordrecht, Holland

The story furnished by the librettists describes John as the son of the widow Fides, an innkeeper of Leyden. At the opening of the opera he is about to wed Bertha, an orphan. She, being a vassal of the Count Oberthal, is obliged to ask his permission before marrying, and goes with Fides, John's mother

The Count, struck with the young girl's beauty, covets her beg the Count's consent. himself, refuses his consent and orders Fides and Bertha into the castle.

ACT II

SCENE-The Inn of John in the Suburbs of Leyden

Three Anabaptists enter and being struck with the resemblance of John to the portrait the guardian saint, David, at Munster, they try to induce him to become their leader. He uses, but tells them of a strange dream he has had.

> JOHN: Under the vast dome of a splendid temple I stood—the people at my feet were prostrate— The royal coronal adorn'd my brow!

The Anabaptists declare that Heaven has spoken in the dream, and promise that he shall be a ruler; but John's thoughts turn to his beloved Bertha, and in this beautiful Pastorale tells them that another and sweeter life calls to him.

Pastorale (There's a Sweeter Empire)

By Leo Slezak, Tenor

(In German) 64112 10-inch $1.00

Slezak, whose John is one of his greatest rôles, sings this lovely romanza with beautiful expression.

JOHN:
Oh, there's a sweeter empire, far,
Which long has been my guiding star;
Oh, thou my joy, my greatest gain,
If in thy faithful heart I reign!
For me, the proudest kingdom,

Less than this thatch'd roof My hopes would bless, Sweet home of calm felicity, Where I would gladly live and die, Where Bertha will forever prove Alike my bosom's queen and love!

Bertha, who has escaped from the castle, now runs in, asking John to save her. She is concealed by him as the Count's soldiers enter and threaten to kill Fides unless John delivers up the maiden. To save his mother's life he is forced to yield, and sees his bride carried off to become the Count's mistress.

Fides, in her gratitude, sings this most dramatic and intense of Meyerbeer's airs, which has attained a world-wide popularity.

From Operatic Authology, by permission of G. Schirmer. (Copy's 1899.)

The part of Fides, the most interesting in the opera, is one of Mme. Schumann-Heink's reat successes, and the Ah, mon fils, a dramatic aria full of real passion, she sings with xquisite tenderness.

This rôle being originally written for a soprano, requires a voice of wide compass and reat power. Mme. Homer's voice not only possesses these qualities, but is brilliant in the igher register and full and musical in the lower, and she sings this wonderful music just as Aeyerbeer wrote it, delivering the beautiful words with real pathos.

John, left by his mother to bitter thoughts, hears the Anabaptists in the distance, and esolves to join them as a means of vengeance on the Count. The compact is soon made nd they depart, leaving some blood-stained garments to lead Fides to believe John has been lain by the Count's assassins.

ACT III

SCENE—Camp of Anabaptists in the Westphalia Forest

The city of Munster is about to be besieged by the rebels, and before proceeding to the :harge, John, now the Prophet, and in command of the rebels, makes them kneel and pray for rictory. They chant the Miserere, and John sings this noble Inno or hymn.

Let's sing and march away.
The eye of Heaven will watch over us,
A supreme power will guide us!
With songs of joy—with shouts of glory—

Three renditions of this inspiring number are presented. Tamagno, who was perhaps the most famous of all Prophets, sings the air gloriously, while other fine records are furnished by Colazza and Paoli, the latter being assisted by La Scala Chorus.

sible, swears to have vengeance.

This magnificent cathedral scene is one of Meverbeer's most brilliant compositions. It forms a striking contrast to the rest of the opera, so gloomy with religious and political fanaticism, and as a piece of glittering pageantry with gorgeous decoration, pealing bells, solemn chants, and the stately Coronation March, has seldom been equaled.

Coronation March

The great symphonic march which occurs in this scene is by far the most striking instrumental number in Meyerbeer's opera. It is brilliant and powerful, with superb instrumentation, and even without the dramatic setting in which it is played in Prophète, always produces a marked effect on the listener.

Of the performance of this noble and stately march by Prvor's Band, we can only say that it is superb in every respect, and the record has a volume of tone which makes one marvel that it all could come from the minute disc vibrations. As John passes into the church, Fides sees him, and in a transport of joy greets him as her son. He declares she is mad, knowing it is death to both if he acknowledges her. She finally realizes the situation, confesses that she is mistaken, and is led away to prison.

ACT V

SCENE I-The Crypt of the Palace at Munster

The first scene takes place in the prison vaults beneath the palace, where Fides, feeling certain that John will contrive to see her, patiently awaits his coming. She at first denounces him as an ungrateful son, then, repenting, prays that Heaven may soften his heart and lead him to repent.

When John enters, Fides denounces the bloody deeds of the Anabaptists and calls on her son to repent and renounce his false robes.

Fines. But thou, whom the world detests, Yes, thou, braving Heaven's behests; Thou, whose fell hand is reeking with blood; Go thou, my son no longer now! Far from my heart, far from my eyes-Blood-stain'd, go!

John confesses his sins and pleads for forgiveness, finally kneeling and receiving her blessing, just as a faithful officer enters and informs John that the Ana-baptists are plotting to deliver him to the Emperor's forces, which are marching on the city. Bertha enters through a secret passage, revealed to her by her grandfather, who was once keeper of the palace. She has resolved to blow up the palace and the false Prophet, and is horrified to learn that John is the Prophet. She denounces him for his crimes, and declaring she has no longer reason to live, stabs herself.

John, in despair, resolves to die with his enemies, and sending away his mother, plans to have the palace set on fire, and goes to the banquet hall.

I PURITANI

THE PURITANS

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Book by Count Pepoli; music by Vincenzo Bellini. First presented at the Théâtre Italien, Paris, January 25, 1835, with a famous cast—Grisi, Rubini, Tamburini and Lablache. First London producton, King's Theatre, May 21, 1835, under the title of Puritani ed i Cavalieri. First New York production, February 3, 1844. Revived in 1906 at the Manhattan Opera, with Pinkert. Bonci and Arimondi.

Characters

SIR GEORGE, Puritan	Bass
LORD ARTHUR TALBOT, Cavalier	Bass
SIR RICHARD FORTH, Puritan	Baritone
SIR BRUNO ROBERTSON, Puritan	Tenor
HENRIETTA OF FRANCE, widow of Charles 1	Soprano
ELVIRA, daughter of Lord Walton	Soprano

Chorus of Puritans, Soldiers of Cromwell, Heralds and Men-at-Arms of Lord Arthur, Countrymen and Women, Damsels, Pages and Servants.

Scene and Period: England in the neighborhood of Plymouth, in the period preceding the impeachment and execution of Charles II by Parliament.

Previous to Mr. Hammerstein's revival in 1906, Puritani had not been given in America since the production of 1883, with Gerster as Elvira. This is not strange, as the opera on the whole is somewhat dreary, only the few numbers the Victor has collected being really worth hearing.

The plot is rather a foolish one: the libretto being one of the poorest ever written for Bellini, but the music is delightful and fascinating. However, we will briefly sketch the story, as it will add to the enjoyment of the lovely melodies of Bellini which the Victor has recorded. The translation is a very unsatisfactory one, but a few quotations are given.

recorded. The translation is a very unsatisfactory one, but a few quotations are given.

The action occurs in England in the time of the Stuarts, during the civil war between the Royalists and the Puritans. Lord Walton, the Puritan Governor-General, has a daughter Elvira, whom he wishes to marry to Richard Forth, a Puritan colonel, but the young girl loves an enemy, Lord Arthur.

ACT I

SCENE 1-Exterior of a Fortress near Plumouth

At the beginning of Act I, Forth, learning that Elvira loves Arthur, and that her father refuses to force her into an unwelcome marriage, is disconsolate and gives vent to his feeling in a famous air:

Ah per sempre (To Me Forever Lost)

By Mario Ancona, Baritone

(In Italian) 87014 10-inch. $2.00

given here by Signor Ancona, whose success in this part at the Manhattan revival is well remembered.

FORTH:

Ah! to me forever lost,
Flow'r of love, and hope the dearest!
Life, to me thou now appearest,
Gloomy and with tempests cross'd.
Oh, happy and lovely dream of peace and joy!
Oh, change thou my fate, or change my heart!
Ah, what a keen torment, in the day of grief,
Becomes the memory of a vanish'd love!

SCENE II-Eloira's Room in the Castle

The next scene shows Eloira's apartment, where her uncle, Sir George, in a fine air, tells her that he has persuaded her father to consent to her marriage with Arthur. This is sung here by de Segurola and issued as a double-faced record, the opposite selection being the Infelice from Ernant.

Sorgea la notte (The Night Was Growing Dark)

By A. Perelló de Segurola, Bass

(In Italian) 55007 12-inch. $1.50

ANCONA AS SIR RICHARD

The night was growing dark, And Heav'n and earth were silent,— Favorable the sad hour, Thy pray'rs gave courage to my soul, And to thy sire I went.

Thus I began,—"My brother"—
"Your angel-like Elvira
Is for the valiant Arthur pining—
Should she another wed,
Oh, wretched one! she dies!"

Said thy father
"She is to Richard promised!"
"Thy unhappy child," repeated I, "will die."
"Oh! say not so," he cried,
"I must yield, let Elvira live,—
Ah! may she be happy—
Let her live in love!"

Elvira is overjoyed, and expresses her gratitude. Trumpets are now heard, and Elvira's surprise is complete when Lord Arthur arrives, attended by squires and pages, and bearing nuptial presents, prominent among which is a splendid white veil, soon to play an important part in the events to come.

Shortly after his arrival Arthur discovers that the widow of Charles I is in the castle under sentence of death, and his sense of duty toward the late Queen impels him to contrive her escape by concealing her in Eloira's veil, the guards thinking it is the bride. The escape is soon discovered and Eloira, supposing that her lover has deserted her on the eve of her bridal day, becomes insane. All denounce Arthur and swear to be revenged.

ACT II SCENE—The Puritan Camp

Act II shows the camp of the Puritan forces. Sir George announces that Parliament has condemned Arthur to death for aiding in the escape of the late Queen. Elvira enters, demented, and sings her famous air, much like the Mad Scene in Lucia.

Qui la voce (In Sweetest Accents)

By Marcella Sembrich, Soprano

(In Italian) 88105 12-inch, $3.00

She recalls her first meeting with Arthur and repeats the vows he swore.

ELVIRA:

It was here in accents sweetest,
He would call me—he calls no more!
Here affection swore he to cherish,
That dream so happy, alas! is o'er!
We no more shall be united,
I'm in sorrow doomed to sigh,
Oh, to hope once more restore me,
Or in pity let me die!
(Her mood changes.)
Yes,—my father: thou call'st me to the temple?
'Tis no dream, my Arthur, oh, my love!
Ah, thou art smiling—thy tears thou driest,
Fond Hymen guiding, I quickly follow!
Then dancing and singing,
All nuptial feasts providing.
(Dancing toward Richard, whom she takes by the hand.)
And surely you will dance with me—
Come to the altar.

Elvira's uncle, hoping that the sight of her lover will restore her reason, begs Sir Richard to pardon the young man. Richard consents, provided he returns helpless and in peril, but if he comes bearing arms against his country he shall die. Sir George agrees to this, and in the splendid Sound the Trumpet they pledge themselves to fight together for their country.

Suoni la tromba (Sound the Trumpet)

By Mario Ancona, Baritone, and Marcel Journet, Bass

(In Italian) 88500 12-inch. $3.00

This favorite duet, often sung in concert, has been aptly described as a "stentorian" number. It is undeniedly a most vigorous piece of declamation, and if the loyalty of Sir George and Sir Richard can be judged by the vigor of the usual rendition, they are loyal indeed!

SIR RICHARD AND SIR GEORGE:
Sound, sound the trumpet loudly!
Bravely we'll meet the foemen,
'Tis sweet affronting death!
Bold love of country aiding.
The victor's wreath unfading,
Will unto us be proudly
Restor'd by Love and Faith!
Morn! rising on a nation,
Whose only trust is freedom—
Will bring us eternal fame!
Earth's tyrants who dissemble,
At the war-message tremble,
Midst the world's execration
They sink in endless shame!

The Puritans then renew their pledge as to Arthur, saying:

SIR GEORGE:
All is now concluded,
If Arthur is defenceless—
RICHARD:
He'll find support and succor.
SIR GEORGE:
If he in arms returns—
RICHARD:
He comes to shame and vengeance!

ACT III

SCENE-A Garden near Elvira's House

The rise of the curtain discloses Arthur, who is fleeing from the enemy, and has come to the castle in the hope of seeing Elvira once more before he leaves England forever. She comes from the castle and at the sight of Arthur her reason suddenly returns. The lovers are reconciled after Arthur explains that it was in the service of his Queen that he had fled from the castle. They sing a lovely duet:

Vieni fra queste braccia (Come to My Arms)

By Maria Galvany, Soprano, and Francesco Marconi, Tenor

(In Italian) 89046 12-inch, $4.00

Forgetting their present danger, they think only of their love and that they are in each other's arms again.

ARTHUR:
Come, come to my arms,
Thou my life's sole delight!
And thus press'd to my heart,
We'll no more disunite!
Thrill'd with anxious love and fear,
On thee I call—for thee I sigh;—
Come, and say the love is dear
That soareth to boundless height!

The sound of a drum is heard, and Elvira again becomes delirious, which so alarms Arthur that he thinks not of escape and is captured by the Puritan forces. The sentence of death is read to him and he is being led to his execution, when a messenger arrives from Cromwell saying that the Stuarts were defeated and a pardon had been granted to all captives. Elvira's reason returns, and the lovers are united, no more to part.

REGINA DI SABA

QUEEN OF SHEBA

OPERA IN FOUR ACTS

Text by Mosenthal, founded upon the Biblical mention of the visit of the Queen of Sheba to Solomon. Music by Goldmark. First production 1875, in Vienna. In New York 1885, with Lehmann and Fischer. Revived in 1905, with Walker, Rappold, Knote and Van Roov.

Characters
KING SOLOMON	Baritone
HIGH PRIEST	Bass
SULAMITH, his daughter	Soprano
ASSAD, Solomon's favorite	Tenor
QUEEN OF SHEBA	Mezzo-Soprano
ASTAROTH, her slave (a Moor)	Soprano

Priests, Singers, Harpists, Bodyguards, Women of the Harem, People.

Scene: Jerusalem and vicinity.

Goldmark's opera, which was his first successful work, was revived on a sumptuous scale by the Metropolitan Company a few years ago, but since that time the only opportunity opera-lovers have had of hearing the beautiful airs has been that offered by their Victors.

The plot tells of the struggle of Assad, a courtier of Solomon, against fleshly temptation. and of his final victory which involves the sacrifice of the happiness of his betrothed, Sulamith.

For this text Goldmark furnished some of the most beautiful and sensuous music in the entire range of opera.

The wisdom and fame of Solomon having reached even distant Arabia, the Queen of Sheba decides to visit him, and a favorite courtier, Assad, has been sent to meet her and escort her to the city. When Assad arrives with the Queen, his betrothed, Sulamith, is astonshed to find him pale and embarrassed, and trying to avoid her. Assad afterward confesses o Solomon that he had met a beautiful woman at Lebanon and had fallen in love with her. When the Queen of Sheba arrives and removes her veil, Assad is astounded to recognize in her he mysterious woman who had captured his senses. Involuntarily he rushes toward her, out she coldly repulses him and passes on with the King.

In Act II the Queen discovers that she loves Assad, and seeing him in the garden, bids ner maid attract his attention with a weird Oriental song. Assad starts when he hears the mysterious air, as it seems to bring back memories of the night at Lebanon. He sings his peautiful air, Magic Tones.

Magiche note (Magic Tones!)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor (In Italian) 87041 10-inch, $2.00 By Leo Slezak, Tenor (In German) 64115 10-inch, 1.00

A lovely melody, sung at first in mezzo-voce, develops gradually until the intense and passionate climax is reached.

The Queen and Assad soon meet and confess their love for each other, but are interrupted by the arrival of the night guard.

In the next scene the Court assembles for the wedding of Sulamith and Assad, but Assad insults his bride and declares his love for the Queen. He is banished from Jerusalem and finally dies in the arms of Sulamith, who is crossing the desert on her way to a convent.

MUSIC DRAMA IN FOUR SCENES

Prelude to the Trilogy: "The Nibelungs' Ring"
(Nee'-bel-oong)

Words and music by Richard Wagner. First produced at Munich, September 22, 1869. First American production at New York, January 4, 1888.

Rheingold is not a "society" opera. Played in complete darkness and with no intermissions during the two hours required for its presentation, it is a work only for real music lovers who understand something of the story and appreciate Wagner's wonderful music.

This first part of the Ring is an introduction to the Trilogy proper, and a full understanding of its incidents is necessary to properly appreciate the other Ring operas.

SCENE I-The Bottom of the Rhine

The stage is in semi-darkness, representing the murky depths of the Rhine, and the light glimmering on the surface of the water above shows but faintly the three Rhine maidens guarding the Rhinegold.

They sing their quaint songs as they float about the rock which conceals the treasure.

MOTIVE OF THE RHINE MAIDENS

Alberich, prince of the Nibelungs, a strange race of dwarfs who dwell deep in the earth, observes the beauty of the maidens and tries to make love to them. They laugh at him and evade with ease this clumsy endeavors to catch them. Suddenly, as the sun rises, the gleam of the Rhinegold is seen. Alberich, dazzled by the splendor of this glow, asks what it is, and the maidens foolishly inform him that whoever can secure this treasure and form it into a ring can become lord of all the world. One condition, however, is that the possessor cannot wield this power unless he renounces forever the joys of love.

Alberich, having failed in his amorous attempts towards the Natads, now conceives an ambition for power. He cries, "Then love I renounce forever," and swimming to the rock, he tears the gold from its place and flees, while from the complete darkness which ensues comes the dwarf's mocking laughter and the wailing of the maidens who are moaning for their lost treasure.

SCENE II—A Mountain Top, Showing the Castle of Walhalla

THEFT OF THE RHINEGOLD-SCENE I

During this darkness the scene changes and as the stage becomes lighter we see Walhalla, the abode of the gods, a wonderful castle built for Wotan by the giants. Wotan and his wife are lying asleep on a flowery bank, but soon wake and see the castle which has been built while they slept. Wotan is overjoyed at the glorious sight, but the more practical Fricka reminds him of the price which he had agreed to pay the giants for this godly dwelling; this being the surrender of Freta, goddess of youth and beauty. Wotan tells her that he never intended to keep his agreement, the god Loge having promised to show him a way to evade payment.

Freia now hastily enters, closely pursued by the giants Fasolt and Fafner, who call upon Wotan to deliver the goddess to them as agreed. Wotan repudiates his promise, saying that it was made only in jest.

WOTAN:

How sly to take for truth
What only in sport we had settled!
This beauteous goddess, light and bright,
What use to you are her charms?

Frish and Donner, Fricka's brothers, enter, also Loge, and a long argument ensues, Wotan finally realizing that he must give up Freia to the giants. Loge, however, tells them of the Rhinegold, saying that if this treasure could be stolen from Alberich by Wotan, it might be accepted by the giants in place of Freia. Wotan refuses to entertain this plan and the giants seize Freia and carry her off, declaring that if the Rhinegold is not in their hands by night the original bargain must stand, and Freia be lost to the gods forever.

Left alone, the gods realize the serious

FREIA AND THE GIANTS

predicament they are in, especially as it is seen that, deprived of their youth goddess, they are suddenly aging. Wotan thereupon decides to secure the Nibelungs' gold, and goes with Loge in search of Alberich. A vapor arises from the earth, concealing the stage, and when it disappears the scene has changed.

SCENE III _ Alberich's Cave

Alberich, since he has acquired the Rhinegold, has become more arrogant and cruel than ever, and compels Mime and the other Nibelungs to continually toil and slave to bring him in more gold. At the beginning of the scene he is berating Mime for loitering over his task of making a Tamhelm, or magic cap, fashioned from the Rhinegold, and which gives the wearer the power to become invisible. Wotan and Loge now enter on this scene and are rudely greeted by Alberich, who demands their business, and holding out the Ring bids them tremble at his power. They at first craftily flatter him, but he is surly and says that naught but envy could have brought them here. Wotan is angry and is about to voice his wrath when the crafty Loge makes him a sign to be quiet and begins to taunt Alberich, doubting his power. Alberich is so enraged that he offers to change himself into any shape required to prove the magic of the Tamhelm, and immediately becomes a huge dragon. Loge affects extreme terror, at which Alberich laughs and resumes his human shape again. The god then cunningly asks him to change to a toad, which shape he has no sooner assumed than Loge puts his foot on the toad and seizes the Tamhelm, thus robbing Alberich of his power. His natural form returns and they bind him and start for the upper earth. The scene changes again to the mountain summit.

SCENE IV-Same as Scene II

Wotan and Loge enter, dragging the helpless Albertch, who is beside himself with rage. They demand that he give them his hoarded store of gold as the price of his freedom. He reluctantly obeys and summons the Nibelungs, who instantly swarm up from below carrying the hoard. He then asks to be set free, but Wotan demands also the Ring. Alberich is horrified, but is finally compelled to add it to the pile of gold. He then sings his bitter and ironical air. Bin ich nun frei?

Bin ich nun frei? (Am I Now Free?) By Otto Goritz, Baritone

(In German) 64203 10-inch, $1.00

He lays a frightful curse on the Ring, predicting that it will bring misery and death to each possessor until it is restored to him again.

Alberich (with bitter irony): Am I now free?-Really free? Then listen, friends, To my freedom's first salute!—
As at first by my curse 'twas reached,
Henceforth cursed be this ring! Gold which gave me measureless might, Now may its magic deal each owner death! No man shall e'er own it in mirth, And to gladden no life shall its luster gleam. May care consume each several possessor, And envy gnaw him who neareth it not! All shall lust after its delights, But none shall employ them to profit him. To its master giving no gain, Aye the murd'rer's brand it shall bring. To death he is fated, Its fear on his fancy shall feed; Though long he live shall he languish each The treasure's lord and the treasure's slave: Till within my hand I in triumph once more behold it! So-stirred by the hardest need, The Nibelung blesses his ring!— I give it thee,—guard it with care

But my curse canst thou not flee!

THE CAPTURE OF ALBERICH-SCENE III

PAINTED BY MAKART BATTLE OF THE GIANTS-SCENE IV

He vanishes and Wotan who has paid little attention to his cursing, dons the Ring, gazing at it in admiration. The giants now return for their pay, and demand that enough gold shall be piled around Freia to hide her completely from sight. This is done, but when all the gold is piled up Fafner says there is still one small crevice visible, and insists that it be filled with the Ring, Wotan refuses, and the giants are about to seize Freia again, when Erda, the earth goddess, rises and delivers her appeal to Wotan

Weiche, Wotan, weiche! (Waver, Wotan)

By Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Contralto (In German) 88092 12-inch, $3.00

(Wotan's responses are sung by Mr. Witherspoon)

She warns him solemnly that the Ring is cursed and charges him to give it up.

ERDA (stretching her hand):
Waver, Wotan, waver!
Ouit the Ring accursed!
(She continues her solemn warning)
Ruin and dismalest downfall wait thee in its wealth.
WOTAN:
Who speaks such menacing words?

HOMER AS ERDA

Whatever was, was I; what is, as well;
What ages shall work—all I show;
The endless world's All-wise one, Erda, opens thine eyes.
Three, the daughters born to me
E'er the world was made; all I notice
Nightly thou know'st from the Nornir.
But hither in dire danger haste I to thy help.
Hear me! Hear me! Hear me!
All that exists, endeth!
A dismal day dawns for the Æsir:
O render wisely the ring!
(She begins to sink slowly into the earth.)
WOTAN:
A secret spell speaks in thy words:
Wait and impart more wisdom.
Erda (disappearing):
I've warned thee now; thou wott'st enough;
Pause and ponder truth!
(She completely disappears.)

Mme. Schumann-Heink sings this powerful number with dignity and dramatic force.

Wotan at last yields and throws the Ring on the heap of gold. The giants, as if to prove the curse, immediately begin to quarrel about its possession, and Fasolt is killed by Fafner; after which the murderer coolly proceeds to collect the gold and then departs.

Donner, the god of thunder, now calls up a storm and causes a rainbow bridge to form, making a passage to the castle. As the gods proceed across the bridge to Walhalla the voices of the Rhine maidens can be heard from below, still bewailing the loss of their gold.

RHINE-NYMPHS (from below):
Rhinegold! Rarest gold!
O might but again

In the wave thy pure magic wake! What is of worth dwells but in the waters! Base and bad those who are throned above.

(As the gods slowly cross the bridge to the castle, the curtain falls.)

MONTERONE DENOUNCES THE JESTER-ACT I

RIGOLETTO

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Piave, adapted from Victor Hugo's drama Le Roi s'Amuse. Music by Giuseppe Verdi. First produced in Venice, March 11, 1851. First London production at Covent Garden, May 14, 1853; at the Italiens, Paris, January 19, 1857. First New York production November 2, 1857.

Characters

RIGOLETTO, a hunchback, jester to the Duke	Baritone
DUKE OF MANTUA, a titled profligate	Tenor
GILDA, (Jeel'-dah) daughter of Rigoletto	Soprano
SPARAFUCILE, (Spahr-ah-foo-cheel') a hired assassin	Bass
MADDALENA, (Mad-dah-lay'-nah) his sister	Contralto
COUNT MONTERONE (Mon-ter-oh'-nay)	Baritone
COUNT CEPRANO	Bass
Courtiers, pages, servants.

Scene and Period: Mantua and vicinity; sixteenth century.

The story tells of the gay and unprincipled Duke of Mantua, who is assisted in his crimes by his jester, Rigoletto, a hunchback. The father of one of the Duke's victims is mocked by Rigoletto and launches upon him a father's awful curse, which stuns and sobers the jester, as he, too, has a daughter, Gilda, unknown to the court.

On his way home Rigoletto meets a professional assassin, Sparafucile, who offers, for a price, to kill any enemy he may have. Rigoletto says he may need him later. The Duke in the guise of a young student, has already met Gilda, not knowing who she is, and the young girl has fallen in love with him. When Rigoletto has left the house the Duke's courtiers abduct Gilda and take her to the Palace. The father's rage is terrible to wimes, and he goes to the Palace, but too late to save his daughter. She pleads for the Duke's life, but Rigoletto swears to kill him, and arranges with the assassin, Sparafucile, to accomplish the deed. The Duke is lured to a lonely inn by Sparafucile's attractive sister, Maddalena, and is about to be murdered when Maddalena, who has taken a fancy to him, begs for his life. Sparafucile consents provided a substitute should happen along before midnight. Gilda.

SETTING OF ACT I AT THE METROPOLITAN

whom Rigoletto had brought hither (disguised as a page) in order that she might witness the fickleness of her lover, has been listening to the conversation, and now resolves to save the Duke's life at the cost of her own. She enters the hut, is stabbed by Sparafucile, who delivers the body to Rigoletto according to agreement. Rigoletto is about to cast the body into the river when he hears the Duke's voice in the distance. The wretched man opens the sack, sees his daughter and falls senseless on her body.

ACT I

SCENE I-Ballroom in the Duke's Palace

As a fête is in progress in the ducal residence, the Duke confides to one of his courtiers hat he is about to make a new conquest. For some months he has seen a young and beautiful girl at church, but knows nothing of her except that she is visited often by a man who is supposed to be her lover. The Duke then sings his first air, Questo o quella.

Questa o quella ('Mid the Fair Throng)

By Enrico Caruso, Tenor By Florencio Constantino, Tenor (In Italian) 87018 10-inch, $2.00 (In Italian) 64069 10-inch, 1.00

This melodious number is perhaps the best of the Duke's solos, though usually cast omewhat in the background by the popular La donna e mobile. In it the Duke announces umself as a man of pleasure, sets forth his code of morals, and boasts of his conquests.

DUKE:
'Mid the fair throng that sparkle around me,
Not one o'er my heart holds sway;
Though a sweet smile one moment may charm me,

A glance from some bright eye its spell drives away.

All alike may attract, each in turn may please; Now with one I may trifle and play, Then another may sport with and tease—

Yet all my heart to enslave their wiles display.

As a dove flies, alarm'd, to seek shelter,
Pursued by some vulture, to bear it aloft in flight.

in flight,
Thus do I fly from constancy's fetter:
E'en women's spells I shun—all their efforts
I slight.

A husband that's jealous I scorn and despise, And I laugh at and heed not a lover's sighs; If a fair one take my heart by surprise, I heed not scornful tongues or prying eyes.

Caruso's interpretation of the Duke is quite different from the one to which opera-goers are been accustomed. He does not picture Mantua as a deliberate villain, a fiend in uman guise, but as a light-hearted, careless and irresponsible devotee of pleasure,—so ttractive that the infatuation of Gilda seems wholly natural. This air is always sung by the mor with perfect ease and extreme brilliancy, and the record is a superb one, not surassed by any in his list.

Constantino has made a great success as the Duke, both at the Manhattan Opera and in Boston during the past season. He sings this gay air with grace and abandon.

After making another enemy in the person of the Count Ceprano, by his marked attention to the latter's wife, the Duke departs. Marullo enters and eagerly announces to the courtiers a rich discovery. Rigoletto, the Duke's jester, is in love! The courtiers refuse to believe this, as Rigoletto is known as a confirmed woman-hater. Marullo insists that the jester makes frequent visits to a young girl. The nobles, who all hate Rigoletto for his cruel tongue, are eager to turn this knowledge into a means of revenge, and agree to meet Ceprano the next evening for a rare adventure.

The voice of the aged Count Monterone, whose daughter is one of the recent victims of the Duke, is now heard outside demanding admittance. He throws aside the guards who seek to stop him, and entering, denounces the Duke for his crimes.

Ch'io le parli (I Will Speak to Him)

By Francesco Cigada, Baritone: Aristodemo Sillich, Bass: La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *68190 12-inch. $1.25

Rigoletto ridicules and mocks the old man, who calls him a "vile buffoon," and then, in an awful rage, utters so terrible a curse upon him,—the curse of a father.—that all are horrified.

Rigoletto is stunned and sobered by this terrible malediction, for he, too, has a daughter, unknown to the court, and love for his child and respect for her dead mother are the sole redeeming traits in his cruel nature.

Monterone is removed by the guards, and the scene changes to the street in front of Rigoletto's house.

SCENE II—A Street; Rigoletto's Cottage on one side, opposite the Palace of Count Ceprano

The jester enters, brooding with superstitious fear over the curse which had been laid upon him. He is accosted by Sparafucile, a professional assassin, who offers to rid him of an enemy if he has one. Rigoletto looks at him thoughtfully and says that if he has need of his services he will inform him. Sparafucile departs and Rigoletto delivers his famous monologue.

He looks at the retreating form of the bravo and says:

Stab men by daylight!
(He thinks of Monterone's curse.)
He laid a father's curse on me.

Thou hast doom'd me to a life of torment.
I must jest, I must laugh,
And be their laughing stock!

Youthful and brilliant, rich and handsome,

Tells me, between sleeping and waking: "Come, buffoon, I would laugh now!" Oh shame, I must obey him! Oh life accursed! How I hate ye, Race of vile and fawning courtiers! "Tis my only joy to taunt ye! For if I am vile, 'tis to your vice I owe it! (He thinks of his home and daughter.) In that blest abode my nature changes! (Again he remembers the curse.) VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-VERDI'S RIGOLETTO

SAMMARCO AS RIGOLETTO

Five records of this great number are here presented. sung by famous exponents of the part of Rigoletto.

The jester enters the court-yard and is affectionately greeted by Gilda, who comes from the house. She notes his anxious looks and begs him to confide in her. She asks him about her mother, whom she but dimly remembers. Rigoletto avoids her question and sings a pathetic air:

Deh non parlare al misero (Recall Not the Past)

By Antonio Scotti. Baritone

(In Italian) 85031 12-inch. $3.00 in which he begs her to refrain from questions regarding their past life.

He embraces her tenderly, then, recalling the curse. solemnly enjoins her to keep within the house and never venture into the town. Gilda says she has only been to Mass each Sunday, but does not tell him of the student with whom she had exchanged fond glances. Rigoletto summons the maid, Giovanna, and questions her, beginning a lovely duet, full of pathos.

Veglia o donna (Safely Guard This Tender Blossom)

By Maria Galvany, Soprano, and Titta Ruffo, Baritone

(In Italian) 91500 10-inch. $3.00

He warns the maid to always closely guard her mistress from any danger which may threaten.

RIGOLETTO:

IGOLETTO:
Safely guard this tender blossom,
Which to thee I now confide;
In her guileless heart and bosom
May no thought of ill betide;
From the arts of vice protect her,
May its snares be laid in vain;
Her father will from thee expect her Safely brought to him again.

GILDA:
Ah! such fear for me revealing,
Father dear, why thus display?
One from whom there's no concealing
Guides me ever on my way
From on high my mother's spirit Leads me on with tender care While this heart bears life within it, 'Twill defy each artful snare!

Rigoletto bids his daughter a tender farewell and takes his departure. The Duke, again dressed as a student, now enters, having previously purchased the silence of Giovanna.

Gilda is alarmed, not thinking her innocent flirtation in the church would lead to this, and bids him begone, but he reassures her, beginning a fine duet.

(In Italian) 92056 12-inch, $3.00

By Alice Nielsen, Soprano, and Florencio Constantino, Tenor

He soothes her fears, telling her he loves her with a pure devotion.

DUKE:

Love is the sun by which passion is lighted, Happy the mortal who feels its power; Each pleasure once priz'd without it seems blighted; With it we heed not what fate may shower. Feeling celestial, no joy terrestrial Ever to me can such sweet joys impart.
Ah! may no blight ever this heart from thee Rest in my bosom, ne'er to depart!

Footsteps are now heard, and after a tender farewell he leaves, after telling her that his name is Walter Malde.

Gilda remains pensively gazing at the gate through which the pretended student has departed. In rapturous soliloquy she sings:

This delightful song, with its grace, delicacy and coloring, has never been surpassed and the scoring for orchestra, especially in Verdi's use of the wood-wind, is admirable.

Melba's rendition is worthy of so exquisite a number, and she has surpassed herself The ease with which she sings is wonderful, and her voice shows in an unusual degree that luscious smoothness, golden purity and perfect equality for which it is noted.

The character of Gilda is represented by Mme. Sembrich with genuine simplicity, yet with truly impassioned feeling where occasion calls for it; as in this tuneful "Caro nome, when the young girl in soliloguy dwells with rapture on the name of the pretended student, Walter Malde, who has secretly won her heart. Nothing could be more perfect in its way than Mme. Sembrich's singing of this beautiful number.

Tetrazzini's delivery of this lovely air is marked by surpassing beauty of tone, the roulades, trills and staccatos in the concluding portion being poured out lavishly and with the utmost ease and fluency. Other adequate renditions, at lower prices, are also listed above.

Night has now fallen and the courtiers, led by Ceprano, enter, wearing masks. Rigoletto returns and is much alarmed to see them in this neighborhood, but his fears are allayed when they announce that they have come to carry off Ceprano's wife, as he is well aware that the Duke has had designs on that lady for some time past. He tells them Ceprano's palace is on the opposite side and offers to help them. They insist that he must be disguised and contrive to give him a mask which covers his eyes and ears, and lead him in a circle back to his own balcony, giving him a ladder to hold. Gilda is seized, her mouth

ACT II

SCENE-A Hall in the Duke's Palace

The courtiers enter and tell the Duke that they have captured Rigoletto's mistress. He expresses his appreciation of the adventure, not knowing they had abducted the young girl he had just left, and asks for particulars. They sing their chorus, Scorrendo unite,

Scorrendo unite remota via (On Mischief Bent)

By New York Grand Opera Chorus (In Italian) 64049 10-inch, $1.00 which gives the details of the huge joke they have played on Rigoletto by making him assist in the capture of his own mistress.

Courtiers: Unto a lonely abode directed. When shades of evening were falling fast, By dark'ning shadows we were protected Until our game we spied at last; With timid footsteps she scarce came nigh us, We were preparing our prey to seize When Rigoletto just then came by us, With angry brow and ill at ease. And that the joke might be all the madder, We said Ceprano's wife should be our prey, and falls in a swoon as the curtain descends.

We then desir'd him to hold the ladder; His eyes were bandag'd, he did obey. We swiftly mounted to the room, and found her,

The startled beauty we bore away!

DUKE (aside):

Wondrous! it must be my love, my lost one!

COURTIERS: When he discover'd how we'd fooled him, No doubt he curs'd till break of day!

When the Duke learns that Gilda is in an adjoining room he joyfully goes to her, saying that her fears will be soothed when she discovers he is the Walter Malde she loves. Then occurs one of the most dramatic scenes in the opera, and the greatest opportunity for Rigoletto. This scene has been recorded in its entirety by Amato, one of the greatest of Rigolettos, assisted by Bada, Setti and the Metropolitan Chorus.

Povero Rigoletto! (Poor Rigoletto!)

Rigoletto's voice is now heard outside, singing a careless air. He enters, affecting indifference, but trying to find some clue to Gilda's whereabouts. A page enters with a message for the Duke and the courtiers tell him their master cannot be disturbed. Rigoletto listens, his fears becoming confirmed, and he exclaims:

RIGOLETTO: Ah, she must be here then!

In yonder chamber!
COURTIERS: (affecting surprise): Who?

RIGOLETTO:
The maid whom you last night From my roof carried hither. Ah. she is there, I know it!

COURTIERS: If a sweetheart you've lost,
Go somewhere else to seek her!
RIGOLETTO (with terrible emphasis):
                                                                       RIGOLETTO:
                                                                          (Rushes toward the door, but the courtiers but his passage and a terrible struggle occurs.)
    Give me my daughter!
                                                                          She is there! stand back. I tell ve!
 COURTIERS (in astonishment):
    What, his daughter!
     His rage, now terrible to witness, is expressed in the second part. Cortigiani, vil razza.

    Let me enter, ye assassins, stand back!
     That door I must enter!

     Ah, I see it-all against me-have pity!
      This affecting scene is ended by Gilda, who now enters, in tears, and embraces her father.
                                                                       GILDA (hiding her face):
Dishonor, oh my father!
RIGOLETTO: Horror! what say'st thou?
  RIGOLETTO (overloved):
    IGOLETTO (overjayed):
Gilda, my daughter!
My lost one—my treasure!
My lords, she is all I cherish.
Now we need fear nothing,
Angel, I've found thee!
Come tell me, 'twas but jesting?
(To the courtiers.)
                                                                        GILDA:

Hence, I command, and leave us!
If the worthless duke ye serve dares approach,
I forbid him to enter!
     I who was weeping rejoice now. (To Gilda.)
                                                                           Say that, I charge ye!
     But why art thou weeping?
      The courtiers, somewhat ashamed at the turn of affairs, obey, and Gilda begins her pitiful confession.

ACT III

SCENE 1—A Lonely Spot on the River Mincio. A House, Half in Ruins, at one Side. The front of the house, open to the spectator, shows a rustic inn on the ground floor; a broken staircase leads from this to a loft, where stands a rough couch. On the side towards the street is a door, and a low wall extends backwards from the house. The Mincio is seen in the background, behind a ruined parapet; beyond, the towers of Mantua. It is night. Sparafucile in the house, seated by a table polishing his belt, unconscious of what is spoken outside.

Rigoletto and Gilda, the latter in male attire, now approach the inn. Rigoletto pityingly asks his daughter if she still can love the Duke. She confesses that she does, and he exclaims:

RIGOLETTO:
Thou lov'st him?
GILDA:
Always.
RIGOLETTO:
Still to love him is mere infatuation.
GILDA:
I love him.
RIGOLETTO:
Ah, tender heart of woman!
Oh, base despoiler!
Thou my child shalt yet have vengeance.

GILDA:
Nay, rather pity.

RIGOLETTO:
And if I could convince thee that he is worthless, wouldst thou still then love him?

GILDA:
Perhaps. Ah. he does love me!

RIGOLETTO (leads her towards the house to look through a fissure in the wall):
Come here, and look within,

She does so, and is startled to see the Duke, who comes in disguised as a soldier, demand some wine and sing his famous La donna e mobile.

This familiar canzone, beginning

La don-na è mo-bi - le qual plu-ma al ven - to, mu-ta d'ac - cen - to e di pen sie - ro
Wom-ap. is fich - le, false al - to - geth-er, Mov'd like the fee-ther borne by the bree - zes is perhaps the best known of all the airs of the opera. Its spontaneous melody pictures the gay, irresponsible character of the young noble who thus sings of changeable womankind.

Woman is fickle, false altogether,
Moves like a feather borne on the breezes;
Woman with guiling smile will e'er deceive
you,
Often can grieve you, yet e'er she pleases,
Her heart's unfeeling, false altogether;
Moves like a feather borne on the breeze,
Borne on the breeze, borne on the breeze,
Wretched the dupe is, who when she looks kindly,
Trusts to her blindly. Thus life is wasted!
Yet he must surely be dull beyond measure,
Who of love's pleasure never has tasted.
Woman is fickle, false altogether,
Moves like a feather, borne on the breeze!

Caruso delivers the gay air with an ease and abandon which are infectious, and sings the difficult cadenza in the second verse with unusual effectiveness.

Other renditions are given at varying prices.

Among the musical gems with which the score of Rigoletto abounds, none is so well rn and universally admired as this fine number, sung by the Duke, Gilda, Maddalena Rigoletto. It is undoubtedly the most brilliant and musicianly of all Verdi's concerted s, and the contrasting emotions—the tender addresses and coquetry on the one side, the heart-broken sobs of Gilda and the cries for vengeance of her father on the othersictured with the hand of a genius.

No less than four records of this great number, at varying prices, also two instrumental itions, are offered by the Victor. The singers who have been engaged for these records Il noted for their artistic interpretations of the characters represented. Caruso's Duke.

THE QUARTET-ACT III

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-VERDI'S RIGOLETTO

The situation at the opening of the act is a most dramatic one. The Duke, gay and careless, is making love to Maddalena in the inn of Sparafucile, the bandit, all unconscious that the assassin hired by Rigoletto is waiting for his opportunity.

He sings, beginning the quartet:

HOMER AS MADDALENA

Dure UKE:
Fairest daughter of the graces,
I thy humble slave implore thee,
With one tender word to joy restore me,
End the pangs, the pangs of unrequited love.
Of my anguish see the traces, Thee I treasure all above. With one tender word to joy restore me, End the pangs, the pangs of unrequited love!

MADDALENA (repulsing him): I appreciate you rightly,
All you say is but to flatter.
Ah, I laugh to think how many Yet your tender tale may move!

Rigoletto, who desires to prove to Gilda that her lover is false, bids her look through the window of the inn at the scene within. The unhappy girl, convinced, exclaims:

GILDA: Ah, to speak of love thus lightly! Words like these to me were spoken, He is false; my heart is broken!

Silence, thy tears will not avail thee, It were baseness to regret him! Thou must shun him and forget him. Thy avenger I will prove
The strength to punish will not fail me
That I vow to every power that rules above!

The blending of the four voices is marvelous in its smoothness, and the manner in which every syllable and every note of the difficult music is brought out, is most remarkable. The sales of these wonderful reproductions have been enormous, and copies of the records have made their way to every part of the world, and are in the collections of music lovers everywhere.

The Duke now goes to his bedroom and is soon asleep. Rigoletto bids his daughter go to Verona with all speed and he will meet her there. She reluctantly departs and Rigoletto pays Sparafucile half his price, the remainder to be paid on the delivery of the body of the Duke at midnight. Rigoletto goes away just as Gilda, who has disobeyed her father, returns and tries to see what is going on inside the house. Sparafucile enters the house and Maddalena, who has taken a fancy to the Duke. begs her brother to spare his life, delicately suggesting that he kill Rigoletto and take the money from him. Sparafucile is indignant and protests that he has never yet ployers. Maddalena pleads with him and he finally says if another guest should enter he will kill him instead of be Duke.

GILDA FINDS HER LOVER FALSE

During this dramatic scene a storm is raging, and in addition to the stage effects of thunder and lightning Verdi has used the effective device of the chorus humming in chromatic thirds to illustrate the moaning of the wind. This scene is given here in a wonderfully impressive record by Brambilla, Cappiello and Sillich, assisted by La Scala Chorus.

Tempesta-Somiglia un Apollo (He's Fair as Apollo)

By Linda Brambilla, Soprano; Maria Cappiello, Mezzo-Soprano; Aristodemo Sillich, Bass; and La Scala Chorus (In Italian) *68190 12-inch. $1.25

Gilda hears this terrible agreement and the broken-hearted girl resolves to sacrifice her own life to save that of her false lover. She knocks at the door, is seized and stabbed by the bandit and her body wrapped in a sack. Rigoletto soon returns, pays the remainder of the price agreed upon, and receives the body. Sparafucile, fearing that Rigoletto will discover the substitution, offers to throw the body into the river. The Jester says he will do it himself and bids the bravo depart.

Left alone, the Jester gazes on the body with a horrible satisfaction, saying:

RIGOLETTO:
He is there, pow'rless! Ah, I must see him!
Nay, 'twere folly! 'tis he surely! I feel his spurs here.
Look on me now ye courtiers!
Look here and tremble,
Here the buffoon is monarch!

Yes, my foot is upon him!
My grief has vanish'd,
'Tis turned to joy triumphant;
Thy tomb shall be the waters,
This coarse sack thy shroud and grave cloth!
Away, now!

He is about to drag the sack towards the river, when he hears the voice of the Duke leaving the inn on the opposite side.

DURE:
Woman is fickle, false altogether, etc.
RIGOLETTO (tearing his hair):
That voice! Am I mad? What fiend deludes me?
No, no, no! here I hold him!
(Calling to the house.)
Hola, thou thief, thou bandit!
(The Duke's voice dies in the distance.)
Then whom have I within here?
I tremble—the form is human!
(With utmost horror, recognizing Gilda.)
My daughter, oh, Heav'n, my daughter!
Ah, no! Not my daughter! She is in Verona!
'Twas a dream!

Then begins the wonderful final duet, a fitting end to such a noble and powerful work, and a number which is unfortunately omitted in American performances of the opera. However, the Victor owner, more fortunate than the opera-goer, may hear it at his pleasure.

ALICE AND BERTEAM-ACT II

Although Meverbeer had produced several operas, mostly unsuccessful, it was not until the production of Robert le Diable in 1831 that the genius of the composer became known. The opera met with an unparalleled success and really made the fortune of the Paris Opéra with its splendid scenic effects, brilliant instrumentation, vigorous recitative and its heroic and partly legendary story.

Robert, Duke of Normandu. who was called Robert the Devil because of his courage in battle and his successes in love, is banished by his subjects and goes to Sicily, where he continues to struggle with an Evil Spirit, which seems to tempt him to every kind of ess. Alice, his foster sister, suspects that his supposed friend Bertram, is in reality this influence. At the close of Act I Robert, led on by Bertram, gambles away all his sessions, and failing to attend the Tournament, loses the honor of a knight and greatly pleases the Lady Isabella, whom he loves.

The second act shows the entrance to the Cavern of Satan, wherein a company of Evil rits are collected, and where occurs the great scene for Bertram and the chorus of bends.

Alice, who has come to the vicinity of the cave to meet her lover, overhears this infernal bargain and determines to save him. Robert, dejected over the loss of his honor and wealth, meets Bertram, who promises that all shall be restored to him if he will have the courage to visit the ruined abbey and secure a magic branch, which can give wealth, power and immortality.

The next scene shows the ruins, where Bertram invokes the aid of the buried nuns in completing the downfall of Robert. This famous invocation is sung here by Plancon with spirit and power.

Invocation—Nonnes, qui reposez (Ye Slumb'ring Nuns)

By Pol Plancon, Baritone

(In French) 85125 12-inch, $3.00

Bertram speaks of the founding of the convent and of the false nuns who lie buried here, and calls upon them to arise.

BERTRAM:

Here then are the nuns of the ancient monastery, o Heaven's cause bequeathed St. Rosalie, Here lie buried the false daughters

Whose unholy devotion was offered to other

Nuns, who beneath this cold stone repose, For an hour forsake your sepulcher beds, King of Hell, it is I who calls you.

THE RUINED ABBEY-ACT III

The spectres arise, and when Robert appears they dance around him and lead to the grave of St. Rosalie, where he is shown the magic branch. Overcoming his fears, he grasps it, and by its power defeats the multitude of demons who arise from the infernal regions to prevent his escape.

In the next scene Robert uses the branch to become invisible, and goes to Lady Isabella's room to carry her off. In this scene occurs the famous air for Isabella, "Oh, Robert, My Beloved," part of which will be found in this selection by Pryor.

Moved by her entreaties, he yields to the promptings of his good angel and breaks the branch, thus destroying the spell.

In the last act Bertram renews his efforts to induce Robert to sign an eternal contract. Tired of life, he is about to yield when Alice appears and tells him of the last words of his mother, warning him against the Fiend, who is in reality Robert's father. The clock strikes twelve, and the baffled Fiend disappears, while the cathedral door opens showing the Princess waiting for the reformed Robert.

OPERA IN FIVE ACTS

Libretto by Louis Gallet: music by Jules Massenet. First production at the Grand Opéra, Paris, April 27, 1877: and at Covent Garden, Royal Italian Opera, June 28, 1879.

Cast ALIM, King of Lahore.....Tenor SCINDIA, his minister Baritone TIMUR, a priest Bass INDRA Bass SITA Soprano

Time and Place: India: the eleventh century, during the incursion of the Mohammedans,

This early work of Massenet's is founded upon an Indian subject, and deals with the Mussulman invasion. It is noted for its brilliant ballet, illustrative of an Indian paradise.

Sita, niece of the high priest, Timur, is beloved by Alim, King of Lahore. His rival, Scindia, accuses her of profaning the Temple and she is condemned to death, but is saved by the King, who asks her hand in marriage.

In the second act Alim, at war with the Mussulmans, is betrayed to the enemy by Scindia, and is killed in battle, while Scindia seizes his throne and carries away Sita.

Alim is transported to the celestial realm of India, but is not contented, and begs the divinities to allow him to return to earth. His request is granted on condition that he does not resume his rank and returns to India when Sita dies. On his return he finds that Scindia has secured the throne and forced Sita to become his wife. Alim declares himself, but Scindia denounces him as an impostor. Alim is obliged to flee, but Sita goes with him. and when they are about to be captured she kills herself. Alim, in fulfillment of his vow. also dies, and the lovers are united in celestial India.

The most famous of the numbers is of course this superb air for baritone in the fourth act, which La Salle sung in the first production with great success. A portion of the fine translation by Dudley Buck, from the Schirmer "Operatic Anthology" (Copy't G. Schirmer), is given here by permission.

> Scindia:
> The Sultan's barb'rous horde, who had so gladly riven From us fair Lahore, By our own might have from the field been driven.

O promise fair of joy divine, Sita,
Thou dream of all my life,
O beauty torn from me by strife,
At last, thou shalt be mine! O Sita!
O fair one, charm my loving heart,
And ne'er again from me depart!

Sita, my queen thou soon shalt be! To thee the world its glory offers, To thee a king his crown now proffers; Come, Sita, O come! ah! be mine!

A fine rendition of this air is given here by Mr. de Gogorza, whose beautiful voice and serfect French diction are well exhibited.

THE LOVERS' FIRST MEETING

Romeo and Juliet over-flows with charming music, Gounod having written for the lovers some of the most emotional passages ever composed, and the opera has even been called "a love duet with occasional interruptions." It is of course not another Faust,—no composer could write two such works,—but it is a most beautiful setting of the story of the ill-fated Italian lovers, which will always be listened to with pleasure.

Several of the Shakespearean personages have been omitted from the opera cast by the librettists, and a new character, that of the page Stephano, has been added.

ACT I

SCENE-Ballroom in Capulet's House, Verona

The curtain rises on a scene of festivity. Capulet, a Veronese noble, is giving a masked fête in honor of his daughter Juliet's entrance into society.

Iuliet is presented to the guests by her father, and Capulet calls on his guests to make merry in a rousing air.

lt is maintained by some critics that this waltz is too showy and brilliantly effective to be sung by a modest young girl at her first ball. However, Gounod has written such an uncommonly pretty waltz of exquisite melody, that most hearers are too delighted to inquire very closely into questions of dramatic fitness.

FARRAR AS JULIET

Song, jest, perfume and dances. Smiles, vows, love-laden glances All that spells or entrances In one charm blend As in fair dreams enfolden

Born of fantasy golden,

Sprites from fairyland olden. On me now bend. Forever would this gladness Shine on me brightly as now Would that never age or sadness Threw their shade o'er my brow!

Three records of this delicate waltz, with its ear-haunting melody, are offered for a selection. Mme. Tetrazzini gives it with much animation, its difficult requirements being met with a perfect ease and grace.

Mme. Eames, whose Iuliet is remembered with pleasure, sings the number with much charm; while a lower-priced rendition is contributed by Mme. Arral.

Iuliet is about to leave the room when Romeo enters, having ventured masked into the house of his enemy. He is much impressed with her beauty and grace, and contriving to speak with her, asks her to remain a moment. They sing the first of their duets, the opening portion of which is full of airy repartee. As the number progresses a mysterious attraction seems to draw the youth and maiden toward each other, and the duet becomes an impassioned love scene.

Tyball, a hot-headed member of the Capulet family, recogizes Romes through his mask, and threatens to kill him for his presumption in coming to the house of his exempes.

Capalet restrains Tybalt and the dancing recommences as the curtain falls.

SCENE-Capulet's Garden; Juliet's Apartments Abace

This balcony scene is taken almost literally from Shakespeare, about the only variation eing the entrance of Gregorie and the servants, which serves merely to divide the long love uet into two parts.

ACT III

SCENE I-The Cell of Friar Laurence

Romeo and Juliet meet by appointment in the Friar's cell to ask him to marry them. He at first protests but finally consents, hoping the union will bring the rival houses together in friendship. The marriage takes place, and Juliet returns home with her nurse.

SCENE II-A Street in Verona

Stephano enters, seeking his master. Observing the residence of Capulet, he decides to sing a song, thinking Romeo may still be lingering near the house. A fine rendition of this air has been given by Rita Fornia.

Chanson de Stephano (Page Song) By Rita Fornia, Soprano

(In French) 74211 12-inch. $1.50

This brilliant young soprano, who has just been engaged by the Victor, has made an especial success at the Metropolitan in this rôle, her fresh and youthful voice being admirably suited to the music of the Page, while in the recent revival of Romeo her singing of Stephano's air was pronounced one of the best features of the performance.

Gregorio appears, angry at being waked up, and scolds the noisy youth, finally recognizing him as the companion of Romeo on the previous night. They fight, but are interrupted by Mercutio and Tybalt, who begin to quarrel with Gregorio. Romeo enters and tries to act as peacemaker, hut is insulted and forced to fight, killing Tybalt. The action comes to the ears of the Duke of Verona, who happens to be passing with his suite, and he banishes Romeo from the kingdom. The unhappy youth yields to the decree, but secretly vows to see Juliet again. ACT IV

SCENE-Juliet's Room

Romeo has made his way into Capulet's house at imminent risk of death, and has penetrated to the room of his bride. As the curtain rises he is taking leave of her, and in another exquisite duet she begs him not to go. He finally departs after a tender farewell, just as Capulet and Friar Laurence enter to tell her that it was Tubalt's dying wish that she should marry Paris. Left alone with the good priest she tells him she will die rather than be separated from Romeo.

The Friar tells her to have patience, as he has a plan by which they are to be reunited. He then gives Juliet a potion, commanding her to drink it when her marriage with Paris seems imminent, and tells her she will go into a death-like trance. He continues:

FRIAR LAURENCE: LAURENCE:
Loud will they raise the sound of lamentation,
"Juliet is dead! Juliet is dead!" For so Shall they deem thee reposing. But
The angels above will reply, "She but sleeps!"
For two-and-forty hours thou shalt lie in death's seeming, And then, to life awaking as from a pleasant dreaming. From the ancient vault thou shalt haste away: Thy husband shall be there, in the night to watch o'er thee!

The good priest leaves her and shortly afterward, seeing her father and Paris approaching, she drinks the contents of the phial, and growing faint, apparently expires in Capulet's arms.

SCENE—The Tomb of Iuliet

The curtain rises, showing the silent vault of the Capulets, where Iuliet is lying on the bier still in her trance. Romeo, who has failed to receive Friar Laurence's message, and believes Juliet is dead. now forces the door with an iron bar and enters.

He sees his bride apparently dead, and flings himself on her body. CONSTANTING AS ROMEO After a mournful air in which he bids her farewell, he drinks poison, but is soon startled to see signs of life in the body of Juliet. Forgetting the poison he had taken, he embraces her joyfully and they sing their final duet:

Romeo:
TULIET:

Tones that I lov'd, soft falling!

ROMEO:
   'Tis I! Romeo—thine own—
Who thy slumbers have stirr'd.
                                                                          ROMEO AND JULIET:

   Thee, my bride, unto love
And the fair world recalling!

                                                                             Holy and pure, till our life shall end.
    Suddenly remembering the fatal draught, Romeo cries out in horror:
                                                                             Now, happy dagger, behold thy sheath!
(She stabs herself. With a supreme effort Romeo half raises himself to prevent her.)
ROMEO:

   I drank of this draught!

   Ah! thou churl
To drink all!
                              No friendly drop thou'st left me,

SAMSON ET DALILA

(Sahm'-sahn' ay Dah'-lee-lah')

SAMSON AND DELILAH

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Ferdinand Lemaire; music by Camille Saint-Saëns (Sahn'-Sahnz'). First production at Weimar, under Liszt, December 2, 1877. In France at Rouen, 1890. Performed at Covent Garden, in concert form, September 25, 1893. First American production February, 1895, with Tamagno and Mantelli (one performance only). Revived by Oscar Hammerstein, November 13, 1908.

Time and Place: 1150 B. C.: Gaza in Palestine.

Camille Saint-Saëns has been for two generations the foremost figure in music in France. Poet, astronomer, traveler, excelling in every branch of the art of music, he is r, excelling in every branch of the art of music, he is undoubtedly the most versatile musician of our time. He has held a commanding position on the concert stage since 1846, when at the age of ten he gave a concert in Paris. On October 15, 1906, he played one of his own concertors at the Philharmonic concert in Berlin. Sixty years before the public! In all the history of music there is no more wonderful career than that of the composer of Samson, who a few years ago visited America for the first time.

TAMAGNO AS SAMSON

Samson et Dalila may be called a biblical opera, almost an oratorio, and the polished beauty and grace of this great composition has caused it to be pronounced Saint-Saëns' masterpiece. The religious and militant flavor of the Jewish nation is finely expressed in the score, and the exquisite love music is more or less familiar by its frequent performance on the concert stage.

ACT I

SCENE-A Public Square in Gaza

The opera has no overture. The first scene shows a square in the city of Gaza, where a crowd of Hebrem are lamenting their misfortunes, telling of the destruction of their cities and the profanation of their altars by the Gentiles.

Samson speaks to the people and bids them take courage.

Samson (coming out from the throng):
Let us pause, O my brothers,
And bless the holy name of the God of our fathers!

For now the hour is here when pardon shall be spoken.

Yes, a voice in my heart is the token.
'Tis the voice of the Lord, who by my mouth thus speaketh.

Our prayers to him have risen, And liberty is ours. Brothers! we'll break from bondage! Our altars raise once more

To our God, as before!

The Hebrews are cheered by Samson's words, but their mood soon changes when a number of Philistines enter and revile them. A fight occurs, and Samson wounds Abimelech. The High Priest of Dagon comes out of the Temple and curses Samson.

From the Temple now comes Delilah, followed by the Priestesses of Dagon, bearing flowers and singing of opring. Delilah speaks to Samson and invites him to the valley where she dwells. He prays or strength to resist her fascinations, but in spite of himself he is forced to look at her as he dances with the maidens. As the young girls dance Delilah sings to Samson the lovely Song of Spring.

Printemps qui commence (Delilah's Song of Spring) By Gerville-Réache, Contralto (In French) 88244 12-inch. $3.00

DELILAH: Spring voices are singing, Bright hope they are bringing, All hearts making glad. And gone sorrow's traces, The soft air effaces All days that are sad. The earth glad and beaming, With freshness is teeming.

In vain all my beauty: I weep my poor fate! (She gazes fondly at Samson.) When night is descending, With love all unending, Bewailing my fate,
For him will I wait.
Till fond love returning, In his bosom burning

May enforce his return!

Samson shows by his hesitation and troubled bearing that Delilah has shaken his esolutions, and as the curtain falls he is gazing at her, fascinated.

ACT II SCENE—Delilah's Home in the Valley of Soreck

Delilah. richly attired, is awaiting the coming of Samson, and muses on her coming riumph over his affections, and the plot to secure his downfall. In a fine air she calls on Love to aid her.

Amour viens aider (Love, Lend Me Thy Might)
By Louise Homer, Contralto (In French) 88 (In French) 88201 12-inch, $3.00

O Love! in my weakness give power!
Poison Samson's brave heart for me!
'Neath my soft sway may he be vanquished;
Tomorrow let him captive be!
Ev'ry thought of me he would banish,
And from his tribe he would swerve,

Could he only drive out the passion
That remembrance doth now preserve.
But he is under my dominion;
In vain his people may entreat.
'Tis I alone that can hold him—
I'll have him captive at my feet!

After a scene between Delilah and Dagon, who urges her not to fail in her purpose, comson arrives, impelled by a power he cannot resist.

Delilah greets him tenderly, and when he bitterly reproaches himself for his weakness, he sings that wonderfully beautiful song of love and passion.

This lovely air of Delilah, perhaps the most beautiful contralto air ever written, and the most familiar of the numbers in the opera, is in the repertoire of almost every contralto.

This quotation from the effective translation by Nathan Haskell Dole is from the Schirmer libretts (Copyright 1892, G. Schirmer.)

DELILAH:

My heart at thy sweet voice opens wide like the flower Which the morn's kisses waken!

But, that I may rejoice, that my tears no more shower, Tell thy love still unshaken!

O, say thou wilt not now leave Delilah again!

Repeat thine accents tender, ev'ry passionate vow,

O thou dearest of men!

Four records of this well-known air are listed here. Mme. Schumann-Heink sings it in a manner which displays her rich, melodious contralto, and she delivers the lovely music with warmth and feeling; while it is sung by Mme. Homer with an intensity of sentiment and a beauty almost incomparable. Mme. Gerville-Réache's performance of Delilah was one of the sensations of the late Hammerstein season, her rendition of Delilah's song being particularly admired: while a record in English is contributed by Miss Baker.

Delilah now asks that Samson confide to her the secret plans of the Hebrews, and when he refuses she calls the Philistines, who are concealed, and Samson is overpowered.

ACT III

SCENE I-A Prison at Gaza

Samson is shown in chains, blinded and shorn of his hair. As he slowly and painfully pushes a heavy mill which is grinding corn, he calls on Heaven to forgive his offence.

A file of guards enter and conduct him to the Temple.

SCENE II—A Magnificent Hall in the Temple of Dagon

The High Priests and Philistines, with Delilah and the Philistine maidens, are rejoicing over the downfall of their enemies. The music of the opening chorus and the Bachanal has been given here in a fine record by a famous Spanish band.

SEMIRAMIDE

TRAGIC OPERA IN TWO ACTS

Text by Rossi; music by Gioachino Antonio Rossini. It is founded on Voltaire's agedy Semiramis. First produced at the Fenice Theatre, Venice, February 3, 1823; in ondon at the King's Theatre, July 15, 1824. In French, as Semiramis, it appeared in Paris, uly 9, 1860. First American production occurred in New York, April 25, 1826. Some otable American revivals were in 1855 with Grissi and Vestvalli; in 1890 with Adelina atti as Semiramide; and in 1894 with Melba and Scalchi.

GRISI AS SEMIRAMIDE

Cast of Characters

Semiramide is perhaps the finest of Rossini's serious operas, but although it was a great success in its day, its splendid overture and the brilliant Bel raggio are about the only reminders of it which remain.

The story is based on the classic subject of the murder of Agamemnon by his wife, called Semiramis in the Babylonian version. It is a work which the composer completed in the astonishingly short time of one month, but which shows his art at its ripest.

The action takes place in Babylon; Semiramide, the Queen, assisted by her lover Assur, has murdered her husband, King Ninus, who, in the second act, rises in spirit from the tomb and prophesies the Queen's downfall.

The overture opens with an unusually brilliant introduction, followed by a beautiful chorale for brass which is one of the most admired portions of the work. The familiar melody which forms the principal theme of the overture then appears as a clarinet passage. It begins:

The finale is rather long drawn out for modern ears, but is a fine example of its kind, and the overture is a most showy one, very popular on band and orchestra programs. Three splendid records of this famous number are presented here, and a comparison of the playing of these two great organizations is most interesting.

The Bel raggio, a favorite cavatina with all prima donnas, and a brilliant and imposing air, occurs in the first act. The scene shows the Temple of Belus, where a religious festival is in progress. Semiramide is about to announce an heir to the throne and has secretly determined to elect Ansaces, a young warrior, with whom she has fallen in love, unaware that he is in reality her own son.

Bids dark sorrow hence away,
And calls down joy from above,
Awhile in this breast to stay.
Arsaces will return!

Ah, bright smiles the morn
When dark waves of sorrow
Like some will do cean sink and depart!

ALBONI AS ARSACES

FROM HARPER'S WEEKLY

TAMBURINI AS ASSUR

Rossini, who objected to the ornamentation of his music by famous singers, is said to have written this air in so elaborate a fashion as to make further additions impossible. But even as left by Rossini, Bel raggio is not sufficiently elaborate to show the skill of a Sembrich, and the additions with which the diva has embellished it not only make it more dazzling, but belong also to the true spirit of the air. Thus the inspiring declamatory passages, with their brilliant runs, receive a lavish addition of the singer's splendid high notes, notably the high B on the alfin perme brillo, and the astonishing arpeggio up to C sharp on the dal mio pensier which follows. The ensuing cantabile is sung with all the legato and grace which it requires, its principal figure being also additionally embellished.

BRUNNHILDE (Broon-hil'-dah)	. Mezzo-Soprano

There is little of tragedy and much of lightness and the joy of youth and love in this nost beautiful of the Ring Cycle, which tells of the young Siegfried,—impetuous, brave, joy-ul and handsome; and Brünnhilde, the god-like maid—nselfish, lovely, innocent, who finds she is but a woman fter all.

After Sieglinde had been saved from the wrath of Wotan y Brünnhilde (related in the last part of Walküre), she vanders through the forest and dies in giving birth to the hild Siegfried, who is found and brought up by Mime, the Viblung.

In the first two acts of Siegfried the hero is shown in is forest home, where he forges the sword with which he lays the dragon. Having accidentally tasted the dragon's lood, he becomes able to understand the language of the irds, which tells him of Brünnhilde, the fair maiden who leeps on the fire-encircled rock. He follows the guidance of one of the birds, cuts through the spear of Wotan, who endeavors to stop him, and penetrates the flames. On the top of the rock he beholds the sleeping Valkyrie covered with her shield. He removes the armor, and Brünnhilde lies before him in soft, womanly garments. She is the first woman he has ever seen, and he kneels down and kisses her long and fervently. He then starts up in alarm; Brünnhilde has opened her eyes. He looks at her in wonder, and both remain for some time gazing at each other. She recognizes him as Siegfried, and hails him as the hero who is to save the world. This part of the trilogy ends in a splendid duet.

ACT I

SCENE-A Forest. At One Side a Cave

Mime, the Niblung, brother of Alberic, found Sieglinde in the forest after she had escaped from Wotan, and brought up her child, knowing that it was Siegfried, who was destined to kill Fafner and regain the Ring. The opera opens with an air by Mime, who is discovered at the anvil in his forest smithy trying to forge a sword for Siegfried.

REISS AS MIME

Zwangvolle Plage! (Heartbreaking Bondage)

By Albert Reiss, Tenor

(In German) 74235 12-inch, $1.50

Mr. Reiss' wonderful character study of Mime, the dwarf, has been one of the most impressive features of the Metropolitan performances during the past few years. His impersonation gains each year in the sardonic and malignant side of Mime's nature, but is always amusing, nevertheless. The artist's portrayal, dramatically and vocally, leaves nothing to be desired, and in the episodes where the dwarf is most abject and fawningly malicious he is superb.

Siegfried, in forest dress, with a horn around his neck, bursts impetuously from the woods. He is driving a great bear and urges it with merry roughness towards Mime, who drops the sword in terror and hides behind the forge. Taking pity on the frightened dwarf, Siegfried drives the bear back into the wood, and seeing the sword, breaks it over the anvil, as he has broken all of the others. He questions Mime about his childhood, and the dwarf tells him reluctantly about his mother and about the sword his father had broken in his last fight. Siegfried demands that Mime shall mend his father's sword without delay, and goes back into the forest.

ED BY ECHIER

SIEGFRIED, MIME AND THE BEAR-ACT I

Wotan now enters and in answer to Mime's questions says he is the Wanderer, and speaks to Mime of the sword, telling him that only he who knows no fear will be able to forge the broken weapon. After the Wanderer has departed, Siegfried returns, and Mime, who is now beginning to be afraid of the youth, tells him that it was his mother's wish that he should learn fear. "What is this fear?" says Siegfried, and Mime attemps to describe it.

MIME AT THE ANVIL-ACT I

Mime: Feltest thou ne'er in forest dark,
At gloaming hour in gloomy spots,
Feltest thou then, no grisly gruesomeness grow o'er thy fancy?
Balefullest shudders shake thy whole body,
All thy senses sink and forsake thee,
In thy breast bursting and big
Beat thy hammering heart?

Siegfried regretfully admits that he has never felt any such sensation. Mimi, in despair, then tells him of the Dragon which dwells near by. Siegfried eagerly asks Mime to conduct him hither, but says he must have his sword mended first, and, when Mime refuses, he forges it himself. When it is finished, to try the blade, he strikes the anvil a mighty blow and splits it in half, while Mime falls on the ground in extreme terror. Siegfried brandishes the sword and shouts with glee as the curtain falls.

ACT II

SCENE—The Dragon's Cave in the Forest

Fafner, who has changed himself into a dragon, the better to guard his gold, dwells within a cave, keeping constant watch. Alberic is spying near by, hoping to regain the treasure by killing the hero whom he knows will overcome the Dragon. The Wanderer enters and warns Alberic of the approach of Siegfried.

Alberic wakes the Dragon and offers to save its life in return for the Ring. Fafner contemptuously refuses, and makes light of the hero's prowess. Wotan departs, laughing at the discomfited Alberic, who hides as Siegfried and Mime approach. The latter is still trying to terrorize Siegfried with awful descriptions of the Dragon, but Siegfried laughs at him and finally drives him away.

The young hero, left alone, sits down under a tree and meditates about his mother, whom he pictures as gentle and beautiful. His dreaming is ended by the song of the birds, and he regrets that he cannot understand their language. He answers their song with a blast of his horn, which disturbs Fafner and the Dragon utters an awful roar, which, however, only makes the youth laugh. The Dragon rushes upon him, but Siegfried jumps aside and buries his faithful sword in the reptile's heart.

Having accidentally tasted of the Dragon's blood by carrying his stained hand to his lips, he finds to his astonishment that he is able to understand the song of the bird, which tells him to go into the cave and secure the Ring. Siegfried thanks the warbler and goes into the cavern. Mime comes back and, seeing the dead Fafner, is about to enter the cave when Alberic stops him and a heated argument occurs. This scene has been given for the Victor by two celebrated impersonators of these rôles, Goritz and Reiss.

Unto thee I'll call For Siegfried to come: With his carving sword ALBERIC: And yet to its lord Shall it alone be delivered! (He disappears in the cleft.) The caustic boy Shall crush thee, brother of mine!

They hide themselves as Siegfried comes from the cave with the Ring, the value of which he does not yet comprehend. The bird's voice is again heard explaining its history, and revealing the intended treachery of Mime. When the dwarf approaches, Siegfried is able, by the magic of the Ring to read his thoughts. Horrified to learn that Mime is planning to kill him, he strikes down the dwarf and throws his corpse in the cave, rolling the body of the Dragon before the entrance.

Wearying of his adventures Siegfried reclines under the tree and asks the bird to sing again. This time the songster reveals to him that Britnnhilde lies sleeping, waiting for the hero who is able to reach the fire-encircled spot.

THE BIRD:

Hey! Siegfried has slain now the sinister dwarf!

I wot for him now a glorious wife.

In guarded fastness she sleeps,
Fire doth emborder the spot:
O'erstepped he the blaze.
Waked he the bride.
Brünnhilde then would be his!
SIEGFREID (Idrating impetuous); to his feet):
O lovely song! Sweetest delight!
How burns its sense my suffering breast!
But once more say to me, lovely singer,—
May I the furnace then break through?
And waken the marveious bride?
The Bird:
The bride is won.
Brünnhilde awaked by faint-heart ne'er:

W.M.

But by him who knows not fear.

He laughs with delight, saying, "Why, this stupid lad who knows not fear,—it is 1!"
and follows the bird, who flies ahead to guide him to Brünnhilde's fiery couch.

ACT III

SCENE-A Wild Region at the Foot of a Rocky Mountain

The act opens with a long scene between Erda and Wotan. The god summons his earth goddess wife and tries to consult her regarding the coming deliverance of the world through Siegfried and Brümnhilde. The goddess, however, is confused and bewildered by Wotan's eager questions and fails to give counsel, asking only to be allowed to return to her sleep. Wotan, wearying of the struggle against fate, renounces his sway over the world, realizing that the era of love must supplant the rule of the gods.

Siegfried approaches and Wotan attempts to bar his way as a final trial of his courage. The youth, however, makes short work of the weary god, shatters his spear at a single stroke, and continues on his way singing:

SIEGFRIED:

As the hero plunges fearlessly through the fire the flames gradually abate, and when he reaches the sleeping Brünnhilde they die out completely. Siegfried approaches the unconscious maiden with awe and removes her helmet. He is speechless with admiration, and naively asks if the strange emotion which he feels can be fear. Finally, when he presses an ardent kiss on her lips she awakes and greets him joyfully as the hero Siegfried who is to save the world. After a long scene in which Siegfried's ardent wooing is gently repressed by Brünnhilde, he finally seizes her in his arms. Frightened, she repulses him, crying:

Woe's me! Woe's me! Woe for the shame, the shunless disgrace! My wak'ning hero deals me this wound!

The scene is laid in a Swiss village.

How our grandfathers and grandmothers doted on this fine old opera by Bellini! In he '30's it was a novelty by a young and gifted composer; by 1850 it was part of every pera season and shone through a halo of great casts—Malibran, Pasta, Jenny Lind, Gerster, Lampanini, Grisi—and in the '60's and '70's it continued to be popular. Then came the Wagnerian era, and the pretty little pastoral work was all but forgotten.

Now, however, Italian opera of the old-fashioned kind has begun to be appreciated once more, and even the Wagnerites admit that there may be some pleasure in witnessing this charming little opera.

ACT I

SCENE—A Village Green

The peasants are making merry in honor of the marriage of Amina and Eloino. Lisa, he hostess of the inn, enters and gives way to bitter reflections. She also loves Eloino, and her jealousy finds expression in a melodious air. Sounds So Iouful. Alessio, a villager who fancies Lisa, tries to console her, but she repulses him. Amina and her friends enter followed soon after by Elvino, and the marriage contract is signed. Elvino places the ring on his bride's finger, and they sing a charming duet. Take Now This Ring.

Two renditions of this number, at widely varying prices, are given here, the latter including only Elvino's solo at the beginning of the duet. The words are not given, being merely a succession of flowery phrases to which Bellini has written his delightful melodies.

The nuptial celebration is interrupted by the sound of horses' hoofs, and a handsome and distinguished stranger enters, inquires the way to the castle, and learning that it is some distance, decides to remain at the inn. He looks around him, appearing to recognize the scene, and sings his fine air, Vi ravviso.

COUNT:
As I view the scene, how familiar that millstream, you fountain, those meadows! Oh remembrance of scenes long vanish'd, Soft enchantment long lost and banish'd.

Where my childhood serenely glided, Where the joyous moments flew; Oh how peaceful have ye abided, While those days nought can renew!

Two versions of this noble air are given here—one by Scotti, whose Rudolph is always a fine impersonation; and a lower-priced rendition by de Segurola, who sang the character at the Manhattan when the opera was revived for Tetrazzini.

The stranger inquires the reason for the festivities, and is presented to the pretty bride, in whom he is much interested. He tells the peasants that in his childhood he lived with the lord of the castle, and now brings news of the lord's only son, who disappeared some years since.

Amina's mother, Teresa, now says that as night is falling they must go within, as the phantom may appear. The stranger is told that a spectre has been often seen of late, and he scoffs at the tale, but the peasants, in an effective chorus, describe the appearance of the CHORUS: Ah, no such folly in our relation; We all have seen it, in very truth. We all have seen it, in very truth.

And wheresoever its pathway falleth
A hideous silence all things appalleth;

A mute true witness of its fell power.

Far from the ghost her dark wing wheels. RUDOLPH:

Tis fright for youth. I will discover What hidden mystery your tale conceals.

The stranger now desires to retire and is shown to his room. Amina and Elvino remain, and the latter reproaches his bride for her interest in the guest; but at the sight of her team he repents his suspicions, and the act closes with a duet by the reconciled lovers.

ACT II

SCENE-The Apartment of the Stranger

The guest muses that he might have done worse than stop at this little inn—the people are courteous, the women pretty, and the accommodations good. List enters and asks if he is comfortable, calling him "my lord," the villagers having suspected that he is the Count Rudolph.

The Count, although somewhat annoyed that his identity is revealed, takes it goodnaturedly, and even flirts a little with the buxom landlady. She coyly runs away, dropping her veil as she does so.

Amina now appears at the window, walking in her sleep. She unlatches the casement and steps into the room, saying in her sleep, "Elvino, dost thou remain jealous? I love but hee." The Count is at first astonished, but soon sees that the young girl is asleep. Just here Lisa peeps into the room, and seeing Amina, runs off scandalized. Amina, in her fream, again goes through the marriage ceremony, and entrests Eloino to believe that she oves him, finally throwing herself on the bed in a deep sleep. The Count is somewhat puzzled at the situation, and finally deciding to leave the young girl in possession of the room, goes out by the window.

Eloino and the villagers, who have been summoned by Lisa, now enter and are astonished to see Amina asleep in the Count's room. She wakes at the noise, bewildered, and runs to Eloino, who repulses her roughly. She is met with cold looks on every hand, and sinks down in despair, crying bitterly. Rousing herself, she begins the duet, D'an sension.

ACT III

SCENE I-A Shady Valley near the Cestle

Aming and Tesess enter on their way to the castle to plead with the Count to clear the girl's good name. Seeing Elizas, Aming makes another effort to convince him she is still true, but he reproaches her bitterly, takes the ring from her finger, and rushes away.

SCENE II—A Street in the Village. Teresa's mill on the left

The villagers enter and inform Lies that Elvino has transferred his affections to her. He enters and confirms the good news, and they go toward the church. The Count stops them, and assures Elvino that Amins is the victim of a dreadful misunderstanding. Elvino refuses to listen to him and bids Lies follow him to the church, but they are again interrupted by Teress, who has learned of the proposed marriage, and now shows Lies's well which she had found is the Count's room. "Leceived again," cries Elvino, and asses if any of these women are to be trusted.

Radolph assures him again that Amina is guiltless, and Elvino desperately says. "But where is the proof?" "There," cries the Count, successly pointing to Amina, who in her night dress comes from a window in the mill roof, carrying a samp. All water, her breatmessiy, fearing to wake her lest site fall. The first of the two lovely airs for Amine in this act now occurs.

Ah! non credea mirarti (Could I Believe)

By Luisa Tetrazzini, Soprano (In Italian) 88305 12-inch, $3.00 By Graziella Pareto, Soprano (In Italian) 76003 12-inch, 2.00

Perhaps the most effective part of the opera lies in this sleep-walking scene, when Amina, in a state of somnambulism, walks along the roof of the building, and finally climbs down to the ground. This act establishes her innocence, and clears up a mystery which had caused her good character to be doubted.

Ahl non credea is sung by the sleeper as she descends from her dangerous position, while her lover and friends watch in terror, fearing to awaken her. It opens with a beautiful cantabile in the key of A minor, its pathos being fully in keeping with the plight of Amina, who, being discarded by her lover and doubted by her friends, weeps over her short-lived love and happiness. At the words "Potrio novel vigore," the pathetic note gives place to a more ardent emotion, as hope is mingled with her despair.

Regarding the flowers which her lover had given her, and which are now faded, she exclaims:

AMINA:

Ah! must ye fade, sweet flowers, Forsaken by sunlight and showers, As transient as lover's emotion That lives and withers in one short day!

These tears might yet restore ye,
But estranged devotion
No mourner's tears have power to stay!

—From the Ditson Edition.

But tho' no sunshine o'er ve.

The singer's aim has been to illustrate the simple charm of the character of Amina and the pathos of the scene, rather than exhibit brilliance of ornament. The cadenza at the close, although typical of Tetrazzini's marvelous powers of execution, is well subordinated to the character of the song, and pleases as much by its delicate beauty as by its amazing technical perfection.

Elvino can restrain himself no longer, and rushes to Amina, who wakes, and seeing Elvino on his knees before her, utters a cry of delight and falls in his arms.

The opera then closes with the joyous, bird-like air, Ah I non giunge, which is a fitting close to this charming work, with its graceful and tender music and peaceful pastoral scenes. In Amina, Mme. Tetrazzini finds a most congenial rôle, and for her sake alone Sonnambula would always be worth hearing. She has the voice, style and technical skill to make such music as this captivating; while Sembrich's impersonation of the ingenuous village beauty, who is all liveliness and joy, leaves nothing to be desired. Hers is a graceful and natural impersonation, and the delightful sleep-walking scene is given with a delicacy which is admirable.

Offenbach's delightful and fantastic opéra comique, first produced at Paris in 1881, has sen a success wherever performed, although it was tabooed in Germany for many years ter the disastrous fire at the Ring Theatre in Berlin, which occurred during the presentant of the opera at that house. Its American successes are familiar to opera-goers, specially the brilliant and altogether admirable Hammerstein production, which drew large ad delighted audiences for several years.

THE PROLOGUE

This introductory scene occurs in Nuremberg at Luther's tavern, a popular student resort. Hoffman, the favorite of all, enters with his friend Nicholas and joins in the merrymaking. In response to calls for a song. Hoffman sings the Ballad of Klein-Zach, and then volunteers to relate his three love affairs. This proposal is greeted with enthusiasm, and as Hoffman begins by saying "The name of my first was Olympia," the cur-tain falls. When it rises, the first tale of Hoffman is seen in actual performance.

ACT I

Spalanzani, a wealthy man with a mania for automatons, has perfected a marvelous mechanical figure of a young girl which he calls Olympia, pretending it is his daughter. Hoffman and Nicholas call upon him, and during Spalanzani's absence, Hoffman discovers Olympia, and falls in love at sight. Unable to take his eyes from the dolllike perfection of the figure, he expresses his infatuation in a beautiful air.

DALMORES AS HOFFMAN

Dalmores makes a great success in the part of Hoffman. This rôle calls for a handsome appearance, a gallant bearing, and enduring vocal powers, and this tenor fills these requirements admirably. He sings this beautiful air with graceful fluency and much warmth of tone.

Nicholas tries in vain to prevent his friend from making a fool of himself, but Hoffman, owing to the magic glasses Spalanzani has induced him to wear, sees only a lovely woman instead of an automaton; but is undeceived when he dances with the figure and she falls to pieces before his astonished eves.

ACT II

This adventure concerns the Lady Giulietta, who resides in Venice. Among her many friends are Hermann and Nathanael, and the latter, fearing the power of the lovely coquette, tries to get Hermann away, but he insists that he is proof against her fascinations. Depertute, the real lover of the lady, hearing this boast, induces Giulietta to try her arts on the young man. She succeeds, and Hoffman, madly in love, challenges Giulietta's protector, Schlemil, and kills him in a duel. Hoffman rushes back to his charmer's residence only to find that she has fled with her chosen admirer.

This second tale introduces that lovely gem, the Barcarolle, with its languorous, fascinating rhythm and charming melody.

and its dreamy melancholy suggests the calm of a perfect moonlight night. Mr. Scotti and Miss Farrar have sung it delightfully, their voices blending in the lovely serenade with charming effect. The instrumental renditions are exquisitely played with a graceful lightsomeness wholly pleasing, while those who prefer a vocal record at a popular price will find the rendition by the Wheelers a very fine one.

Beauteous night, O night of love, Smile thou on our enchantment; Radiant night, with stars above, O beauteous night of love! Sweet zephyrs aglow, O beauteous night of love! Shed on us thy caresses— Night of love, O night of love! Fleeting time doth ne'er return But bears on wings our dreaming.

ACT III

The third adventure of Hoffman introduces us to an humble German home where Antonia, a young singer, has become the victim of consumption. She is forbidden to sing by her father, but a Dr. Miracle, who is the secret enemy of the family, Svengali-like, urges her on, and Hoffman, who knows nothing of the poor girl's affliction, sees her literally sing herself to death, and she dies in his arms.

THE EPILOGUE

The epilogue shows again the tavern of the prologue, where Hoffman is apparently just concluding his third tale. Having tried three kinds of love—the love that is inspired by mere beauty, the sensuous love, and the affection that springs from the heart—he says he has learned his lesson, and will henceforth devote himself to art, the only mistress who will prove faithful. He bids farewell to another of his flames, Stella, an opera singer, and as the curtain falls is left alone, dreaming, while the Muse appears and bids him follow her.

THE STORY

There are a great many people who love to go to the era, but who do not care for Wagner's Ring Operas, with eir Teutonic myths and legends, and their long and somenes undeniably tedious scenes. But Tannhäuser, with its etry, romance and passion, and above all its characters, no are real human beings and not mysterious mythological ds. goddesses and heroes, appeals strongly to these opera-

To show the wonderful vogue of this work, it is estiated that more than one thousand performances of the era take place annually throughout the world.

The story is quite familiar, but the chief events will be ted here in brief. It tells of conflict between two kinds love: true love of the highest human kind as distinished from mere sensuous passion; and relates how the zher and purer love triumphed in the end.

Tannhäuser, a knight and minstrel, in an evil moment, ccumbs to the wiles of Venus and dwells for a year in a Venusberg. Tiring of these monotonous delights, he ives the goddess and returns to his home, where he is FIRST PROGRAM OF TANNHAUSER, 1845 armly received and told that the fair Elizabeth, niece of Landgrave, still mourns for him. He is urged to compete in the Tournament of Song t far distant, the prize being the hand of Elizabeth. The theme of the contest is The Nature Love, and when Tannhäuser's turn arrives the evil influence of the Venusberg is appant when he delivers a wild and profane eulogy of passion. Outraged by this insult the instrels draw their swords to slay him. Coming to his senses, too late, he repents, and hen a company of Pilgrims pass on their way to Rome, he joins them to seek pardon for his In the last act we see Elizabeth, weary and worn, supported by the noble Wolfram, who also loves her, watching for the Pilgrims to return, but Tannhäuser is not among them. Elizabeth is overcome with disappointment and feebly returns to her home.

Tannhäuser now appears, in a wretched plight, on his way to re-enter the Hill of Venus. He tells Wolfram that he appealed to the Pope for pardon, but was told that his redemption was as impossible as that the Pope's staff should put forth leaves. Wolfram's remonstrances are in vain, and Tannhäuser is about to invoke the goddess, when a chant is heard and he Pilgrims appear, announcing that the Pope's staff had blossomed as a sign that the sinner was forgiven. Tannhäuser kneels in prayer as the mourners pass with the body of Elizabeth, who, overcome by her bitter disappointment, had suddenly passed away.

This overture, with its sombre opening chorus, its weird music of the Venus Mount, and the final return of the penitents, when the chant is accompanied by a striking variation for clarinets, is one of the greatest works of Wagner. It has become quite familiar by its frequent repetitions in orchestra and military band concerts, and no concert piece is more admired.

The overture depicts the struggle between good and evil, and as Liszt has said, is a poem on the same subject as the opera and equally comprehensive.

The sombre religious motive appears first:

beginning softly and gradually swelling to a fortissimo. Then, as it is dying away, it is suddenly interrupted by the Venusberg motive:

with its rising tide of sensual sounds. This motive continues with terrible persistence, leading into Tannhäuser's hymn to Venus, after which the enchanting Venus motive returns and is developed with various changes. The tide now changes again and the majestic pilgrim theme predominates, finally reaching a climax in the final hymn of triumph.

ACT I

SCENE 1—The Hill of Venus—Nymphs, Sirens, Natads and Bacchantes dancing or reclining on mossy banks

The rising of the curtain discloses Venus reclining on a couch gazing tenderly at Tannhäuser, who is in a dejected attitude. The goddess asks him why he is melancholy, and he tells her he is weary of pleasure and would see the earth again. She reproves him fondly:

VENUS:

mourning.

What! art thou wav'ring? Why these vain lamentings?

Canst thou so soon weary of the blisses That love immortal hath cast 'round thee?

Can it be—dost thou now repent that thou'rt divine?

Hast thou soon forgotten how thy heart was

Till by me thou wert consoled? My minstrel, come, let not thy harp be silent: Recall the rapture—sing the praise and blis of love In tones that won for thee love's self to be thy slave!

Of love sing only, for her treasures are all thine!

VICTOR BOOK OF THE OPERA-WAGNER'S TANNHÄUSER

He rouses himself and sings the Praise to Venus, but it is a forced effort, and throwing down his harp he exclaims:

TANNHAUSER.

For earth I'm yearning, In thy soft chains with shame I'm burning, 'Tis freedom I must win or die— For freedom I can all defy: To strife or glory forth I go, Come life or death, come joy or woe, No more in bondage will I sigh! Oh queen, beloved goddess, let me fly!

Venus in a rage, then tells him to go if he will, but predicts his return and disappears vith all her train, while the scene instantly changes.

SCENE II—A Valley

Tannhäuser suddenly finds himself in a beautiful valley near the Wartburg. On the seaceful scene there break in the notes of a shepherd's pipe, and tinkling sheep bells ound from the heights. A company of Pilgrims pass, singing their chant, while the little hepherd pauses in his lay, and begs them utter a prayer for him in Rome.

A fine rendition of the music of this inspiring chorus is given here by Pryor's Band.

TANNHAUSER (kneeling in ecstasy):

Almighty, praise to Thee! Great are the marvels of Thy mercy! Oh, see my heart by guilt oppress'dI faint, I sink beneath the burden! Nor will I cease, nor will I rest, Till heav'nly mercy grant me pardon!

The Landgrave and several minstrels now enter, and seeing a knight kneeling in prayer, ccost him. They are amazed and delighted to see that it is the long lost Henry, their rother knight. They question him, but he gives evasive replies:

TANNHAUSER:

In strange and distant realms I wandered far, Where neither peace nor rest was ever found. Ask not! at enmity I am with none; We meet as friends—let me in peace depart!

The Knights urge him to return with them, and speak the name of Elizabeth. Tannhäuser joyfully exclaims:

TANNHAUSER.

Elizabeth! oh, Heaven! That name ador'd once more I hear!

Wolfram then tells him that he is beloved by the Land-grave's fair niece.

WOLFRAM:

When for the palm in song we were contending, And oft thy cond'ring strain the wreath had won, Our songs anon thy victory, suspending, One glorious prize was won by thee alone! Was't magic, or a pow'r divine. That wrought thro' thee the wondrous sign, Thy harp and song in blissful hour Enthrall'd of royal maids the flower! For ah, when thou in scorn hadst left us, Her heart was closed to joy and song, Of her sweet presence she bereft us, For thee in vain she wearied long. Oh! minstrel bold, return and rest thee, Once more awake the joyous strain! Cast off the burden that oppress'd thee, And her fair star will shine again!

RENAUD AS WOLFRAM

Tannhäuser joyfully consents to return and promises to compete in the forthcoming I cournament of Song, the prize for which is to be the hand of Elizabeth. The remainder of the hunting train of the Landgrave now arrives, and as Tannhäuser is being greeted by his triends, the curtain falls.

When the company is seated, the Landgrave rises and makes the address of welcome.

I ANDCRAVE

Minstrels assembled here, I give you greeting, Full oft within these walls your lays have sounded:

In veiled wisdom, or in mirthful measures They ever gladdened every list ning heart. And though the sword of strife was loosed in battle.

Drawn to maintain our German land secure, Unto the harp be equal praise and glory! The tender graces of the homestead, The faith in what is good and gracious—For these you fought with word and voice; The meed of praise for this is due. Your then. strains inspiring. once more attune.

Now that the gallant minstrel hath returned, Who from our land too long was parted.

To what we owe his presence here amongst us In strange, mysterious darkness wrapp'd:

The magic power of song shall now reveal it, Therefore hear now the song you all shall sing.

Say, what is love? by what signs shall we know it?

Who so most nobly

this can tell,
Him shall the Princess give the prize.
He may demand the fairest guerdon:
I vouch that whatsoe'er he ask is granted.

Up, then, arouse ye-sing, oh, gallant minstrels!

Attune your harps to love—great is the prize. Ere ve begin, let all receive our thanks!

Four pages, who have drawn lots from a gold cup, now announce that Wolfram is to begin the contest. He rises and delivers his Eulogy of Love.

Wolfram's Ansprache (Wolfram's Eulogy of Love)

By Otto Goritz, Baritone

(In German) 74215 12-inch. $1.50

The singer gives his conception of love, which he describes as pure and ethereal, comparing it to a crystal spring.

WOLFRAM:

Gazing around upon this fair assembly, How doth the heart expand to see the scene! These gallant heroes, valiant, wise and gentle— A stately forest soaring fresh and green. And blooming by their side in sweet perfec-

I see a wreath of dames and maidens fair; Their blended glories dazzle the beholder— My song is mute before this vision rare! I raised my eyes to one whose starry splendor In this bright heaven with mild effulgence heams.

And gazing on that pure and tender radiance,

My heart was sunk in prayerful holy dreams. And lo! the source of all delights and power Was then unto my listening soul revealed, From whose unfathomed depths all joy doth shower

The tender balm in which all grief is healed. Oh, may I never dim its limpid waters, Or rashly trouble them with wild desires! I worship thee kneeling, with soul devoted: To live and die for thee my heart aspires!

I know not if these feeble words can render What I have felt of love both true and tender.

Tannhäuser, who has shown signs of impatience during this recital, now jumps to his feet, flushed and eager, while the company looks at him in astonishment.

TANNHAUSER:

Oh, minstrel, if 'tis thus thou singest. Thou ne'er hast known or tasted love! If thou desire an unapproached perfection— Behold the stars—adore their bright reflec-

They were not made to be belov'd:

(Ardently) But what can yield to soft caresses, And, fram'd with me in mortal mould Gentle persuasion's rule confesses.

And in these arms I may unfold—
This is for joy, and knows no measure, For love's fulfillment is its pleasure!

At this definition of love, strange for such an occasion, Biterolf, a hotheaded Knight, rises and challenges Tannhäuser, who excitedly retorts that such a grim wolf as Biterolf can know nothing of the delights of love! He then, in wild exultation, sings his blasphemous Praise of Venus, saying

TANNHAUSER: ANNHAUSER:
Dull mortals, who of love have never tasted
Go forth! Venus alone can show ye love!

At this the Knights rush toward him with drawn swords, exclaiming:

Knights: e all have heard,

His mouth hath confess'd That he hath shared the joys of Hell,

In Venus' dark abode that dwell, Disown him—curse him—banish him! Or let his traitor life-blood flow! Elizabeth throws herself in front of the unhappy Tannhäuser, who stands as if in a trance. She begs for his life in a touching plea.

ELIZABETH:

Away from him! 'Tis not for you to judge him!

Shame on you! He is one against you all!

I pray for him—spare him, oh, I implore ye!
Let not the hope of pardon be denied!

To life renew'd his sinking faith restore ye.
Think that for him, too, once the Saviour died!

Oh, let a spotless maid your grace implore!
Let Heav'n declare through me what is its will—

The erring mortal, who hath fallen
Within the weary toils of sin,
How dare ye close the heav'nly portal!
On me, a maiden young and tender,
Yon knight hath struck a cruel blow—
I, who so deeply, truly loved him,
Am hurl'd in dark abyss of woe!

The Landgrave pronounces judgment and declares Tannhäuser banished, suggesting that he join the band of Pilgrims about to start for Rome. In the distance is heard the Pilgrims chant, and the strains seem to bring the erring knight to his senses. He cries: "To Rome," and dashes from the hall.

SCENE—The Valley beneath the Wartburg—at one side a Shrine

As the curtain rises Elizabeth is seen kneeling at the shrine in prayer. Wolfram comes down by the path, and observing her, sadly notices her changed appearance, and muses of his own hopeless love. The song of the Pilgrims is heard in the distance, and Elizabeth eagerly rises and scans the approaching band. Tannhäuser is not among them, and the despairing maiden kneels again at the shrine, and offers her prayer to the Virgin.

ELIZABETH AT THE SHRINE

HOFFER

ELIZABETH:

Oh, blessed Virgin, hear my prayer!
Thou star of glory, look on me!
Here in the dust I bend before thee
Now from this earth, oh, set me free!
Let me, a maiden pure and white,
Enter into thy kingdom bright!
If vain desires and earthly longing
Have turn'd my heart from thee away,
The sinful hopes within me thronging,
Before thy blessed feet I lay;
I'll wrestle with the love I cherish'd,
Until in death its flame hath perish'd.
If of my sin thou will not shrive me,
Yet in this hour, oh grant thy aid!
Till thy eternal peace thou give me,
I vow to live and die thy maid.
And on thy bounty I will call,
That heav'nly grace on him may fall!

She remains for a long time in prayerful rapture; as she slowly rises she glances at Wolfram, who is approaching. She bids him by gesture not to speak to her, but he asks that he may escort her.

Wolfram:
O royal maid, shall I not guide thee homeward?

Elizabeth again expresses to him by gesture that she thanks him from her heart for his faithful love; her way, however, leads to Heaven, where she has a high purpose to fulfill; she wishes him not to accompany or follow her now. She slowly ascends the height and disappears gradually from view.

Wolfram gazes sadly after her for a long time, then seats himself at the foot of the hill, begins to play upon his harp, and finally sings the noble and beautiful ode to the evening star.

Wolfram:
Like Death's dark shadow, Night her gloom extendeth,
Her sable wing o'er all the vale she bendeth;
The soul that longs to tread yon path of light,
Yet dreads to pass the gate of Fear and Night,
I look on thee, oh, star in Heaven the fairest,
Thy gentle beam thro' trackless space thou bearest;
The hour of darkness is by thee made bright,
Thou lead'st us upward by pure light.
O ev'ning star; thy holy light
Was ne'er so welcome to my sight,
With glowing heart, that ne'er disclos'd;
Greet her when she in thy light reposed;
When parting from this vale a vision,
She rises to an angel's mission.
(He continues to play, his eyes raised to Heaven.)

Tannhäuser now appears, wearing a ragged Pilgrim's dress, his face pale and drawn, and supporting himself with difficulty by means of a staff. Wolfram greets him with emotion and learns that he is still unforgiven and has resolved to re-enter the Venusberg.

The unhappy Tannhäuser tells of the Pope's refusal of a pardon:

TANNHÄUSER:

Rome I gained at last; with tears imploring, I knelt before the rood in faith adoring. When daylight broke, the silv'ry bells were pealing;
Through vaulted roof a song divine was stealing;
A cry of joy breaks forth from thousand voices—
The hope of pardon ev'ry heart rejoices. I told what mad desires my soul had darkened,
By sinful earthly pleasure long enslav'd—
To me it seem'd that he in mercy harken'd—
A gracious word in dust and tears I crav'd. Then he who thus I prayed replied:
"If thou hast shared the joys of Hell If thou unholy flames hast nurs'd
That in the hill of Venus dwell,
Thou art forever more accurs'd!
And as this barren staff I hold
Ne'er will put forth a flower or leaf,
Thus shalt thou never more behold
Salvation or thy sin's relief!"

Wolfram, in horror, urges him to remain, but Tannhäuser refuses until Wolfram mentions the name of Elizabeth. The unhappy man, in sudden repentance, sinks to his knees, while in the distance is seen a company of minstrels bearing the body of Elizabeth, who has passed away. As the procession approaches, a company of Pilgrims enter and announce that the staff of the Pope had put forth green leaves as a sign that Tannhäuser was pardoned.

The Minstrel, supported by Wolfram, gazes on the saintly face of the dead Elizabeth, then expires, while the Pilgrims and minstrels with great emotion exclaim:

The Lord Himself now thy bondage hath riven—
Go, enter in with the blest in His Heaven!

Scene and Period: Rome, June, 1800.

The Story

Tosca is Puccini's fifth opera, and by far the most popular, next to Mme. Butterfly, which probably holds first place in the affections of opera-goers. The opera is a remarkable example of Puccini's skill in adjusting both instrumental and voice effects to the sense of the story, interpreting both the characters and the situations.

The plot is gloomy and intensely tragic, following closely the Sardou melodrama, but is relieved somewhat by the beauty of the musical setting, which confirmed Puccini's place in the first rank of modern operatic composers. The three acts of the opera are crowded with sensational events and highly dramatic situations.

The work has neither introduction nor overture. The first scene occurs in the church of San Andrea, where the painter, Mario Cavaradossi, is at work on the mural decorations. Here he has been accustomed to meet his fiancée, the beautiful Floria Tosca, a singer. While awaiting her, he contemplates the Magdalene he is at work on, the face being that of the unknown beauty who had frequently prayed at the altar.

Suddenly a political refugee, Angelotti, who has just escaped from the castle, appears, recognizes his friend Cavaradossi, and asks his assistance. The painter gives him food and sends him to his (Cavaradossi's) villa, just as Tosca arrives. Her lover's confused manner arouses her curiosity, and when she sees the likeness on the easel, she is jealous. He soothes her, and ofter her departure hurries out to guide Angelotti, a annon shot from the castle meanwhile announcing he escape of the fugitive.

Scarpia and his police enter in search of the prisner, who has been traced to the church. Cavaradossi suspected as an accomplice, and Scarpia, who is ecretly in love with Tosca, plans his ruin, with a view removing from his path a dangerous rival.

FARRAR AS TOSCA

In the second act Scarpia, putting into execution his schemes, orders Mario's arrest, and when the painter is brought in, sends for Tosca and contrives that she shall hear the cries of her lover as he is being tortured to induce him to reveal Angelotit's hiding place. Unable to endure Mario's agony, she tells Scarpia where the refugee is concealed. Mario is sent to prison, and Scarpia tells Tosca that unless she looks with favor on him, her lover shall die within an hour. To save his life she consents, but demands that they be allowed to depart in safety the next day. A mock execution is planned by Scarpia, who writes out a pass for the lovers. As he gives it to Tosca, she stabs him and runs to Mario with the release.

In Act III the mock execution takes place as planned, but through Scarpia's treachery, it proves to be a real one, and Mario is killed. Tosca afterwards throws herself from the castle parapet as they attempt to arrest her for Scarpia's murder.

ACT I

SCENE-Interior of the Church of St. Andrea

Mario Cavaradossi, the painter, enters the church, where he has been at work on a Madonna. As he uncovers the portrait, the Sacristan, who is assisting Mario, is surprised to discover in the face of the painting the unknown beauty whom he had noticed of late in the church. Mario smilingly confesses that while she had prayed he had stolen her likeness for his Madonna. Then taking out a miniature of his betrothed, Tosca, he sings a lovely air in which he compares her dark beauty with the fair tresses and blue eyes of the unknown worshipper, calling it "a strange but harmonious contrast."

His musings are interrupted by the hurried entrance of a man in prison garb, panting with fear and fatigue, whom Mario recognizes as an old friend, Angelotti, a political prisoner. Mario, in response to his friend's appeal for assistance, hastily closes the outer door, and conceals Angelotti in the chapel, just as Tosca's voice is heard impatiently demanding admittance.

He admits her, but is anxious and ill at ease, fearing to intrust even Tosca with so dangerous a secret, but she notices his preoccupation and is somewhat piqued because he is not as attentive as usual. She is at first jealous and asls him if he is thinking of another woman; but soon repents, and in the charming love scene which follows endeavors to smooth his brow by planning an excursion for the morrow.

MARTIN AS MARIO-ACT I

The act closes with a Te Deum, sung in celebration of the defeat of Bonaparte, and the scene at the fall of the curtain is a most impressive one, the solemn strains of the service sounding through the church, while Scarpia kneels, apparently in reverence, but secretly plotting his diabolical crimes.

ACT II

SCENE—A Room in Scarpia's Apartments in the Farnese Palace

When the curtain rises Scarpia is shown at his supper, restless and agitated, awaiting the report of his police, who have been sent to arrest Mario and Angelotti. Hearing Tosca's voice in the apartments of the Oueen below, where she is singing at a soiree, he sends her a Scarpia loves such a conquest as thisno tender vows in the moonlight for him! He prefers taking what he desires by force, then when wearied he is ready for further conquest. This, in short, is his creed-God has created divers wines and many types of beautyhe prefers to enjoy as many of them as possible!

Mario is brought in by the police, who report that Angelotti cannot be found. Scarpia is furious, and tries to force

Mario to reveal the hiding place of the fugitive; but he refuses to speak, and is ordered into the torture chamber adjoining. Tosca comes in answer to Scarpia's summons and is told that Mario is being tortured into a confession. Unable to bear the sound of his groans, she reveals the hiding place of Angelotti.

Scarpia, in triumph, orders the torture to cease, but sends Mario to prison, telling him he must die. Tosca tries to go with him but is forced to remain.

Then begins the great scene of the opera, which Scarpia begins by offering to save Mario's life. She scornfully asks him his price, and he proposes that Tosca shall accept his attentions in order to save her lover's life. He then sings his famous Cantabile, given here in two parts.

ECURING THE DAGGER

One of the most interesting comparisons to be found in the Victor's opera list is in a hearing of these five renditions, by five famous Toscas—Melba, the Australian; Farrar and Eames, the Americans; Marcell, the Frenchwoman; and Bronzoni, the Italian, the latter record being doubled with Mario's 3d Act air.

This highly impassioned number is given its full dramatic value by Mme. Melba, whose performance of the ill-fated Floria Tosca is always an impressive one.

Farrar, in her rendition, delivers this touching appeal of the unfortunate Tosca with much pathos and simplicity. It is probably the most perfect and beautiful of all the Farrar records.

The air is also a fine test of Mme. Eames' dramatic ability, and this scene is one in which she has made one of her greatest triumphs.

The unhappy woman asks what she has done that Heaven should forsake her. Scarpia, who is watching her intently, calls her attention to the sound of drums, summoning the escort for the condemned prisoners, and demands her answer. She yields, bowing her head for shame. Scarpia is overjoyed, and when she insists that Mario shall be set free he consents, but says a

ACT III

(A terrace of San Angelo Castle, outside the prison cell of Cavaradossi. View of Rome by night)

The music of the opening act is most effective, with its accompaniment of pealing church bells, and it is splendidly played by Mr. Pryor in the Tosca Selection. This entire prelude is also given by an Italian orchestra under the direction of Sabaino, doubled with the Te Deum of Act I.

Mario at first recalls their former meetings on starlight nights in quiet gardens; then, feeling the bitter regret of loss of life and all that he holds dear, the voice rises in passages of tragical import and power as the air proceeds. The regret, the grief and the hopelessness of the situation are depicted by Caruso with intense pathos, the air closing with a sob—an effect by which this singer can effectively express the extremity of passionate grief.

In Martin's rendition this tenor is at his best, singing the lovely Puccini music with much beauty of tone. The de Gregorio record is a double-faced one, being paired with Mme. Bronzoni's Vissi d'arte.

Tosca now enters, and joyfully telling Mario he is to be free, shows him the safe conduct, telling him how she has killed Scarpia. He gazes at her with compassion and regrets that these hands—such tender and beautiful hands—should be compelled to foul themselves with a scoundrel's blood. She then explains that a mock execution has been arranged, and instructs him to fall down when the volley is fired, and when the soldiers are gone they are to escape together.

In a beautiful duet, recorded here in two parts, they rejoice in their hopes for the future.

"Now, Mario, all is safe," she cries, but is astounded that he does not obey her. She rushes to him, only to find that Scarpia had added another piece of treachery to his long list, having secretly ordered Mario to be killed. She throws herself on his body in an agony of grief.

Spoletta and soldiers now come running in and announce the murder of Scarpia; but when they attempt to arrest Tosca she leaps from the castle wall and is killed.

LA TRAVIATA

(Lah Trah-vee-ah'-tah)

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Text by Piave, founded on Dumas' "Lady of the Camelias," but the period is changed the time of Louis XIV. Score by Giuseppe Verdi. First presented in Venice, March 6, 3. First London production May 24, 1856. First New York production December 3, 1856.

Chorus of Ladies and Gentlemen, friends of Violetta and Flora. Mute Personages: Matadors, Picadors, Gypsies, Servants, Masks, etc.

Scene and Period: Paris and environs, about the year 1700.

Verdi's La Traviata is based upon a well-known play by Alexandre Dumas, La Dame camelias, familiar in its dramatic form as Camille. It is one of the most beautiful works its class, and is full of lovely melodies; while the story of the unfortunate Violetta has used many tears to be shed by sympathetic listeners.

DI AT THE TIME OF THE FIRST TRAVIATA PRODUCTION

The opera met with but indifferent success at its first production. Several ludicrous incidents aroused the laughter of the audience, the climax being reached when the Violetta (Mme. Donatelli), who happened to be very stout, declaimed in feeble accents that she was dying of consumption! This was too much for the Venetian sense of humor, and the house exploded with mirth, utterly spoiling the final scene.

The opera was then revised, eighteenth century costumes and settings being substituted for the modern ones first used;

FRANCESCO PÍAVE (1810-1876) LIBRETTIST OF TRAVIATA and the new version was produced in various cities with success, the London season being particularly brilliant.

The plot, being quite familiar, will be but briefly sketched here. Violetta, a courtesan of Paris, is holding a brilliant revel in her home. Among the guests is a young man from es to leave her gay life and retire with him to an humble apartment near Paris. After who brief months of happiness, the lovers are discovered by Alfred's father, who pleads h Violetta to release his son from his promises. She yields for his sake, and resumes her mer life in Paris. Alfred, not knowing the real cause of her desertion, seeks her out and plicly insults her. Too late he discovers the sacrifice Violetta has made, and when he arns, full of remorse, he finds her dying of consumption, and she expires in his arms.

The aria occurs at the close of the act. Violetta, wonderstruck at finding herself the object of a pure love, begins the soliloguy, E strano, saying:

Shall I dare disdain it, How wondrous! And choose the empty follies that now surround me? His words deep within my heart are graven! No love of mortal yet hath moved me.

She then sings the plaintive air, Ah, fors' è lui, and gives herself up to the spell of awakening love:

VIOLETTA: Ah, was it he my heart foretold, when in the throng of pleasure, ft have I joy'd to shadow forth one whom Oft have

The Victor owner has no fewer than five nditions of this great air to choose from and likely to be embarrassed in his attempt to choose best, but will probably compromise by selecting Melba's singing of this air, which is one of the premely beautiful songs that stand out strongly ong much that is commonplace in compositions its class, is marked not only by great brilliancy, t by dramatic fervor, and she makes a marked strast between the sadness of the prelude and forced gayety of the finale.

As the curtain rises Florg and her friends are discussing the separation of the lovers nd Flora says she expects Violetta will soon arrive with the Baron. Alfred enters, and emarking with assumed indifference that he knows nothing of Violetta's whereabouts, regins to gamble and wins heavily. The Baron appears, accompanied by Violetta, who is gitated at the sight of Alfred, but he pretends not to see her and challenges the Baron to game, again winning large amounts. Supper is announced and all leave the room except ioletta and Alfred, who linger behind. He charges her with her falseness, and, in urtherance of the promise made to Germont, she pretends to him that she loves the Baron. Alfred then loses all control over himself, and throwing open the doors, he calls to the guests o re-enter.

But there is time to purge me yet From stains that shame, confound me. Bear witness all around me That here I pay the debt!

and completes the insult by throwing at her feet the money he had just won.

At this moment Alfred's father, Germont, enters, and is horrified at the scene which conronts him. Then follows the splendid finale, one of the greatest of Verdi's concerted iumbers.

My son, where is he? No more I see him;
In thee, Alfred, I seek him; but in vain!

Alfred (aside):
Ah! yes, 'twas shameful! a deed abhorrent! A jealous fury—love's madd'ning torrent. But now that fury is all expended, Remorse and horror to me remain.

BARON: This shameful insult against this lady Offends all present; behold me ready To punish the outrage!

VIOLETTA (reciping):
Ah, lov'd Alfredo, this heart's devotion Thou canst not fathom yet-its fond emotion!

When, hereafter the truth comes o'er thee May Heaven in pity then spare thee remorse! (Germont goes out supporting Alfred, who is almost in a state of collapse. The fainting Violetta is led away by her friends, and the guests begin to disperse as the curtain falls.)

OPERA IN THREE ACTS

Words and music by Richard Wagner, the plot being derived from an old Celtic poem the same name, written by Gottfried of Strasburg, who flourished in the thirteenth tury—though Wagner has changed the narrative sufficiently to make it his own. Tristan ne of the most popular of legendary heroes and has been treated of by numerous ters, among them Tennyson, Matthew Arnold and Swinburne.

Wagner's Tristan und Isolde was first presented in Munich, June 10, 1865. First London duction June 20, 1882. First American performance in New York, December 1, 1885.

more than twenty years old, but since that time has grown steadily in popularity. Some notable productions occurred in 1895 with Sucher, Alvary, Brema and Fischer; in 1896 with the De Reszkes, Nordica and Brema; in 1901 with Ternina and Van Dyke; and in 1910 with Fremstad, Knote, Homer and Van Rooy, this being Gustave Mahler's American début as a conductor.

This great drama of love and hatred, with its wonderful music, is now quite generally admitted to be the finest of the master's operas. Written at the time of Wagner's own love affair (with Mathilde Wesendonck), it is supposed that he sought to emphasize the fact that love cannot always be bound by conventions.

This wonderful tragedy of love and fate requires for its adequate production artists who cannot only act with intelligence, but who are able to make the music itself express the tremendous tide of human passion, from fiercest hate to fiercest love, which sweeps through the opera. Such an artist is Gadski, whose Isolde is one of the greatest impersonations of recent years. She is in every way the embodiment of Wagner's heroine, and sings this wonderful music with great skill, making it express in turn tenderness, disdain, scorn and passion.

wo numbers from the opera have been sung for the Victor by Mme. Gadski, and will sidered in their proper places in the story briefly sketched here. ristan, a Cornish knight, has a quarrel with Morold, an Irish chieftain who had been collect tribute, and kills him; and after the custom of the time, sends back his which is given to his affianced, an Irish princess, Isolde. VAN DYCK AS TRISTAN

Preludio (Prelude) By La Scala Orchestra

68210 12-inch, $1.25

The first act shows the deck of the ship which is conveying Isolde and Tristan to Cornwall, she having accepted King Mark's proposal, made through his nephew. During the voyage, however, the refusal of Tristan to see her, the exultation of the sailors over the killing of Morold (which freed Cornwall from its subjection to Isolde's royal father), and detestation of the loveless marriage she is about to contract, infuriate the Princess, and she resolves to die and drag Tristan down to death with her. She tells Tristan she is aware of his crime in killing her lover, and demands vengeance. He admits her right to kill him and offers his sword, but she bids her maid, Brangäne, prepare two cups of poison from her casket. Brangäne, unwilling to see her mistress die, secretly substitutes for the poison a love potion, the effect of which is immediate, and the lovers sink into each other's arms just as the ship approaches the shore and the King arrives to claim his bride.

Act II takes place in the garden outside Isolde's chamber. The King has gone on a hunting expedition, but Brangane fears that it is merely a ruse, and thinks the King's courtier, Melot, suspects the true state of affairs. Brangane then confesses that she intentionally substituted the philtre for the poisoned cup intended for Tristan.

Bragane:
Fatal folly!
The fell pow'r of that potion!
That I framed
A fraud for once
Thy orders to oppose!

Had I been deaf and blind, Thy work were then thy death! But thy distress, Thy distraction of grief, My work has contrived them, I own it!

This confession meets with but faint reproaches from Isolde, who gives herself up wholly to the intoxication of the potion, and sings with growing exaltation:

Dein Werk (Thy Act) By Johanna Gadski, Soprano

(In German) 88165 12-inch, $3.00

ISOLDE:
Thy act?
O foolish girl!
Love's goddess dost thou not know?
The witch whose will the world obeys;
Life and death she holds in her hands,
She waketh hate into love!
The work of death
I took into my own hands;
Love's goddess saw
And gave her good commands.
Planning our fate in her own way.
How she may bend it, how she may end it,
Still hers am I solely;
What she may make me, whereso'er take me
So let me obey her wholly!

Refusing to heed Brangüne's warning, Isolde gives the signal for Tristan's coming by extinguishing the torch. He appears, and a long love scene ensues, interrupted by the return of the King, who surprises the lovers in a fond embrace. Mark bitterly reproaches his nephew, and Melot, shouting "treason," stabs Tristan, inflicting a fatal wound.

GADSKI AS ISOLDE

The third act shows Tristan dying of the wound at his castle in Bretagne, whither he has been carried by his faithful servant, Kurvenal, who has sent for Isolde, knowing that she alone can cure his master's wound by means of her healing arts.

Despairing of her coming, Tristan in his delirium tears off his bandages and is at the point of death when Isolde arrives, and dies in her arms. King Mark and his courtiers closely pursuing Isolde, now arrive and are attacked by Kurvenal, who kills Melot and is himself slain by Mark's soldiers. Mark, seeing Tristan dead and Isolde senseless on his

SCENE I-Vestibule in Aliaferia Palace

As befits a tragic work, Il Trovatore opens in an atmosphere of romance and mystery. The retainers of Count dt Luna await the arrival of their master, and to beguile the time Ferrando relates the history of the Count's childhood and the loss of his brother.

Abbietta zingara (Swarthy and Threatening)

By Torres de Luna, Bass, and La Scala Chorus

(In Italian) *62416 10-inch. $0.75

The brother, as an infant, came under the evil eye of a witch, who was seized and condemned to the stake. This witch had a daughter, who determined to avenge her mother's fate, with the result that the Count's younger son disappeared; and after the witch's burning there was discovered upon the pile of charred embers the bones of a child. This story is told in the Abbietta to a fierce rhythmical tune, expressing all shades of horror.

With two sons, heirs of fortune and affection,

Liv'd the Count in enjoyment;
Watching the younger for his safe protection
A good nurse found employment.

One morning, as the dawn's first rays were shining,

From her pillow she rose,—
Who was found, think ye, near the child reclining?

(Impressively.) Sat there a gypsy-hag, witch-like appearing;
Of her dark mysteries, strange symbols

Õf wearing.

O'er the babe sleeping—with fierce looks bending. Gaz'd she upon him, black deeds intending! Horror profound seized the nurse at that dark vision: And the dark intruder was soon expelled. Soon they found the child was failing, Soon they found the child was failing, Coming darkness appall'd him,

The hag's dark spell enthrall'd him!
(All appear horrified.)
Sought they the gypsy, on all sides turning,
Seiz'd and condemn'd her to death by burning.
One child, accursed, left she remaining, Quick to average her, no means disdaining. Thus she accomplished her dark retribution! Lost was the Count's child; search unavailing; But on the site of the hag's execution They found, 'mid the embers, The bones of a young infant. Half consumed and burning

In the second part Ferrando concludes his narrative, which is mingled with the comments of the listeners, who tell of the reputed appearance of the witch in ghostly shape.

To the voice of the narrator is added the awe-stricken whispers of the chorus, which afterwards swell into a cry of fierce denunciation. The foreboding bell and an instrumental diminuendo complete the picture, which makes a fitting conclusion to a gruesome story.

The clock strikes twelve, and with cries of "Cursed be the witch infernal!" the retainers disperse.

LEONORA:

The cloudless sky, how clear, how bright!
The moon in splendor shed her light. And all was hushed in peace around! Suddenly, on the midnight air,

In tones so sweet and thrilling, Breathing to Heav'n an earnest pray'r, My heart with deep joy filling, I heard a voice oft heard before, My long-loved knightly Troubadour!

The ladies go into the house just as the Count, who is also wooing the fair Leonora, appears to watch under her window. He has barely taken his station when the lovely song of the Troubadour is heard:

MANRICO: Lonely on earth abiding, Warring 'gainst fate's cruel chiding, Hope doth one heart implore, To love the Troubadour!

The Count is filled with rage as Manrico appears and confesses his love in song, and when Leonorg comes forth to greet her lover, the anger of di Luna bursts in a storm upon them both, in the strain with which this number opens.

The two renditions of this thrilling air, by Mme. Homer and Mme. Gerville-Réache, are st dramatic and impressive ones; while an excellent lower-priced record is furnished by ie. Mileri.

Questioned by Manrico, Azucena tells him the story of her past. In obedience to her her's last cry for vengeance, she stole the Count's young child, and threw it on the flames are her mother was consumed. But she soon discovered that in her frenzy she had troyed her own infant, and preserved the child of the noble. Wild as was the previous this proves a still more dramatic setting of the conclusion of the story. The orchestral ompaniment crashes, wails and sobs, the voice rises and falls in hatred or terror, it at last the gypsy sinks exhausted with the stress of emotion that her tale has excited.

My arm new courage gaining.
But, if, upon the fatal page
Of destiny impending,
I'm doom'd among the slain to fall,
'Gainst hostile arms contending, In life's last hour, with fainting breath. My thoughts will turn to thee Preceding thee to Heaven, will death Alone appear to me!

Quietness soon departs, for the news comes that the attacking party have captured Azucena, and are piling up faggots around the stake at which she is to be burnt. Maddened at the approaching outrage upon one whom he believes to be his mother, Manrico prepares to rush to her assistance. The air with chorus which forms the climax to this scene is full of martial fire.

ACT IV

SCENE I-Exterior of the Palace of Aliaferia

The last act brings us outside the palace of Aliaferia, wherein Manrico, defeated by di Luna's men, and the gyspy, are confined in the dungeons. Hither Leonora has wended her way to be near her lover, and she now sings the plaintive D'amor.

LEONORA:

Console his spirit failing. Let hope's soft whispers wreathing Around him, comfort breathing, Recall to his fond remembrance Sweet visions of his love; But, let no accent reveal to him The sorrows, the griefs my heart doth move!

And now comes Verdi's most famous operatic scene, the great Miserere.

Leonorg is terror-stricken at the solemn tolling of a deep-toned bell and the mournful chorus of priests chanting for the soul of a doomed prisoner.

CAMPANINI AS MANRICO

Pray that peace may attend a soul departing, Whither no care or thought of earth can follow:

Heav'nly mercy allays the pangs of parting, Look up beyond this life's delusions hollow.

Then follows an impressive series of chords in the orchestra, leading to a sobbing lament of Leonora.

> LEONORA: What voices of terror! For whom are they praying?
> With omens of fear unknown, they darken the air,

New horrors assail me, my senses are straying, My vision is dim, is it death that is near?

In upon this there breaks the beautiful air of the Troubadour, sung within the prison, followed by a joyful cry of devotion from his beloved.

> MANRICO: Ah! I have sighed to rest me; deep in the quiet grave-Sighed to rest me, but all in vain I crave. Oh fare thee well, my Leonora, fare thee well!

These fragments, first given separately, are next combined and heard together, forming a most impressive scene of touching beauty, for which the opera of Il Trovatore will ever be remembered.

The entrance of di Lung brings from Leonorg a prayer for mercy for the prisoner. The appeal is unheeded, or rather it appears to increase the triumph which belongs to the Count's vengeance. She swears to perform her promise, at the same time intending to take poison as soon as Manrico is free. Di Luna's wrath is now changed into joy, while Leonora, forgetting her own fate, is filled with happiness at the thought of the Troubadour's release. This situation gives opportunity for another wonderful duet of a most thrilling character.

This familiar duet is considered by many to be the gem of Verdi's opera, and especially when given by such artists as Caruso and Homer, it is doubly enjoyable.

Manrico is watching over the couch of Azucena, whose strength is exhausted, and who is full of vague terrors; and he endeavors to soothe her fears.

MANRICO:

f any love remains in thy bosom,

If thou art yet my mother, oh, hear me! Seek thy terrors to number,

And gain repose from thy sorrows in soothing slumber.

es, I am grief-worn and fain would rest me. But more than grief have sad dreams oppressed me;

Should that dread vision rise in slumber Rouse me! its horrors may then depart.

MANRICO:

Rest thee, oh mother! I'll watch o'er thee, Sleep may restore sweet peace to thy heart.

A fierce and avenging gypsy no longer, but a broken woman whose consuming passions of remorse and revenge have died away, she dreams of the happy days gone by.

AZUCENA (dreaming): Home to our mountains, let us return, love, There in thy young days peace had its reign: There shall thy song fall on my slumbers, There shall thy lute, make me joyous again.

MANRICO: Rest thee, my mother, kneeling beside thee,

I will pour forth my troubadour lay.

AZUCENA: O sing and wake now thy sweet lute's soft numbers,

Lull me to rest, charm my sorrows away.

BOTH: Lull { me } to rest!

Caruso sings this beautiful scene with that tenderness of voice which he can assume when he will; while Mme. Homer delivers Azucena's music with exceptional purity and charm. Altogether one of the most beautiful records in the Red Seal List.

Matters now move swiftly to a climax. Leonora arrives on the scene, bringing Manrico the news of his freedom. The joy of meeting is all too soon destroyed when the prisoner finds his liberty to have been purchased at the cost of a happiness which is to him dearer than life itself. He accuses Leonora of betraving his love.

By Ida Giacomelli, Soprano; Lina Mileri, Contralto; Gino Martinez-Patti. Tenor (In Italian) *35177 12-inch. $1.25

Here Azucena, who cares nothing for his passion, counsels flight. This gives the elements of the closing trio: Manrico's reproaches, Leonora's ineffectual protestations, and the gypsy's voice through all, singing dreamily of her mountain home. With these mingled voices dving away into soft peaceful harmonies the musical portion of the opera draws to a close.

MANRICO: Thou giv'st me life? No! I scorn it! 'Twas from my rival thou purchased thy Whence comes this power? what price has bought it? mission! Ah! thou hast sold him thy heart's affection!
Barter'd a love once devoted to me! Thou wilt not speak? oh, dark suspicion!

Leonora, who had already taken the poison, now sinks dying at Manrico's feet, and he pleads forgiveness as he learns the truth. Di Lung now enters, and furious at finding himself cheated of his promised bride, orders the Troubadour to instant execution. Manrico is taken out by the guards and beheaded.

At the moment of his death, the gypsy awakes, and not seeing Manrico, realizes that he has gone to his execution. She drags the Count to the window and cries to him: "You have killed your brother!" Di Luna utters a wild cry of remorse and falls senseless as the curtain slowly descends.

Walkure is the second in the series of music-dramas composing the Niebelung Ring, and om a popular standpoint perhaps the most melodious and pleasing. The story is beautiand compelling, the situations by turn thrilling and pathetic, while the glorious music itten by the master to accompany the adventures of his mythical personages is easily unrstood and appreciated by the average listener.

A perusal of the preceding description of the story of the Niebelung in Rhinegold age 279) will help the reader to understand more fully the Victor synopsis of Walkure.

Wotan has been warned by Erda, the Earth Goddess, that if Alberich regains the Ring the Is must perish. Brooding over this impending fate, Wotan descends to earth and weds the ldess; this union resulting in nine splendid daughters, the Walkure, who are to aid in salvation of the gods. Riding forth each day among the tumult and the strife which vail on the earth as a result of the Curse of the Ring, they carry to Walhalla, on their ng horses, the bravest of the warriors who fall in battle. These revived heroes keep mselves ready to defend Walhalla from the Niebelungs. But in order to regain the Ring, rave hero is necessary, who shall be free from the universal curse and who can take it n Fafner, now changed into a dragon the better to guard the treasure. With this in mind !an visits the earth again and weds a mortal who bears him twins, Siegmund and Sieglinde.

While these children are quite young, the brutal Hunding finds their cottage, burns it, kills the mother and carries off Sieglinde, whom he afterward forces to become his bride.

The father and son return and swear vengeance on Hunding. Wotan (known as Volse on earth) returns to Walhalla, leaving the young Siegmund to fight alone and become a self-reliant hero. This is the situation when the action begins.

The prelude represents a fearful storm in the forest, in the midst of which Siegmund rushes in exhausted, and falls by the fire. Sieglinde gives him refreshment and feels drawn to him by some strange attraction. While they are conversing, Hunding enters, and after questioning the stranger, recognizes in him his mortal enemy. He says, "Thou shalt have shelter from the storm to-night, but to-morrow thou diest!" and goes to his room, bidding Sieglinde prepare his evening drink. She does so but puts a drug in it to make him sleep soundly, and returns to Siegmund, unable to control her interest in the mysterious youth who has so strangely affected her.

Then occurs the lovely Liebeslied, the gem of this beautiful first act.

The hut, which has been in semi-darkness, is suddenly illumined by the blowing open of the great door at the back, and without can be seen the beauty of the spring night after the storm. The full moon shines in upon them, so that they see each other clearly for the first time. Siegmund, in ecstasy, rhapsodizes Spring and Love:

Win - ter stür - me wi - chen dem Won-ne-mond, in mil - dem Lich - te leuchtet der Lens. Winter storms have waned, to the winsome moon, in mild as-cen-dance smileth the Spring.

He takes her hand, seats her beside him on the rude bench, and continues:

STECHTIND: With balmy breezes, soft and soothing, Wonders weaving, on he wends, Through wood and meadow breathing. Wide and lustrous laughs his eye; In songs of birds his silv'ry voice resounds, Wondrous fragrance he outbreathes; From his living blood the loveliest flowers are blooming Leaf and spray spring forth at his voice.
With gentle sceptre's sway he ruleth the world;
Winter and storm wane as his strength awakes: By dint of his hardy striving The stoutest doors he is cleaving. Which, stubborn and strong, once held us from him' To greet his sister swiftly he flies; Thus Love the spring hath allured. Within our bosoms Love lay asleep That now laughs out to the light The bride and the sister is freed by the brother; Destroyed the walls that held them apart; Joyous meet now the youthful pair;
United are Love and Spring!

SIEGMUND AND SIEGLINDE

Although the true charm of this poetry can be realized best by those on intimate terms vith the German tongue, this excellent translation from the Ditson Wagner Lyrics for Tenor vill add to the enjoyment of the record.

Sieglinde then tells Siegmund the story of the Sword—how at her wedding a stranger had uddenly appeared and thrust into the trunk of the tree a magic sword which should belong rely to him who could take it out. The stranger had secretly told Sieglinde that no one rut Siegmund would have power to remove it.

Siegmund rises eagerly, and going to the tree withdraws the sword with a mighty effort. he reunited brother and sister embrace each other and agree to fly from the power of Hunding. The curtain falls as they pass out into the moonlit forest.

The love scenes between Sieglinde and Siegmund should be considered in their allegorical and poetical sense, and not judged by modern ethical standards. Wagner intended this episode to represent the union of Love and Spring.

ACT II

SCENE I-A Wild and Rocky Pass

Wotan and his favorite Valkyrie daughter, Brünnhilde, are discovered in full armor. He tells her to go to the rescue of the Volsung (Siegmund), whom Hunding is pursuing.

WOTAN: Make ready thy steed, warrior maid, Soon. will come battle and strife; Brünnhilde, haste to the field, Give aid to Volsung to-day!

The Valkyrie eagerly prepares for her flight, and sings her famous Battle Cro.

Gadski is always a statuesquely beautiful Brünnhilde, and her voice glorifies this music, in which many persons, insensible to the poetic depth and power of the story, hear only noisy declamation. In this first scene especially, she brings into beautiful relief the joyful nature of the Valkyrie, and her cries are full of eager, happy vitality. Some idea of the difficult nature of this famous Battle Cry may be had from these few measures

BRÜNNHILDE:

Ho-yo-to-ho! Ho-yo-to-ho! Hei-aha!
But listen, father! care for thyself;
For a storm o'er thee will break;
Fricka, thy busy wife, approacheth in her ram-impelled car.

Ha! how she swings her golden whip!
The frighten'd goats are fainting with fear, Wheels rattling and rolling whirl her here to the fight.

At such a time away I would be, Tho' my delight is in scenes of war! Take heed that defeat be not thine, For now I must leave thee to fate!

Brünnhilde is right—Wotan is in for a scolding as Fricka now appears in an extremely bad humor. Hunding has appealed to her, the guardian of marriage, for help, and she insists that Siegmund be punished. Wotan protests that this true love romance should not be interfered with, but the wrathful wife reminds him that the whole difficulty is but the result of his own infidelity, and he is finally forced to swear that Siegmund shall be punished.

Fricka then triumphantly calls to Brünnhilde that Wolan has further instructions for her. Brünnhilde finds her father in deep dejection, and when questions him he confides to her his efforts ad a hero who shall banish the curse, but his quest has been in vain. He bids her that victory goes to Hunding. She protests, he sternly commands obedience and leaves

Siegmund and Sieglinde now appear, fleeing the wrath of Hunding. Sieglinde's strength failed her, and she falls down exhausted. nhilde comes to the lovers and tells Siegmund aust die. He scorns her prophecy and says sword will not fail him. Hunding's voice is heard, and in a sudden wave of sympathy nhilde resolves to defend the young lovers.

Siegmund rushes to meet Hunding, and amid less of lightning the warriors can be seen in ally combat, while Brünnhilde is visible flying re Siegmund and protecting him. Wotan, ng the situation, then appears and causes mund to fall by his opponent's sword.

The Fantasie contains some of the finest portions of this second opera of the Niebelina-Ring. At first we hear the motive of The Sword full band, followed by the tumulturous Ride of the Valkyries, one of the most tremendous spositions in existence. The wild shouts of the goddesses as they ride their winged ids through the air to the Rock, the warlike cries of Britanhilde and the neighing of the thorses are splendidly portrayed.

A skillful modulation brings us to the last act, and a part of the great stene between tan and Britishilds is given, beginning with the wonderful Siegfried, Chardian of the Sward me and asks her sisters to shield her from the wrath Wotan, who is riding in pursuit; but they dare n help her. She then bids Sieglinde flee alone, tellin her that she is destined to bear a son who shall l the hero Siegfried.

REUNNHILDE:

Fly then swiftly, and speed to the east!
Bravely determine all trials to bear.
Hunger and thirst, thorns and hard ways,
Smile through all pain while suffering pangs!
This only heed and hold it ever: The highest hero of worlds hidest thou, O wife, In sheltering shrine! (She produces the pieces of Siegmund's sword from under her breastplate and hands them to Sieglinde.) For him keep these shreds of shattered swordblade; From his father's death-field by fortune I saved them: Anon renewed this sword shall he swing; And now his name I declare—Siegfried, of vict'ry the son!

SIEGLINDE:

O marvelous sayings! maiden divine! What comfort o'er my mind thou hast cast!
For his sake I live and save this belov'd one!
May my blessing frame future reward!
Fare thee well! Be Sieglinde's sorrow thy weal! Be Sieglinde's sorrow thy weal!
(She hastens away. The rocky peak is enveloped in black thunder-clouds; a fearful tempest roars up from the back; between the peals of thunder Wotan's voice is heard.)

The Valkyries hurriedly conceal Brunnhilde in their midst as Wotan springs from his hors in a furious rage.

WOTAN:

Where is Brünnhilde? Where the rebellious one?

Dare ye to veil her from Wotan's vengeance? (Brunnhilde comes out from the group and faces her father, saying):

BRÜNNHILDE:

Here stand I, father, to suffer my sentence!

WOTAN:

I sentence thee not; thou hast shaped the stroke for thyself. Wish-maid art thou no more. One time a Valkyrie wert thou, Remain henceforth but merely thyself!

BRÜNNHILDE (violently startled):
Thou disownest me? Thine aim I divine!

From heavenly clans art thou excluded, Bann'd, degraded from thy blessed degree; For broken now is our bond; exiled for aye Art thou banished from bliss.

He then tells her that she must be put in a deep sleep, and shall be wakened by the first man who passes. She pleads with him in a beautiful appeal.

Was it so base to warp thy command, that

For me such debasement must shape?
Was't such dishonor what I have wrought

That it should rob me of honor for aye?
O speak, father! see me before thee: soften thy wrath;
Wreak not thine ire, but make to me clear the mortal Guilt that with cruel firmness compels thee to Cast off thy favorite child!

Wotan, deeply moved, softens his stern decree, and consents that she shall be won only by a great hero who can brave the flames with which she is to be surrounded. He then bids her farewell in the splendid Abschied.

Wotan's Farewell

WOTAN:
Farewell, my brave and beautiful child!
Thou once the light and life of my heart!
Farewell! Farewell! Farewell!
Loth I must leave thee; no more in love
May I grant thee my greeting;
Henceforth my maid no more with me rideth,
Nor waiteth wine to reach me!
When I relinquish thee, my beloved one,
Thou laughing delight of my eyes,

Thy bed shall be lit with torches more brilliant Than ever for bridal have burned! Fiery gleams shall girdle the fell, With terrible scorchings scaring the timid, Who, cowed, may cross not Brünnhilde's couch For one alone freeth the bride; One freer than I; the God!

Brünnhilde sinks, wrapt and transfigured, on Wotan's breast; he holds her in a long embrace. She throws her head back again and gazes with solemn emotion into her father's eyes.

WOTAN:
Those eyes so lustrous and clear,
Which oft in love I have kissed,
When warlike longings won my lauding,
Or when with lisping of heroes leal thy honied lips were inspired;
Those effulgent, glorious eyes,
Whose flash my gloom oft dispelled,
When hopeless cravings my heart discouraged,

Or when my wishes t'wart wordly pleasure from wild warfare were turning—
Their lustrous gaze lights on me now as my lips imprint this last farewell!
On happier mortal here shall they beam;
The grief-suffering god may never henceforth behold them!
Now heart-torn, he gives thee his kiss,
And taketh thy godhood away!

He imprints a long kiss on her eyes; she sinks back in his arms with closed eyes, her owers gently departing. He nderly helps her to lie upon a w mossy lounge, closes her elmet and completely covers er with the great steel shield the Valkurie. He slowly noves away, then directs the point of his spear toward a uge stone, and summons the God of Fire.

WOTAN: Loki, hear! Listen and heed! Appear, wavering spirit, and spread me thy Fire round this fell!
Loki! Loki! Appear!

A stream of fire issues from the stone, which swells o an ever brightening glow of flame; bright flames surfound Wotan, leaping wildly.

THE PLOT

The story of Tell, the distinguished patriot, and chief instrument of the revolution h delivered the Swiss cantons from the German yoke in 1207, has been taken by ni for the theme of one of his most admired operas, the dramatic interest being itened by the introduction of love scenes and other episodes.

n the libretto by Jouy and Marast Gessler is endowed with a beautiful and amiable hter, Matilda, who has been saved from a watery grave by Amold, son of Melcihal, the irch of the country, and a determined opponent of the tyrannies of Gessler. As a r of course, mutual attachment ensues, and leads to the troubles which might have been ted from so ill-sorted a connection.

At the opening of the opera we learn that an agent of Gessler's has attempted an outon the daughter of a herdsman, and been slain by her father, Leuthold. Obliged to fly puntry after this act of vengeance, it becomes necessary to cross Lake Lucerne while veather is so adverse that none of the boatmen will row the old man across the estuous waters. William Tell finally undertakes the rescue, and by so doing incurs the al hatred of Gessler.

As time progresses, the people become more and more disaffected; and the father mold, suspected of inciting them to acts of insubordination, is seized by Gessler and ited. The son's feelings are thus subjected to a e conflict between his love for Matilda, Gessler's ater, his duty to his country, and his desire to avenge ather's death. He, however, renounces his love, joins the band of patriots now marshaled under im Tell. Events are brought to a climax by Gessler ng a cap to be elevated on a pole, and requiring ussers-by to bow to it. Tell firmly refuses to do so, s thereupon subjected to the ordeal of the apple, being red, under pain of death, to shoot at an apple placed e head of his son. Although the distance was consids, he was able to strike the apple off without injuring nild. The tyrant, perceiving another arrow concealed Tell's cloak, asks him for what purpose it was ind. To which he boldly replies, "To have shot you heart, if I had killed my son!" The enraged governor s him to be hanged; but the Swiss, animated by fortitude and patriotism, flew to arms, attacked and sished Gessler, who was shot by Tell. Matilda and d were united, and the independence of the country CAUTIN-BERGER ssured.

THE TYBANT GESSLED

OVERTURE

This great overture, which Berlioz has called a symphony in four parts, is a fitting prelude to such a noble and serious work, and is full of beautiful contrasts.

The first movement is reposeful, expressing the solitude of Nature, and is followed by the contrasting Storm, a majestic and awe-inspiring tone picture. To the Storm succeeds a beautiful pastoral with a delicious melody for the English horn, and as Berlioz says, "with the gamboling of the flute above this calm chant producing a charming freshness and gayety." As the last notes of the melody die away, the trumpets enter with a brilliant fangayety." As the last notes of the melody die away, the tru fare on the splendid finale, a fitting climax to a great work.

The young man hesitates between duty to his country and his love for the tyrant's daughter, but finally casts his lot with Tell, and goes to bid a last farewell to Matilda.

The festival now begins, but is interrupted at intervals by the sound of hunting horns, showing that Gessler and his huntsmen are in the mountains near by. The young couples are wedded, and all are rejoicing in their happiness when the festival is rudely interrupted by Leuthold, a shepherd, who rushes in crying, "Save me from the tyrant." He explains that one of Gessler's officers had abducted his daughter, and to rescue her he had killed the villain. He begs the fishermen to row him across the lake to safety. They refuse, not daring to offend the tyrant, and because of the storm which is raging. Tell appears, rushes to the boat with Leuthold and puts out on the raging lake just as the soldiers of Gessler appear. Baffled of their revenge, they burn the village, devastate the fields, and strike down the aged Melcthal.

ACT II

SCENE—A deep valley in the Alps. On the left the Lake of the Four Cantons. Twilight

Matilda appears and muses upon her love for Arnold. Her lover now joins her, and an effective love scene ensues, which is interrupted by the approach of Tell and Walter, and Matilda departs. Tell has seen the young man talking to the daughter of his mortal enemy, and accuses him of being false to the Swiss. Arnold confesses that he loves Matilda, but says he will renounce her if his country demands the sacrifice.

They then break to Arnold the news that Gessler has put his father to death, and feelings of vengeance drive from his mind all thought of Matilda. In a fine trio the three patriots call upon Heaven to aid their righteous cause.

Berlioz writes of his attempt to analyze this great trio: "What! Analyze the awful despair of a son who learns his father is brutally slain? Note the details of a flute or second violin passage! No,—I can only cry, 'Wonderful, superb, heart-rending!'"

The band, under Mr. Pryor's masterly baton, has played this brilliant music in a manner which brings out all its beauties.

Gessler, who, with much satisfaction, has been watching the populace bow to the cap which he has had placed on a pole as a symbol of his authority, suddenly notices that Tell and his son fail to pay honor to the standard. He orders them seized and brought before him, and when he is told that Tell is the man who aided Leuthold to escape, his rage is intensified. He asks if the boy is Tell's son, and when Tell replies, "My only son," a fiendish idea strikes the tyrant. He orders Tell to shoot an apple from the boy's head on pain of instant death for both. Tell refuses, but Jemmy urges his father to obey, saying, "Father, remember your skill! Fear not, I will not move!

Tell embraces his boy, and selecting an arrow, manages to conceal another in his coat. He casts a fierce look at the tyrant, then aims with care and strikes the apple fairly in the centre. When he realizes Jemmy is safe, Tell faints and the concealed arrow is discovered. "For whom was the second arrow?" de-"For you, tyrant, if I had harmed my child!" mands Gessler.

Gessler then orders both put to death, but Matilda, who has entered, demands the life of the boy and takes him under her protection. Tell is taken to prison amid the curses of the Swiss.

Mine eyes first saw the light,
Once so belov'd, yet now thy halls,
Bring mis'ry to my aching sight.

In vain I call; no father's greeting, Which fancy now to me's repeating, Will e'er again these ears be meeting, Then home once lov'd, forevermore, farewell!

Tamagno brought all his strength and vitality to the part of Arnold, singing it superbly, and this fine air is given with wonderfully truthful and impressive declamation.

A company of Swiss patriots enter hurriedly and tell Arnold of the events at Altorf. He calls on them to follow him to the rescue of Tell, and departs in the direction of the capital.

WILLIAM TELL'S FLIGHT

SCENE 11—Lake of Four Cantons. A Storm is Gathering

Tell's wife is resting here on her way to demand of Gessler her husband and son. She hears her son's voice and is overjoyed to see him brought to her by Matilda. She clasps him in her arms, and anxiously inquires for her husband. Matilda says that Tell has been removed from Altdorf Prison, and taken across the lake. She has no sooner spoken than Tell appears, having escaped from the boat and sent an arrow through the tyrant's heart. Arnold and the patriots appear, rejoicing that Gessler has been slain and that the Swiss are free once more.

The storm breaks, and as if to announce liberty to Switzerland the sun bursts forth, revealing the glittering, snowy peaks of the Alps in all their dazzling beauty. An invocation to Freedom comes from every throat:

TELL:

Let us invoke, with hearts devout,
Thee, oh Freedom, to sway each heart!
Thou gav'st us pow'r to strike and conquer,
Do thou ne'er depart!

Thou gav'st us pow'r to strike and conquer! We are free, do thou ne'er depart!
